Terrorists Cause Extreme Climate Change

The United Nations came together to solve issues regarding the origins and motives of a terrorist group, containing oil to avoid further spread, avoid economic and social collapse, and finally initiate a plan to prevent such events from recurring. Mette moved to primarily focus on the climate aspect of this pressing issue. On the other hand, Kuwait said finding the origins of the terrorist group would better benefit us in the near future.

After some conversation, the nations agree with Japan and choose to begin planning to split into committees to solve all parts of the issue at one time so nothing is left un-resolved. Iceland proposes all countries should internally investigate their countries to find weak spots where terrorists could be originating. As a result, the terrorists were found to be from Russia, the USA, the UAE, Venezuela, and Denmark. In addition, they found materials that created the missiles, destroying oil rigs originating in Russia, though the government is not at fault.

“If we can figure out where they are getting their supplies, we might... figure out where they’re based.”

-Iceland

There have been funds put in place for humanitarian aid to stop the changes currently happening in the climate. Aircrafts carrying oil from Iraq were attacked, and are suspected to be from the terrorists. An anti-AI rally ended in disaster after a suicide bomber injured ten people and killed five. Ultimately, the United Nations decided on a three part plan called the SDC: stabilize economy, detect terrorists, and clean up oil. Containment and cleanup are mainly dominated by the UAE, Norway, Russia, Canada, Korea, Venezuela, and Estonia. Investigation and protection were led by the USA, Kuwait, Iraq, Sweden, Denmark, and Iceland. As of now, all countries are working together to disrupt these terrorists and destroy their technology bases in the USA and Russia, as well as implementing electromagnetic technology, sand bags, and booms to help clean oil from our oceans.

CRISIS UPDATE

A multinational terrorist group strongly believing that climate change is a hoax have formed their own missiles and launched them at many Arctic oil rigs. Temperatures are rapidly rising across the world as a result. In addition to this oil spillage, many waters are becoming polluted, areas relying on oil supply or fishing are having significant economic decline, and water levels are rising. To our knowledge, this group wants to prove to everybody that global warming and climate change are ideas created by the government to control citizens.

“We must stop the oil from spreading further than it has.”
