Our community is committed to generosity

For the past 25 years, we have helped our neighbors turn their generosity into meaningful assistance for those suffering from hunger and food insecurity.

Unleashing the generosity from every corner of our community.

Our community truly bands together to help those suffering from food insecurity. This year, we will distribute weekly boxes of food that often total 40 pounds or more (over a million pounds total for the year) to struggling families; serve hot meals to thousands of unhoused friends and neighbors; help to fill school backpacks with food for children to bring home for the weekend. It all comes from local stores and retailers; restaurants and caterers; organic farmers; faith-based communities. And of course, our partnership with the Atlanta Community Food Bank, Second Helpings Atlanta, Goodr, the Sandwich Brigade, and Bagel Rescue. All total, we work with over 30 retail, restaurant, and non-profit partners to garner the food to serve over 20,000 families this year.

The parable of the mustard seed - the smallest of seeds that grows into a tree so large that birds nest in its branches - is a metaphor used in multiple traditions to demonstrate, in part, how little things can become big things with faith and love.

THCA demonstrates this every day: A dime turns into a pound of food. A dollar provides a hot meal to many. The unused food from a catering company is combined with the leftover bread from a bakery and added to the unused groceries from a supermarket and, combined with the efforts of dozens of volunteers, suddenly 150 households have food for a week!

Because of the dream of a few 25 years ago, the generosity of many has been unleashed to help thousands today.
