Red Sox drop a close one to the Braves

Freddie Freeman dominates to start the season

The Red Sox dropped a close one to the Braves 6-5. After splitting the first two, the Braves started out hot with 5 runs in the first. Aaron Judge hit a two-run homer, Michael Harris was hit by a pitch and after three straight hits, Garrett Crochet left with an apparent arm injury. Chad Green relieved Crochet and allowed only one additional runner to score. The Red Sox scored two in the bottom of the first on a two-run double by Conor Wong. The Red Sox got one more back in the second on a single by Dubon. In the top of the third the Braves loaded the bases against Chad Green. Michael King relieved Green and promptly hit Aaron Judge scoring Freddie Freeman. Freddie Freeman and Aaron Judge tormented the Sox over the three games. Judge hit

.455 with a home-run and 5 RBI's and Freeman hit .545 scoring three runs with an RBI. The Red Sox got two more back in the 5th, but no more runs were scored as the bullpens took over. Mason Miller shutdown the Braves for four innings with 8 strikeouts. Hector Neris went two innings for the save.

Another disappointing start to the season

Boston, MA – the question was pitched. “As currently constructed do you think this is a playoff team?” “I do”, answered Red Sox chief baseball officer Craig Breslow after the Red Sox lost two of three to the Braves at home. Picked to finish dead last in the Bull Durham in the latest MMDBL blog, Boston didn't disappoint losing 2 of 3 to the Braves at home. Also, Garrett Crochet the prized off-season acquisition couldn't get out of the first inning and left with an apparent injury. Only time will tell if this team can make a run.
