

Construction Clean up at the Newly Renovated DIA

American Carpet Care & Janitorial preaches the importance of orchestrated final cleaning to every General Contractor we meet. Our recent effort to open the DIA for their opening Gala fundraiser last weekend enriched not only our staff but the operation efforts to unveil a spectacular expansion & renovation that was 6 years in the making.

Organized chaos. Amid the dozen trades setting up for the televised event that consisted of stage & tent erectors, furniture movers, sound & lighting set-ups, floral designers, artists, performers, musicians and caterers, our task was to eliminate post construction dust, polish acres of marble, clean all store fronts & windows, pressure wash the front entrance and of course, vacuum the red carpet.

Many projects come and go, but few will leave an impression as our experience at the DIA. We do get to go behind the scenes of many projects, but non other has given our staff, young and old, the opportunity to relive memories of the DIA and, for some, experience their first visit. We like to inspire our younger staff members by teaching them diligence, a strong work ethic and the appreciation of the good things that the world has to offer. This project was priceless in the enrichment presented before us coupled with the satisfaction of achieving success in an assignment of such critical responsibility.

The DIA staff of directors, security and housekeeping team treated us as one of their own and showed their appreciation with every smile and hello. We canvassed the 657,000 sf building with our equipment in teams of ten and twelve over a five day period. 315 man hours later, we were rolling out the back with our mop buckets as the guests in black tie were arriving.

Our philosophy is that cleaning is an art. Not everyone is an artist. Please consider the importance of final cleaning the next time your project is ready to be delivered and call on American Carpet Care & Janitorial. We have a passion for construction, an eye for detail and we make every trades work look good.
