Zheng "Andy" Liu

Attorney at Aptum Law
San Francisco Bay Area

Summary

I counsel hundreds of domestic and international businesses. I believe in zealous representation of client's interests and executing legal strategies as a means to achieve business goals. For example, we secure intellectual property rights for clients so that the clients can sell their product or service in ways that they would like to or can prevent their competitors from selling the same or the similar. For another example, we use IP assets a client holds to defend the client against not only IP infringement claims but also commercial claims, such as breach of contract or construction lien.

Trivia:

- drafted the first patent application on Google's Gmail III technology;
- obtained a fast-tracked patent for an Iowa small business, which generated approximately $1.5 million licensing fee and $6.5 million venture capital investment for the company;
- obtained a patent relating to online & offline dating in less than 100 days after filing, weeks before the dating app was made available on app store;
- obtained several patents relating to ride-sharing based on technologies from the 80's disclosed by a small call-a-cab company in Arizona;
- obtained a patent for a client within 6 months, providing the client much-needed negotiation leverage, which was used to fend off a trademark infringement claim;
- obtained a patent relating to remote check deposit using smartphone based on technologies about reading credit card's IC chip;
- counseled client on using copyright registration as leverage to settle a commercial breach of contract dispute before and after arbitration proceedings;
- counseled client on using trademark and copyright registration as leverage to settle claims by general contractors for approximately $300,000 worth of work allegedly done for CES 2018; and

- many patents I obtained are either being asserted or generating business and legal leverage.
