We also may use software tools such as JavaScript to measure and collect information from sessions including length, page response times, download errors, page interactions etc. We collect this information from all users, normally through automated means.

Cookies and Pixel Tags

Cookies are bits of information websites may send to a users Internet browser and can then be stored on the hard drive. Cookies act as identifiers of computers. Cookies do not identify the visitor, just the computer that a visitor uses to access our site. The only personal information a cookie can contain is information you supply. A cookie can't read unrelated data off your hard drive. A pixel tag, also known as a clear GIF or web beacon, is an invisible tag placed on certain pages of the Website but not on your computer. When pages containing pixel tags are accessed, they generate a generic notice. Pixel tags usually work in conjunction with cookies in order to identify when a certain computer visits a particular page. If you turn off cookies, the pixel tag will simply detect an anonymous Website visit and certain features of the Website may not be available.
