

Around World

Bare still trees asleep in the early morn
As the moon above glistens sparkling in the dark
Watching below the world turn and turn and turn
Around each century and century and century
Snow moist and white covers the still green evergreens
With the most detailed sumptuous sculptures of nature
The huge wide homogeneous branches are web like
Extending out limp to take a break till spring
When the trees will soon be incrustated with young leaves
Bringing new life with an amazing swirl of activity
Into this peaceful solitude the birds emerge flying
Calling their relatives and begin to start an early morning
Nothing stops them as they sing to each other to be ready
Their work of the day is to look for food in this barren world
They don't stop
Even though they are so many life threatening hazards
Each morning they go on
They know their life depends on it
What an example to man

Renata Dawidowicz

