

America 2.0

A White Paper by John Parker II

“I fear that foreign bankers with their craftiness and tortuous tricks will entirely control the exuberant riches of America and use it systematically to corrupt the modern civilization. They will not hesitate to plunge the whole of Christendom into chaos in order that the earth should become their inheritance”

-Otto Von Bismark
Chancellor, 2nd German Reich
1878

Prologue

I wanted Trump for president in 2016, in 2020 I wasn't feeling great about it, Trump hadn't done anything good or bad in 4 years, but Delaware has more corporations than people and more Senators than Congressmen, I figured just stick with the guy in office. Call came back for Biden and I felt let down, but I felt that way anyway, Trump had been like every other president of my life, I just went back to my life.

Not everyone did though, and that's good, I didn't think this country was capable of something like that anymore, January 6th is what this country is founded on and it has been a long time, indeed. The day ended with mixed results ultimately breaking down into more or less what I think a 20th anniversary frat party would look like, but anything is better than nothing. The first big concert I ever went to was Oz Fest, I was 14, it takes me a couple bands to work up the nerve, but come back to the small stage and hit the mosh pit. I fight my way through and make it to the front, only to get crushed against the gate. That's how you learn though, and it was still bad ass, I made it to the front and they never got me off my feet, even when I kind of passed out a little bit. Stuff like that happens every day.

January 6th 2021 wasn't just any day though, and Washington DC isn't just any city and here's the thing, this is what people still don't understand, the capital was taken. It was a success on the ground, there just wasn't any formal ceremony. We've spent 80 years going through the motions and virtue signaling, and then when there's actually a moment to ice- it's almost like the expectation was to fire a blank, which is what the day turned out to be. Joe Biden was sworn in two weeks later, and now Trump is back in office, which is exactly where we started...

But for January 6...

There's two narratives from that day, one is that it was a violent attack and an affront on our democracy, the other is that it was a stolen election and then a peaceful protest. Both are wrong, but I was wrong too, bc there are still Americans here.

1 - Ancient Rome English Law & Pax Americana

“In framing a government which is to be administered by men over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself. A dependence on the people is, no doubt, the primary control on the government”

-James Madison, “Federalist Paper 51” February 8, 1788

Government Taxes & War

Is government good or bad? What about taxes? Everyone knows taxes are bad, right? It’s a trick question, the taxes they cut usually go to stuff worth investing in, the taxes they don’t cut, proof of who runs our government. Taxes aren’t good or bad, our tax system is an utter mess, but the solution isn’t no taxes. What about war? Is war bad? We forget this now, but we could have lost world war 2.

We didn’t lose world war 2 though, we choose victory, Imperial Japan attacked us and 5 days later Nazi Germany declared war on us. Within 5 days in the middle of the great depression we found ourselves in a two front war against the greatest army and greatest navy the world had ever seen.

And we annihilated both of them.

Today we can’t even handle China and Russia, the very countries we saved from Germany and Japan, and we really should have just let the Nazi’s have the Soviets, notice how much life that would have saved, but Germany declared war on us, there’s only one honest option at that point, so we showed Germany how America makes war, and what do people think? Did we show Japan how America bombs an island or what?

World war 2 was bad for the other guys, I can live with that though.

War is not good or bad, war is an extension of statecraft. Is foreign affairs good or bad? With the presidents we pick you’d think that foreign policy is the worst thing ever, but it’s actually the reason state exists. These of course are questions that don’t have any answers, agencies, embassies, offices, institutions, state departments, these things are not good or bad they are just the elements of civilization. If you think about it, taxes should be the best money anyone spends. When there’s something wrong with how tax money is collected and spent, it’s a sign of much deeper issues, but cutting taxes won’t fix it.

Bureaucracy’s always get scapegoated, but bureaucracy is just the civilian arm of military, ours are underfunded and poorly designed bc we let corporations mettle in our government, and then yes agencies and jobs get entrenched and start operating for the purpose of their own continued existence. The whole thing is a mess, but bureaucracy done well is good, state capacity is good, good infrastructure pays for itself. Our bureaucracies are bad, but the solution to red tape isn’t no government, it’s not more government, it’s our government.

The Fugazi Age

A country without healthcare in the 21st century is not a leading nation, people have taken to the term “Global South” but it doesn’t mean anything, not every country in the southern hemisphere is the same, just like the “Western Hemisphere” we give ourselves so much credit that we miss very obvious facts. The United States is not a first world country anymore, it’s more appropriate to call us a second world country. We won ww2 which bought us 20 years and now our lead is gone. China recently caught up to us and they’re already lapping us in a few key areas. Another very concerning piece of evidence to us not being a first world nation is the collection of con-men and cocksuckers we have leading our tech sector. We’re a joke, China could never be Imperial Japan, yet we were more than Japan but now we’re less than China.

We’re all complicit in this, we, us, the American people, we are responsible for the government we empower. Hamas is the ruling regime in Gaza, Hamas didn’t attack Israel, Gaza attacked Israel, so Israel invaded them, simple as that. We no longer can continue humoring anything other than the simple real truth. It’s on Gaza, and it’s not even our war. Israel isn’t 100% trustworthy but they are an ally. Gaza choose to attack Israel and now the people of Gaza continue to empower Hamas. Gaza has democratically chosen exactly what they have, the journalists are wrong, the world doesn’t need more sand niggers anyway.

Everyone is accountable for their government and their society, we spend more on healthcare and get less for it and that’s just the tip of the iceberg. It’s on us, we are responsible for accepting the unacceptable. Social Security was invented by Otto Von Bismark, managed right the SSA would be like the college endowments that make money and have a surplus to cover itself. Social Security would pay for itself if it wasn’t run by businessmen who want to plunder it. The reason social security is headed towards insolvency is the same reason all the banks were illiquid/insolvent in 2008, it’s also the same reason they were given a trillion dollars of our money, even the insurance company went under, why even have insurance? Our government is run by people less than qualified for their positions.

The asset managers and bankers that were at fault for 2008 don’t just work closely with our government, they are the government, they are the people who board the fed and treasury, Black Rock under performs the market, they clean up bc they write the policies and regulate themselves, it’s called regulatory capture and it’s corruption, not tolerable. The hedge funds get interest free loans and grants from the federal government. We get robbed on both ends. It’s not actually a left/right thing, it’s ruling class/labor force, they buried us in 2008, both parties are at fault, we’re ruled from above.

The people leading our policy are failures, they succeed at the expense of our system, the whole thing is a fugazi, we have more wealth inequality today than the gilded age, we have no middle class. Gilded means gold plated, they were calling it what it was, we need to get back to calling things what they are, the goal is the truth no more, no less. It shouldn’t be controversial to say that the baby boom generation has been an abject failure, it will be more controversial but is no less true to say liberalism is equally as failed.

Liberalism is an ass backwards bisexual transgender retard, that got into Harvard bc it was legacy, graduated to grade inflation and now makes our policy. We have exactly the sum total of 80 years of US policy.

Right on schedule....

The Cycles of History

John Glubb's "the fate of empires" takes a broad scope of history to show the rise and fall patterns of all empires, every empire charts the same course, it's amazing how consistent it is. Ray Dalio's "the principles for dealing with the changing world order" and Neil Howe's books on his fourth turning theories are more detailed treatments. They all have stuff on youtube too.

The bottom line is that the shelf life for empires is about 250 years, global reserve currencies last about 80, and if you look at the history, it's mind blowing how synchronized it is. Our founders studied a lot of history when founding this nation, it was also expected that we would last somewhere between 200-300 years under the first republic.

In 1944 the US held the Brenton Woods conference which created the IMF, World Bank and established the US Dollar as the global reserve currency. We subsequently went on to win world war 2, and thus we exported the economic system that created the great depression packaged with our own WW2 social justice propaganda.

Capitalism did not defeat fascism, our industrial labor force outproduced Germany's, we didn't defeat the Third Reich bc of Howard Hughes and Robert Taft, we actually defeated them despite a ruling class of war profiteers like IBM and Henry Ford. Who are we kidding when we tolerate and propagate our ruling classes false narrative? Capitalism didn't defeat fascism, we defeated the Nazi's from the factory floors and on the front lines, and we weren't there for human rights or social justice or anything like that, we didn't give a fuck about their Jews and we didn't give a fuck about their Germans, the Nazi's declared war on us and we fucked their asses up.

War might not be good or bad, but America sure is good at war. We used to be that nation, now we don't even have one, but hour glasses run empty are a revolution away from being chalk full.

Two Puppet State

The reason we have visceral reactions to war, taxes, police, courts, bureaucracy, banks, is we have been conditioned for predictable responses. In simple terms, we've been told what to think and we really have. We're a social species, no one is above being told what to think, "socialism" is enough to make some people jump out of their seats, that's bc we have a capitalist ruling class. Spoiler: communism is a failed system too, I'm not advocating for communism, but our capitalist ruling class isn't actually all that they advertise themselves as being either, both systems are failures, no one sees that though and no one even knows what socialism is, but we react. Our capitalist class has sold us out, they have us dumb, docile and predictable.

It's not bad that we work off each other, humans understand our world in relation to each other. The problem is we have two echo chambers that are wrong about everything. We fight about things that are non issues (or should be non issues) and don't even care about the major crises of our day. Just the interest on the national debt exceeds our defense budget, which is already bloated from corruption and fraud bc our weapons contractors are gay south Africans, everything we do is backwards, we have outlets that lead no where, we take action that amounts to nothing, it's crowd control, we're defused, depoliticized and immobilized.

Both sides have taken what they were selling hook line and sinker and it's not coming back on its own. The system isn't actually broken, this is exactly what the ruling class wants, we are conquered, divided and ruled by people who don't know they're undeserving. We need to not listen to any more of their drivel, they are failed, and America deserves better.

Both parties have been in power, had majorities, they both have supportive journalism and institutions yet neither party ever fixes anything, that is no accident, in a mature system every mistake is by design. We are a subjugated, indoctrinated population fighting over meaningless stuff, our two parties work off each other perfectly. The bars of our prison aren't even gold anymore and we still don't see what this is. We're not one election away, it's not one issue, person, party, or group, it's our whole system. The rat race finishes where it starts and we're so busy competing in it that we don't even realize that it's an endless maze. There's no system way out of the system, it is DOA, broken, flat lined.....

The numbers are staggering; 93% of elections are won by the bigger campaign spender, and multiple studies all come back with numbers in the 90's. It's over 90% of the public is ignored when legislation is written. Those are real results from serious studies, what is it that people think can't happen here? It probably already did.

Two parties, everyone else locked out, wholesale campaigning, unlimited funding. It doesn't matter which party is in power, it's all the same and that's the sophistication of the design. We have a regular cycle of conflicts, disappointment, disinterest, hope, excitement, failure again. It's 2 and 4 year stream of alternating elections with perfect parody, but it's nothing but pageantry, ceremony, we have no political influence. We fight enemies across when we're ruled from above. Both parties are the left and right puppets of the same corporate master.

In 2010 the Citizens United vs FEC decision finished what started with Buckley v. Valeo in 1976, Mitch McConnell is such a fucking faggot, he actually said that was a good defense of the first amendment. Freedom of speech is supposed to be the ultimate leveler to the influence of wealth. Truth to power, power to rule.

McConnell controlled the GOP Jpac money, he was the republican party. I'm not saying the democrats are better, I'm actually saying they're exactly the same and that's the point, both parties might look different but they're co-equal, the republican party is worthless too. It doesn't matter which party you vote for, you voted wrong, every election is stolen. 2010 is the latest we can consider ourselves to have had political influence, but practically it was DOA just to get to 2008.

You could date the death of democracy a lot of places but I see it as 1992 when Bill Clinton executed the unions for a couple terms in office, a lot of people don't remember this but NAFTA was Reagan's in the '76 primary's, NAFTA was a bipartisan bill from a single ruling class and don't let the industrialists off the hook, those companies choose to pick up and off shore at the expense of their American labor force, the greatest in the world, it was the American labor force is who defeated Germany and Japan, economic output, production, true real meaningful heavy lifting, happens on the ground. We let our ruling class get away with murder, but we shouldn't, they need us, we don't need them.

There's a lot of places you could date the death of our democracy, and there's no shortage of blame to go around but it doesn't really matter, we are here and neither party will ever be a solution, both parties are under the employ of one regime, every election is stolen, this system can't be fixed and our votes don't matter. The very literal and real fact that we all need to understand is ours is a puppet democracy.

Truman & McCarthy

If Joe McCarthy had been a serious person, he would have been pushing for us to just go crush the USSR when they were still feeble and weak. McCarthy was a joke, the whole red scare was political theater. The republican party had been exposed by the great depression, they had held one party rule for 60 years and the economy was constantly in the gutter. The solution they kept pushing for and finally got was the Federal Reserve, our third central bank, "The roaring 20's" was a bubble that bottomed out with Herbert Hoover preaching "trickle down" until he finally was out of office in 1932.

After that the republicans couldn't fool anyone anymore, they even tried running anti-war campaigns against FDR while we had troops on the front lines, but the republican party was well financed so the little third party labor parties that were cropping up couldn't get a foothold.

The cold war was the perfect distraction, we played down do the USSR's one strength, the KGB goes back to Ivan the "Terrifying" and it's still dominating us today. The KGB didn't have the money to swap all 3 letters, but two was enough to throw the CIA for a loop. We lost the cold war the moment it started, we should've fixed the problem, but our ruling class didn't want to fix the problem, they still don't. McCarthy was a weakling, look at what they do, not what they say. He held some random print out said there were names on it, but there weren't, it was nothing, he never had any names, it was political malpractice. What ends are he serving when he does that? Not the interests of the American people, not the truth, not justice, not anything good, McCarthy was a buffoon, the republican party is the party of the banks and corporations. The democrats failed labor and there are only two parties, but don't pretend the republican party was ever a good vote.

McCarthy was having people swearing a loyalty oath, KGB assets are comfortable with their cover, and people with no principles (like our politicians today) can swear oaths they don't mean, it's people who were pro American but against our merchant and banking class, that were put in compromised positions. Our ruling class has been the problem since 1840.

We were compromised the moment we allied with the soviets, Winston Churchill was the breach. All McCarthy did was tear down journalists, artists and the unions, how has that aged? Liberal elites sometimes claim to be socialist, but they only talk left as long as they can live right. "Cultural Marxism" had to have been created by a capitalist. Marxism is about labor vs the ruling class, cultural Marxism is condemnation of white people by liberal elites who think they're being socialist as they break down working class solidarity.

At the same time as McCarthy was creating cover for the KGB, Harry Truman jettisoned the non union labor for civil rights. The democrats expressly were the labor party, that was lethal, you could argue that's where our democracy died. It's true that black people deserve equality before the law and they deserve credit for being part of the max effort it took to win the second world war, but there are no circumstances where the labor party can not prioritize labor. It was the banks that red lined, when do the banks get their comeuppance?

It all goes the same direction, it looks like a back and forth, but its not, it's all one global over class against the American people, both parties work for the same regime, nothing touches them bc we buy what they're selling, we need to punch up. The last time anyone punched up was when McVay blew out the OKC federal building. We still had a pulse in 1995, it was a hell of strike on a good strategic target, but there was no political follow through. That's why that was the last time anyone on the top floor felt the street level.

Don't listen to what anyone says about political violence, anyone fighting for the status quo is wrong, our whole paradigm is off. The way the world has been for the last 80 years has been the most untrue period since there's been humans walking this earth. We don't have a clue, we're weaker then weak, and stupider then stupid, to the point where we glorify it, look no further then Trump, he's stupid as shit.

Anyone advocating for more of the same is wrong. The system is gone and violence is a nothing neutral taken out of context and political violence is not neutral, that's the point. Political violence is something this country hasn't had enough of for a very long time.

The Declaration of independence, dated July 4 1776, was the continental congress creating a post war government while the revolutionary war was already underway. They were no longer an interim war regime, they were setting up a post colonial order. Our famous continental militias were made up of farmers and craftsmen, clergy and scholars and together they toppled an empire, but the Patriots had been unified long before that, they were a political party, the Patriots came from the Whigs.

The colonies under George III's constitutional monarchy had been denied federal seats in parliament, but they had colonial commonwealths with the same two parties, Labor(Whigs) and Royals(Tories), as Great Britain. Cromwell lead the Parliamentarians over the Royalists and Washington lead the Patriots over the Tories, that is why we were founded a constitutional republic, the Patriots were a labor party.

American Nations

The American revolution is not the beginning of US history, our history on this continent started with the first colonies. Colin Woodard's "American nations" and David Hackett Fischer's "Albion's seed" are a couple good books about our colonial founding. You can still see the different demographics today, we've had several migratory periods each with their own history and culture.

France was having trouble getting people to fill out it's colonies, so they rounded up prostitutes from downtown Paris, pulled men out of the jails, married them off in pairs and put them on a boat with a destination somewhere along the Mississippi River. When Thomas Jefferson and Napoleon Bonaparte finalized their deal on the Louisiana purchase those French thieves and hoes became American families.

We filled out the rest of the Appalachia's and part of the south with Scottish War Tribes and an Anglo mercenary caste who had been at war with each other for 800 years, William "Braveheart" Wallace lead a generation of the Scottish but it went on for centuries and then for the 100 years leading up to the revolution the colonies were loading up with these born shock troops. Our revolutionary leadership came from Virginia and Massachusetts, and New England did carry it's own weight on the battlefield, that's where the minute men started the whole thing, but the southern combat forces don't get the credit they deserve for helping win the revolutionary war. A lot of the heavy action took place in the south which played to our advantage.

After the revolution and Louisiana purchase the Puritan and Dutch protestants of New England/York expanded westward as the French and Scottish colonists settled along the rivers eventually establishing cities around the great lakes. The midwest today is our swing state region bc it was formed by blending New English Puritans, French jailbirds and Scottish mercenaries.

The warrior bands who were forced off their land on mainland Britain by rent seeking landlords and bankers should be relatable to many of us, I have a line traceable back to Northumbrian lowland Scot. There's still Wales, England and Scotland today, Northumbria went the way of many axis states, but I am a surviving Northumbrian bloodline, we are all survived bloodlines. You can trace a continuous line from the United States today all the way through the world wars, French and Indian war, Anglo Spain, House of Hapsburg, The Normans, the Franks, you can trace our history all the way back to senate floor of Ancient Rome. We are the direct descendants of the Roman Republic, you can see all of western history in the United States today.

Monroe, Adams and Jefferson all died on July 4, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died 50 years to the day from July 4 1776. That says more about those guys then words could ever express, the people who wrote the Declaration of Independence finished it on the 2nd, July 4 isn't the actually date but even on their death beds our founders, three of them at least, lasted 2 more days for the audiences' sake. American political showmanship predates the nation, everything about us predates our nation. We come from the Senate of Ancient Rome, Salic law is our tradition, the Magna Carta is in our DNA.

Natural Rights

Civilization is the result of humans in our natural state and human nature is to make law and enforce rights, but rights don't exist in any fundamental way, we consciously have to make and uphold them. The reason for the debate about natural rights is bc we've strayed so far from the truth. What are called natural rights are readily apparent and obvious but they still only exist in as far as we uphold and enforce them and no further. One of our decadent self destructive habits has been this belief in something greater then the truth.

Law is in our nature, but that doesn't mean its the truth, it serves a different purpose, and over time it gets deformed by detached elites. Lawlessness is natural too, there's a truth that's natural rights, we break law to make law, the goal is the whole real and just truth, no more, no less. Laws have to both have legitimacy, and be maintained with fierce, potentially even lethal force.

Justice doesn't actually exist, it's like good and evil, everything is 50/50 just to one side, unjust to another, we define our right and wrong. We need our law, our government, our way, this is our civilization. There's no honor system, our ruling class sold more than just their honor a long time ago.

Margret Thatcher was a twit, humans aren't a bunch of individual solo actors grouped together in a global market. Humans are tribal, we are a collective it is a group effort for a greater good, that's what it is to be a social species, humans are born prepolitical.

All social animals practice politics, that's what they're doing when they fight and mark territory. Rams challenge each other by kicking each other in the nuts, it sounds funny, but they're stress testing the legitimacy of their power dynamic. Rats are highly intelligent, they form complicated hierarchical structures that they fight to maintain. Blue Jays will physically bully on hawks to deter them from the area.

Organization, structure, resource allocation, it's all policy, humans are born into this world predisposed to be political, this thing called government is how we rule.

Being anti-government is a good instinct, we've never known anything but an illegitimate government, but you have to take the next step, our founders overthrew a government to found a government. It doesn't work to vote for an anti-government candidate in the broken system. Anyone running for government office isn't anti-government. Part of our current predicament is the politicians with nothing to run on, run on the best stuff. There are no shortcuts though, voting for the worse candidate isn't a solution either. We have to go outside the system, and frame our own. There's no one else, it's on us.

Don't pay attention to what they say, pay attention to what they do. Corporations have offices in DC to lobby government year round, they spend billions of dollars funding campaigns. They're not giving that money away, that's money being spent against us. There is no limited government, there is no deregulation, they regulate labor, we actually have rules in place so private companies can sue third world countries. We won world war 2 and established these global institutions. The republican party isn't for smaller government, they just more openly don't work for the people. We have no government, we have just allowed ourselves to be depoliticized, we allow this, we hold this up, but they need us, we don't need them.

Due process/Conspiracy theories

Believing in democracy and peaceful protest when they've become demonstrably untrue is the other side of the same coin as believing conspiracy theories. Both sides just chase their tail, even the heavier far right type stuff it doesn't effect the ruling class. Petrifying congress with the threat of violence is no different than threatening them with primaries, it's not accomplishing anything. They've always been frauds, we just now know they're also cowards.

The left is fighting tooth and nail just to try to break even for stuff that should be givens. Even if they survive the gerrymandering and can get around the electoral college and get enough people up and to the ballot boxes and the election isn't full on stolen, what reform is the left realistically hoping for? We already saw both the banks and health care reform play out in real time, it continues today, we're in the negative and we're still taking losses.

We're in a worse situation than 20 years ago and they've been flooding liquidity since, it's anyone's guess as to when it's going to happen, but a crash is coming. There's no doubt among anyone on either side who's going to take it when the next bubble goes. The politicians work for the banks, The Fed is private enterprise, our treasury secretaries all come from Goldman Sachs, they honestly think the mistake of 2008 was letting Lehman Brothers go out of business.

We don't need conspiracy theories, our government is factually already illegitimate, illegal and corrupt, and Donald Trump with the cryptocurrencies is just a new layer of shadow banking. Trump didn't change the republican party and it didn't change him. We have no horse in the race, we lose no matter who is in office.

The thing to understand about conspiracy theories is they don't make any difference. If you compare the best case and the worst case scenario for conspiracy theory's, it's still the same result.

JFK's father had been an organized crime boss, we were in a clandestine conflict with the soviet union, there's dozens of other reasons that someone or group would conspire to kill the President. Lee Harvey Oswald, had marine training and spent time in the soviet union, we were running Nazi experiments at Harvard, and god knows where else, there's a lot of room for speculation, but that's missing the forest for the trees bc nothing changes under any circumstances. It just doesn't make a difference, it never did, JFK was killed, LBJ was sworn in, and now we're here.

9/11 was planned and carried out by people, it happened. There were mistakes made by our intelligence agencies, honestly the day they don't botch something is the day they're in on it, but even if they were, so what? There's bad people in our government, that's not news, inside job/outside job, same difference.

Even the Epstein file makes no difference, just Trump buying the Ms. America pageant is sickening enough. It makes no difference, Trump has always been who he is.

Due process of law is important bc it keeps the little guy from getting run over by the system. Most cases are anonymous and the government needs to be held accountable, but due process of law results in law, it's generic, broad and absolute, it's not the truth, it's a means and in high profile cases due process often leads to ridiculous outcomes. We use it bc it serves a purpose, but it's a tool, it holds no merit in and of itself, we've replaced ceremony for substance, we look without seeing, we act with no meaning.

Qanon was solved, it turns out the guy not only didn't have a Q clearance, he didn't even have a job or any kind of authority at all. It was just some half breed living in his father's basement, he ran for congress and got 4% of the primary vote. Now it's spun off a new generation of talk radio and merchandising. That's the whole conspiracy.

Conservative talk shows aren't conservative, there's a million real issues and they just push sponsored products and fringe theories, or criticize the democrats, ok great, but no one listening to conservative media was voting democrat anyway. The reason to vote republican can't just be that the democrats are garbage, the whole problem is the republican party is dog shit too. There's no American conservatism, don't listen to what they say pay attention to what they do, the republican party isn't for limited government, they're a federal even global platform, the republican party concentrates power in the supreme court and presidency, There is no American labor, there is no American conservatism, there's no American anything in our politics.

You don't solve conspiracies by propagating them, just like you don't fix broken democracy by voting into it. We have to go outside the system and we have to punch up.

Right to revolution

Revolution is written into our founding. The constitution was never supposed to be final, it's the first draft of the American experiment, and were just closing the first trial run, and now we're ready to start drafting a reframing, we've learned a lot in 250 years, but first we have to clear the system.

Rebellions are as old as time, but as a developed theory it was enlightenment philosopher, John Locke who first proposed "the right to revolution" and it was our founders who put it into practice, they made it American Doctrine. In addition to everything else our founders were enlightenment philosophers, and the right to revolution is our founders handed down instruction set.

The right to revolution is the right, some even argued obligation, for the people to revolt against a government that is acting against the interests of the people, conditioned on them being able to replace it with something better, which we can. The American experiment has been hijacked and taken way off course, just cleaning house and rolling everything back, updating and refitting will be light years ahead of where we currently sit, and we can even do better then that, we refine what the founders gave us.

Our entire history is our operational doctrine, all documents, letters, legal charters, the articles of confederation is huge, the bill of rights, the prescient set by Washington's administration, federalist papers, the writings of James Monroe, records of Patrick Henry's speeches, that is what this country is. We were modeled on the roman republic, we're everything we've always been.

When this country was founded we were destined to be the generation coming to power as the first republic was collapsing, this was always going to be. There is no social contract, we don't get a choice, there's no opt out clause, but even if there was, we never would. Our social contract was written in blood over millennia for us to get here, and the time is now, so we are them.

We are the next generation of patriot, we were given this by the founders.

Even people who view our founders in a positive light, really don't appreciate what they were. Anyone ever see clips of the masked IRA guys when they started bringing the lumber against their British occupiers? We were founded by a fundamentalist guerrilla insurgency, the most lethal of all time, our founders today would be called "terrorists", but that's just a reflection of our limp dick, oligarchic ruling class today.

Terrorists are people who without state resources, operate on the state level. Of course governments criticize them, politicians don't want to do any real work, they're on easy street. You actually think they don't like raising campaign money? Terrorists are not good or bad, that really should be obvious, but we have been conditioned to depoliticize ourselves on command. The key word in "political violence" is political, policy is everything, it's the only thing, and the defining factor of our sham democracy is politics without policy. When you want something done right, you got to do it yourself.

The shot heard around the world happened when 14 colonists came out of a Lexington tavern to square off against 150 Boston stationed British regulars on their way to confiscate weapons at a Concord storehouse. Americans have been stockpiling weapons and shooting it out with feds since before there was even a US government. This is the country that invented political violence, don't listen to anyone saying anything against political violence, our founders were some of the enlightenment's greatest thinkers, but they didn't just theorize forever, they put it down and did they ever, our founders were the heaviest rebel force the world has ever seen. America is the right to revolution lived. America was founded on political violence.

I typoed "American violence" instead of "political violence" on the first draft, but I think that works, political violence is just violence with purpose. Voting has lost all meaning, but that doesn't mean Americans have. There's nothing more meaningful than American violence.

Pax Americana

The framers of our constitution made mistakes, but they didn't make mistakes bc we're supposed to fix this, we are the generation coming to power at year 250, we have always been the posterity of the preamble. Our founders made a lot of changes at once, no bishop and no king, some people still believed the king was ordained, it's hard to believe they got so much right, but they did have a lot that didn't quite work out too and that's where we come in. Our constitution is barley a first draft and our founders got us so close with everything that even an air ball like the supreme court, showed us what does work.

Sovereign states with their own courts and appellate systems, federal law is made by the legislature, federal investigations use state courts. We don't want a single highest court. Due process is about scaling down, what it does is tailor law to each unique situation and person. It's good to have higher appellate courts, but those are to keep lower courts on point, ultimately due process is an end user good, there's simply no reason to have a highest court, and its proven to be a single Kangaroo panel to corrupt, it goes back to the Powell memo which was in response to the Warren court, the supreme court has always been a problem and naturally labor has lost at every turn but America will always be labor, that's what we are, we were founded by our middle class.

Virginia's state motto is Latin for "Thus always to tyrants" which is what Brutus said as he struck down Julius Caesar for his betrayal of Rome, Brute vir officii fuit.

That event, the death of Julius Caesar as he finalized his grip on power, splintered Rome into civil war, that was reunited under the cross by Constantine, that then collapsed and fell to their own Gothic mercenary force, spilled into Europe to be unified again when Charlemagne was crowned holy roman emperor by Pope Leo the III. The first Pope was Leo I, and our now first ever American Bishop in Rome is Leo XIV, there are no coincidences, it all has meaning, yesterday was too early, but tomorrow is ours, the course of mankind is in our hands, history is today.

This country was founded as a part of 400 years of world war that ended with us becoming the single global super power. George Washington never rose above colonial in the English army, by the time the revolution was over he was known the world over as the general who toppled the Great British empire. It was destined the moment of our founding that 250 years later, America would have to be founded again. We were born in an age of unprecedented wealth, prosperity and luxury lead by histories first ever global empire, we have lived at the height of empire, we were born in the age of Pax Americana. One day it will be looked back on as something truly profound, but the sun sets on all empires, and ours is no exception, the baby boom generation is the most failed generation in history, but the collapse of the first can bring rise to the next American Republic.

The Sons of History

Everything we were, is everything we've been, our founders gave us the tools to build an empire again. Punch up, rip down, that's how you topple regimes, let the margins sort themselves.

A couple major points for a new framing is labor parties don't jettison labor under any circumstances, we need to make labor rights calcified law. If we can bring back industrial production we should, but what we lost was labor bargaining power, we are a labor founded nation.

Appeasing gays failed worse then appeasing Hitler, horseshoe theory is real, we can not allow ourselves to get sloppy in the first place, we all have the same freedoms but we don't all get the same privileges bc we're not all the same. Marriage is a celebration of family, mother is the most important job in the world, women and women alone get the white wedding. Most homosexual policy throughout history has been about curing or killing them. "Faggot" comes from our own Puritan witch burnings, that was our original gay policy.

Going forward we need to legislate against decadence, don't ask, don't tell is extremely progressive. We seriously were debating trans-athletes in this last election, I can't believe the left takes itself seriously at this point, but Trump ran on the Epstein file this last go around, it doesn't even matter what's in there, the republican party is a joke too. You can't even let the corners erode, every day is a new day, we have to make policy for what is, not what could, would or should be. Patriot politics is back, smash mouth litigation, and we legislate against our own self destruction, end of story.

Warning no warning shots, we fire first this time, that's the difference gas impingement makes, stand down to build America 2.0 or go down with America 1.0 choice is yours. We are the grandsons of liberty, we were born for this, we literately have been selecting for this kind of thing for 2500 years, we'll do it 2500 more. The key word in "political violence" is American, we are the country founded on political violence, don't listen to the current elites, if they had a clue, they wouldn't be piloting their own collapse. They are the weakest and stupidest generation of all time, and their time in the sun is over, they never did a single thing right, don't be surprised when they protest us doing something about it now.

We are the ones saving the American experiment when we take it and reframe it, and that's the burden met. We have the right to a new American revolution, this is going to be heavy but I'm sure I'm not alone when I say, I wouldn't have it any other way.

Don't lose sight of who we are or why we do this, this one is not for ourselves, this country was founded by men who could compose history synchronized to the day. At some point, coincidence stops be a possibility, and purpose becomes ours, we are the generation coming to power at year 250, explicitly named at the top of the constitution by the men who signed it at the bottom, we are that posterity, we have always been the founding fathers sons.

There's no doubt about the outcome if we really commit to this, I think we should, I think we always would. We have a posterity counting on us too, they deserve something worth defending one day. We are the heirs to the holy roman throne, we are the kings of history. Not our government is wrong, not our taxes is wrong, not our war? Well what are we waiting for? The right to revolution is our obligation to revolt, but its not the kind of right where you get a choice bc this has fallen to us bc they did it for us so now we do it for them.

2 - Nationalism

We're going to have all the problems we have, and we're going to be against the one thing we all share? Who's writing these rules? The official consensus in this country is that nationalism is wrong. For such a free and open country, we sure are close minded when it comes to ourselves. How can we, here in the Untied States, be against our own nationalism?

There of course is an answer, it's bc our ruling class is the other. Both our liberal elites and our conservative merchant/banking over class are anti-American others.

We need to drop the "better way" it hasn't turned out to be better or even coherent; we're not allowed a national identity, but foreigners are encouraged to celebrate theirs. It really adds up to only being encouraged if its not valuable, we're the lateral nation, we celebrate every shit hole to the detriment of our own home state. We're becoming a shit hole, we need to go vertical, we need to punch up. We're ruled by the others, doesn't it explain everything? Nationalism isn't wrong, they are.

It's fine for you to not like American nationalism, that just means that this isn't the nation for you, go protest in Gaza, but capitalism is a double entry, base ten accounting system, it's good for what it does, but not an identity, Nationalism is the identity, if for no other reason then its the thing we all share. Plus it's a standard of measure. If the capital owning class, the capitalist class, sells out the steel belt, or crashes the economy and still take bonuses, we need to view those actions through the lens of nationalism, it's not hard to see who's at fault.

The Nazi's - the National Socialist German Workers Party - started socialist, but they didn't stay that way, a recurring theme throughout history is there's a limber fluidity during the successful rise and then the landscape changes but the ruling class digs in bc they think it was their genius all along. Rigidity goes before the fall. The Nazi's adapted every step of the way in the 1930's and had a "new deal" type combo economy for their full scale war mobilization, but then Hitler sold out to the proto-libertarian industrialists and it ended with Hitler feeding himself a bullet, and 1/3 of Germany under communist rule. Königsberg, the Capital of Prussia is still in Russia today, it's sick.

The Berlin wall didn't actually fall, as the USSR collapsed politically and economically, tens of thousands of East Germans went to the boarder bc they wanted to reunify with their families. The guards didn't know what to do, the whole command structure above them was crumbling, they have no idea who to even call, so they just opened up the gates and got out of the way.

The reunification of East and West Germany could not be stopped, this was happening in the late 1980's, all of Europe's politicians could remember world war 2 and the reunification of Germany instead of being a symbolic east west unifying moment, was a major crises, Europe's world leaders didn't sleep for months. Nationalism is that powerful and everybody gets it, official statements don't mean anything, pay attention to what they do not what they say. Nationalism is real, raw and hardcore, nationalism is American.

Hitler called us mongrels, but France, Great Britain and Germany, couldn't tip the scales the way we did. We're American thoroughbreds over here and mongrel or not, we were the bigger, stronger, faster, more lethal, combat force. That was us in that war.

Nationalism is the standard and the measure, the world has become ungovernable, we need to go with simple, real, big block stuff. Nationalism is our identity, its meaningful but it's not a hard standard, it can be chosen, if you believe in the greatness of the nation, you become apart of our nation. It's the perfect identity.

It starts with this, we have boarders they are real, they are enforceable, we can't govern outside them that's foreign affairs, inside our boarders is where we get to legislate and enforce policy and law, this is where we have culture, religion, language, customs, traditions. This is where we define our civilization, it started before we were born, it will continue after we're gone, it transcends all of us, yet it is ours.

An Imperial Nation

We're not actually a nation of immigrants, we're an imperial state, we conquered this continent. Some people criticize that, but the native Americans were warriors too and it's a good thing that we are a coast to coast continent. If the lefts view is we should always be what we were, then we are an imperial empire, we have never been a nation of immigrants, we are conquerors and we are colonizers, we turned this continent into our homeland.

Of course we don't necessarily stay what we were, we want to have "dynamism" what we were when we were 13 east coast colonies is different then when we are a post industrial continent, everything adapts, progressive/conservative don't actually mean anything and they don't need to, the only absolute is the greatness of the nation.

Immigration/Boarder patrol

Immigration isn't a big deal, everyone has lost their heads with the compounding warring populism and idealism that all adds up to nothing. Remember Trump had the republicans kill Bidden's immigration bill. The ruling class doesn't feel things on the ground the way we do, immigration is allowed to be big battleground issue, bc it doesn't matter to the ruling class. We're spinning ourselves in circles over the politics, all we need is nationalism, immigration is one of the easiest aspects of state for us to manage, all we do is make the policy that works for us, that's it, it's that simple.

There's nothing ideological, we're not for or against anything, we set a policy based on whats best for the nation, if the situation changes, we change the policy.

If we need certain skills or kinds of talent, the first thing is to address the education issue that's causing that, but then we import that talent, they may or may not become citizens it's at our discretion, but as a general rule we should make it a win/win. Don't do bad business, if were going to bring in foreign talent and they contribute, they should be given an opportunity to become US citizens.

I agree we want home grown talent, the way we improve things here is not protectionist measures, we invest in our education system, that's a good place to spend money. The navy invented everything from the internet on. Investing in ourselves saves us money in the long run, and the tax money comes from the global corporations, we get our money. Heavy handed fiscal policy, even keel immigration, we do whats in our best interests.

Immigration is important, but its not difficult to manage, we bring in the people that we want, when we want and basically they have a chance to become citizens in exchange, and that's it. We do what's best for the nation, we always do whats best for the nation.

Auftragstaktik

Everyone's heard of blitzkrieg but "auftragstaktik" was really they were doing. It's a German word that doesn't translate well to English, it's pronounced "off-trags-tactic" but "off tracks tactics" is not a bad way to think of it.

No battle plan survives first contact with the enemy. It's a talent tailored design, well prepared and trained soldiers and commanders with license to adjust real time in the field. In simplest terms its like a football team game planing, practicing, preparing and then in the game the quarterback has the option to audible at the line of scrimmage. There's no right way to win the game, there's no right way for a team to score. Same goes for the defense everything has ups and downs, you can always take away the run or the pass, it's hard to take away both at the same time. That's what makes football is such a good game, it's chess played with athletes.

Auftragstaktik wasn't just German war theory, it was Prussian culture, there's no transition into and out of it. Division of labor, meritocracy, there's individual freedom to choose what you want to do as your contributions to the nation, but ultimately it's about working with what you have and license distributed down the chains of command, communication can go up, down, and especially laterally. On fly synchronization, honest appraisal of skill set and situations, fluid dynamics.

Flexible, dynamic, fluid and limber, auftragstaktik.

Nativism

The Windsors, the British royal family, they're German, their name was Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, they had to change it bc all the bully British were so amped up heading into world war 1 that it was even dangerous for English Royal family. We became a nation by defeating Britain twice and we became an empire by defeating Germany twice, the two most common lineages in the United States are English and German.

I think it's good, the first European settlement on the America's were vikings who got run off by native Americans. England, France, Holland and Spain were already at war when they dropped anchor. German, Italian, and Irish immigrants were all discriminated against when they first arrived to America, Irish people weren't considered white for their first few generations. Every group conflicted with the larger population when they first got here, it's just human.

Mastodons were North Americas elephants they were eradicated by saber toothed tigers that scientists now think hunted in packs similar to wolves, they were these lion sized bobcats that lived and worked in groups, used hierarchy and division of labor to produce at scale, just like humans. Elephants were the prey of hierarchical North American pack predators, Saber tooth tigers were the first republicans in America. Man, that party has fallen a long way, just a bunch a of narcissistic businessmen today.

We have a heavyweight 48 state continent with a couple satellites, we have resources, navigable rivers, both coasts, and good neighbors. It comes at a cost, how large we are compounded with being a colonial settlement, makes solidarity hard, so why not be nationalist? We don't exclude the others, they exclude themselves, nationalism is their problem, our solution. American nationalism is the guide we follow in drafting bills and creating culture, even living day to day. Nationalism can be the reason to workout, learn a foreign language, or choose the fish over the red meat, it's cause, purpose and reason, we do it for ourselves, we do it for our nation.

It's the standard we evaluate against, be warned it's not for the faint on heart. Both political parties are dog shit, and both have support apparatuses that are dog shit too. Our ruling class sold us out a long time ago and anyone working directly for them, politicians, TV anchors, podcasters, whole news networks, they know who they work for, we need to face it too.

Bannon is the ultimate populist, he says good stuff and he might even believe some of it, but he worked for Goldman Sachs, he is wall street, Santelli was on the trading floor of the Chicago stock exchange, it's exactly what it sounds like. Tucker Carlson inherited the "Swanson" TV dinner fortune, talk about slop from both ends. MAGA was a campaign slogan it never was supposed to mean anything and it never did, but that's ok, it has served its purpose, but we have to stay with the American nationalism past the rhetoric and pomp.

Populists tap into nationalism as a campaign strategy, but then they're more of the same. Populists replace the elites that the campaigned against with their own cronies. Putin did it, Orban did it, populism identifies the problem and replaces it with more. Nationalism is the real believed in ideology it's not something that can be dropped, populism is nationalist rhetoric, with no substance behind it. Donald Trump is a campaigner.

The president and the guy who cleans the oval office both have jobs necessary to the nation. They're not interchangeable, but they're both indispensable, they both serve the greatness of the nation. No one is above it and no single person defines it, we define ourselves in relation to the nation. When Business leaders, in search of greater bottom lines, off shore jobs, they aren't just putting profits over their labor force, it's a total loss for local economies. It kills jobs and taxes at every level, less income for laborers means less business for the area, it hurts schools, churches, real estate developers, you name it, local HVAC and electricians even the police and city fire fighters are impacted. Economies ripple at scale.

NAFTA was signed by Clinton, but it was written by the corporations, and originally Reagan campaigned on it, Reagan was a corporate shill, he worked for G&E which is a financial company, Reagan worked for wall street, he was a populist and Ronald Reagan was a huge piece of shit, even the democrats haven't figured that one out yet, but its true. Don't take my word for it though, don't take anyone's word for it, measure Reagan against the greatness of our nation, what's his actual lasting legacy to this country?

Don't forget the OKC bombing was originally planned by the Covenant, Sword and Arm of the Lord. We had a lot of militant action in the 80's, Reagan gets credit for winning the cold war now, but he wasn't considered a conservative solution at the time, he was actually kind of a dope. The whole cold war was a joke, the USSR collapsed on it's own and the moral majority was bullshit Christianity, all the TV stuff is, it's pyramid schemes and douche bags who want to be rich and famous. There are a couple exceptions like W. Bush and Huckabee but Republican politicians are populist conservatives, they're not religious, look how dickless congress has been the last few years, they have zero principles.

Reagan didn't win the cold war, he knee capped the unions, undid Jimmy Carters long term environmental reforms, started the deficit spending that's crushing our breathing room today, and of course brought in neoliberalism. Ronald Reagan is the man who killed capitalism.

The action died down after 95 in part bc of deployment to Iraq and then in 2008 it got going again but the tea party and then Maga successfully tied them to the republican party. Trump, hasn't changed the republican party, he's more of the same. It's a lot of noise and some red meat, but he's not doing anything serious except for gunking up the economy with the tariffs. The crypto stuff is basically just shadow banking and corruption, it might as well be wall street. Don't pay attention to what they say, pay attention to what they do. Trump makes a big deal about immigration, he had the republicans kill Biden's immigration bill. There's nothing more then meets the eye, at policy, at action, at reality Trump is anti-american. He is a global business elitist, a sack of shit in a suit.

Kash Patel and Tulsi Gabbard would be ok if they were good at their jobs, but they're amateurs at the highest level of state. A bunch of the tech guys, including Musk who Trump let into all of our personal info for private commercial gain, they're not even American, they're gay south Africans, I call them South African albino niggers. Even Trumps wife is a mail order bride from the other side of the cold war wall. The only actual nationalists in Trumps administration are Hegseth (Kegsbreath) and the Jewish Nazi.

We need to be a heavyweight state again, real blood and soil nationalism, pluralism happens inside the context of the American nation. Big block stuff is how we build back. We used to pound pussies and drop bombs, we were more nationalist then the nazi's and more imperial then japan we won that war through sheer force of will, but then the ruling over class, that had sat on the sidelines for ww2, comes in with the World Bank, IMF, world commerce commission, international courts, rules based order, international law, global free trade, and the WTO. In the end the cheap products from china were always going to hurt the United States, but globalization isn't the problem, it's policy makers that don't identify as American, they're part of a global elite. Aristotle wrote about in 300 BC, that's where the word "oligarch" comes from, all these problems are as old as recorded history. Oligarch's identify with each other, not the people. It's a trans-global market place, our government sold us out.

Adam Smith in his book "the wealth of nations" which is the foundational text of capitalism, "A merchant, it has been said very properly, is not necessarily the citizen of any particular country" paraphrased to modern English: "Everyone is aware that capitalists have no loyalty to the home state", it was just as true when he wrote that in 1776 as it is today, the Tories were merchants who didn't want business with London interrupted. "Usury" is financials, its a sin in the bible, mammon is the demon god of money.

Our elites from both sides buy their own BS, we need to get a clue, they're anti-American, they are a global elite class, they have the world colonized with the Portugal/Dutch imperial design, it's ports and trading posts rather than colonialism and it works through the "rules based order" designed at Breton woods, Local governments fight each other for their business, it's a free for all for the ruling class, they are globalist that's why they are anti-nationalists, they're anti-American and they want us to be too. They want us divided, but nationalism isn't wrong, they are.

The Anglo Spanish war

The most history shaping event in at least the last 600 years is the Anglo Spanish war that took place at the turn of the 17th century. The Spanish armada was the naval arm of the holy roman empire and Britain was weakened from an unending civil war, they barley even had a navy, just a small merchant fleet. They wrecked a 160 Juggernaut warship fleet by waging gurrella campaign in the English channel, which as the Nazis would learn 350 years later, is treacherous crossing. It has conflicting hot and cold currents coming from Africa, the gulf of Mexico and Greenland, add in England's notorious weather and a constricted channel- the plucky little rubber ducky English navy ended up sinking about 100 Conquistador ships, they still find shipwrecks off the coast of Ireland every few years. Spain's defeat opened up the blue water oceans to the rest of Europe.

Islam

When black people were emancipated, some of them went to Canada, others went back to africa (where they died of malaria), but by and large they chose to stay, at that point they have to be given a way in. They never chose to come here, the were forced here, when the politics of slavery changes, you can't just make them not slaves and that's the end of it. There's a whole dynamic that we never dealt with, and thus it continues unresolved. Nationalism is the solution, if they're brought here against their will and 200 years later cut free, they have to be given an option to integrate and religion historically has been just that.

Christian or secular blacks that are born here and buy into the American experiment get to be full right citizens, its a waste of time to disenfranchise them anyway, the republican party is just as much of a problem. We have no labor party and we have no American conservative platform, we need to get those back. Black people need labor rights and straight black men tend to be a lot like straight white men. We naturally hang out with our race and we don't want that race to be a bunch of homosexuals. I think the reason black and latino men are starting to vote republican or stayed home in 2024 is bc the progressive party has gotten so progressive it doesn't even include straight black people anymore and now these men are looking back at the gay, fat, dumb retard coalition, and I don't think they ever wanted to be lumped in with the progressives party anyway, race isn't the issue, it's equality that's degrading.

Islam is out. Islam is a very conservative religion and culture, the reason they will vote progressive is they are anti-American and they know what they're doing. Our open system is being attacked from all angles and at all levels, it's not something that can't be managed, but we have to drop the idealism. The right does it too, Russia is not our friend, I call Russian's slush niggers, Russia is a god forsake uninhabitable shithole that Europe's rejects went to so they could practice their bogus religion, and marry their sisters. It all would have been fine well and good, everyone was content to just ignore them, but then they struck oil and they've been relevant ever since, Russia is the white middle east and Russians are slush niggers.

Freedom of religion needs to be updated, our founding followed the holy wars that they thought would be resolved by religious tolerance, they were wrong about that one. Our tolerance is decadence, we do need to make some accommodation for plurality, but only in pursuit of the truth, we don't care about diversity. Beauty, freedom and glory, empirical understanding and knowledge, there's infinite knowledge that we still don't have, that's the goal and diversity plays a role in that, but the goal isn't diversity, it's truth.

What the left considers diversity is just including the lemons, sloppy tolerances are nothing to be proud of. Cults are different today than in our founders day, and Islam started a genocidal war against the west following the Ottoman collapse. We're already in a war of Islam's creation, we are a Judaeo-Christian nation our enemies haven't forgotten who we are just bc we have.

Manifest Destiny

There's been a great deal of vindictiveness coming from both sides. "See what you voted for?"/ "Stick it to the libs" things like that. Those are not acceptable attitudes two fold, first just point blank our situations aren't all that different, most of the time when half the population is losing, we're losing too, even if we don't know it. We didn't get here bc of the other party, both parties are the same, they're both the other.

We need to see our fellow Americans as people who deserve education, healthcare, housing. We're too quick to blame people for their situations, we're all on the bottom of the same garbage job market. The problem is our government works for and is the ruling over class. What retribution? Sometimes taking it out on the world can actually be taking it out on yourself. We've been conditioned to internalize fault for what's wrong, but where's their accountability? We were sold out and we're not given any system option, but we still have a full slate of tools, fuck the ruling class.

Nationalism is an objective measure that makes the abstraction real, it's not a loss of individuality, it's how we zero in on our common mission, and place within it. It's the reason to wait another year to buy a new car, it's the reason to get up early and workout before work, it's the reason to kick out a window and start dumping clips when feds are rolling through.

We are conquered and divided, ruled and confused, controlled and colonized by a global ruling merchant class, but they give themselves away, they tell us not to hate others. It is them who hates our nation, this is our home and they are not us.

US history has had it's ups and it's had it's downs, but the nadir is right now, it's not set in stone yet though. History will be the judge of what we do or don't do on the precipice of the 3rd millennia. Right and wrong are not hard to see, history is in not even 20 years is going to have no debate about Trump, McConnell, Roberts, no one is going to remember them positively. The legacy of the Roberts court is already fact, at least the Warren court wasn't so openly corrupt.

There's no hope for this courts legacy, but they are good for a laugh at least, for such a conservative court they are quite the DEI squad. Just look at that picture, Roberts looks like he has down syndrome, and all the men are sex offenders. The best that can be said for Trump is he's no different than the republican party has always been.

We have no American conservatism, we have no American anything in our government anymore, and America deserves better. We share a language, a religion, and a rich history, we have a state, we are a nation, but we don't have a government bc this government is not us. Nationalism might be wrong for every other nation and I don't blame them, I wouldn't want to be them either, but we are not them, we are us, our fate is in our hands like no other. America is the exception, destiny is ours and ours alone and nationalism is how we find our way home.

3 - Economics

There isn't actually a Nobel prize in economics. Alfred Nobel, was a Swedish engineer, chemist, and entrepreneur who among many profound achievements throughout his fascinating life invented TNT the worlds first high explosive. When you actually are the merchant of death, you don't take pride in it, so in his will Nobel left his estate in trust with instructions to award 5 prizes 1 each in the fields of Literature, Medicine, Chemistry, Physics and Peace. 3 sciences, 2 humanities, the first ceremony was held in 1901.

The Central Bank of Sweden, since 1969, has been funding an unrelated award in economics named after the same historic scientist. It's not a category of the Nobel prizes, it's an unrelated prize dedicated to the man who created the prizes, The reason they tack it on like that is the same reason it wasn't included in the first place, economics isn't a science.

That can not be overstated, the central banks and the federal governments of first world countries are not above lying. Politics is the battleground between the ruling class and everybody else and economics is political cover, The central bank of Sweden is very tightly tied in with our IMF and World Bank but I do have to admit that they are good. Ben Bernacke who was fed chair in 2008, won a few years ago for a paper her wrote on the great depression. Sometimes you just have to laugh, that is so good it almost makes the award worth having.

The only countries that still take economics seriously are the UK, France, Germany and USA, we're on a sinking ship yet humor is not lost on those Swedish investment bankers, if they're going to be a joke, they'll be a joke. Bernacke published a paper in the early 2000s about how the boom bust cycles were over bc economists had gotten so advanced. It was Hank Paulson the Treasury secretary in the W. Bush administration who had spearheaded the deregulation of the "To big to fail" banks in the first place. The Swedish central bank knows exactly what it was doing, sometimes you just have to give credit where credit is due, they're a joke, so they'll go all the way with it.

Our economists however take themselves completely seriously, our economy is based in the University of Chicago's Austrian school of economics, literary pretending like it's a part of the long line of German intellectual achievements. The Austrian school of economics was founded by German and Austrian born Jews who very seriously wanted to be apart of Nazi Germany, but the Nazi's had myth and the Nazi's had science they did not have both at the same time and in no uncertain terms the Chicago boys had to be out Austria before Franz Ziereis and Reinhard Heydrich took up local office.

Ideologically the founders of the University of Chicago economics department, were all just dickless Nazi's, we've always lived under what people now are incorrectly calling fascism, it's neoliberalism, it's just late stage capitalism honestly. We haven't seen anything new, it's just become blatant and it's not just Trump, the supreme court is openly unconstitutional, mainstream news is openly dishonest. None of this is new though, they used to just cover it up more, but they no longer fear us. Fredrick Hayek, who wrote the ironically named "the road to serfdom" seriously looks like he could have been Hitlers gay half brother. Hayek left Austria in 1938, he had no moral objection to the Nazi's. It was the Nazi's who had the standards to high for him.

The libertarian “Nerd Reich,” they want to be fascists there’s no doubt about it, it’s always been a wannabe Nazi ideology, but if you actually read a book, it doesn’t stay on your end table indefinitely. Trump dodged the Vietnam draft by faking an injury like a faggot getting out of gym class. Trump is a populist, not a nationalist, he fakes it. Economics is eugenics designed by untermensch.

Pseudoscience & Superstition

Our system self legitimates, it preemptively is prepared to catch things before they go, our policy makers know ahead of time how things are going to work out and they give us ways to vent or take action that goes nowhere. That’s what Rick Santelli was doing with his tea party rant, it worked beautifully, but they still have no answer for the economy. Economists play the adults in the room, giving concrete facts, making unpolitical objective decisions, but they are lying, our economy never works and they are the reason. Until we do something different, we’re going to keep getting the same results.

Economics is built on utility theory. “utility” is a quantifiable measure of pleasure, it is a number to objectively measure happiness. It’s less scientific than the daily horoscope. In middle school a girl explained to me how the newspaper horoscope was not real, but magazine horoscopes, those were serious. To her credit astrology is more scientific than economics.

Neoclassical, neoliberalism, supply side, libertarian, anarcho-libertarian, there’s probably a million more terms, they all basically have the word liberal in them, it’s all utility theory. Economic models don’t even work in theory, humans aren’t rational, information is asymmetrical, as is bargaining leverage. Economics doesn’t even work in a lab environment. In practice the price signals (which are a useful part of the information) aren’t “clean” numbers because markets are man made, it’s all human intervention. There’s no such thing as a non-planned economy. Economic models are invalid before they input the made up numbers, which they literately do.

Economics is a sham, anyone who says different is stupid and/or lying.

Reaganomics

Ronald Reagan gave a union address, where he has a graph and pointer to explain his “Reaganomic” theory. It’s readily public information you can find it on the internet.

That graph was seriously used to justify economic legislation, When has the economy been good since 1980? Clinton balanced the budget, but we haven’t recovered from his laissez-faire attitude towards the internet. It’s not a coincidence that all these oligarchs were there on the ground level of internet public release and adoption. Don’t listen to what anyone says, just look at that graph, Ronald Reagan would have been fired from any other job, but by 1980 we were intentionally electing the worst person we could find to be president. Reagan over Carter was a mistake, Clinton over HW Bush was a mistake (and historians need to reevaluate Carter and W. Bush, they were probably our two best presidents of the 20th century), W. Bush over Gore was a mistake, Obama over McCain was a mistake, Obama over Romney was a mistake, Trump over Clinton was a mistake, Trump over Harris was a mistake. We elect the worse candidate almost ever step of the way, Reagan even campaigned on being the right man for the wrong job.

Wealth of nations

“The Wealth of Nations” along with the “Federalist Papers” are everything we really need. All throughout the book Smith talks about how you can’t have merchants getting together privately or working in or with the legislature. Half of the founding book of economics is ignored by our economists, their propagandists.

You can’t have the commissioner of major league baseball be one of the team owners, that should be obvious. That example is no different then having capitalists run capitalism. They’re actually the only people who don’t want a steady economy, they make their money with arbitrage, which are glitches in the system. Everyone else is doing the productive input or consumption, businessmen want margins which result from inefficiencies in the economy.

Businessmen are the worst people to have in government, they’re the only people to not have making politics. Social media is nothing new, we’ve always had anti-information, it’s just that the consensus is no longer defensible so we’ve fractured into two silo’s. Both should be able to see how wrong the other side is, the next step is realizing we didn’t get here with half of us being wrong. We’re just as blind as they were in the soviet union.

Think Harder Homer

There’s a Simpsons where Homer needs a makeshift anchor to stop a runaway train they’re on. As he’s thinking he looks at Bart and envisions him turning into an anchor. Bart can see the writing on the wall and says “Think harder Homer.”

We need to think harder.

The whole field of economics was propaganda from the start, our government in the 1970’s thought the soviet economy was going to pass ours. Now it is alarming that the CIA and guys like Henry Kissinger were so hopelessly clueless, that even with the sinew-soviet split it didn’t occur to anyone that the soviet union was held together by duct tape. More importantly though is that when our government thought communism was superior they stuck with capitalism. They actually thought communism was a better economic system in the Nixon white house. They might believe the things they say today, but as recently as the 70’s they knew they were serving the capitalist ruling class regardless. The republican party knows what it’s doing, all the think tanks, Federalist society, Koch bros (Correctly pronounced “kawk” it’s German for chief, they are the “Cock Bros”). The republican political machine is a highly ideological project, and it is railroading that ideology through despite all truth.

The economy is the result of policy, every decision politicians make has winners and losers, we’re the pawns who get sacrificed no matter what.

The Manhattan project

Game theory is the epitome of economics. It sounds interesting, like a strategy based on the inner mechanics of competitive scenarios, but it’s nothing more then a sterile conservative strategy that minimizes disadvantage. Someone experienced and skilled in a game like poker will understand it intuitively, but operate beyond it. It doesn’t help you succeed it just minimizes your exposure, it’s by definition just a paint by numbers “do this here, do that there” field manual.

The cold war was the whole conservative playbook, it was detente and deterrence, saving the Chinese communist project to punish the Soviet union. The space race was what? Fascism invented rocket technology capitalism and communism spent a lot of money sending monkeys and dogs into orbit.

“Deterrence” doesn’t happen if you’re trying to deter. You deter China from invading Taiwan by fist fucking Russia when they send little green men into Ukraine, plausible deniability doesn't matter bc it doesn't matter if we’re wrong. It’s their problem when we light their shit up, it’s on them to make sure to not give us an excuse. We are the nation that wins in escalation, proceed accordingly. Deterrence is spending a lot of money to just do nothing, and then you have politicians campaign on their success being that nothing happened while they were in office. No shit Trump gets elected.

Standing armies don’t make economic sense, but obviously getting rid of the military, similar to defunding the police, these are not serious ideas. Building up a nuclear arsenals with no intention of using them, doesn’t make any more sense. The cold war was a propaganda storm, the cold war was economics.

The Manhattan project obviously could never be justified by an economic model. Economic models can’t account for splitting the atom, they can’t account for science. Even without considering the damage pollution does, what was the plan supposed to be for when we run out of fossil fuels. Economics is a joke.

World war 2 was too serious to be listening to quacks. You drop the math for a second, even drop the “strategic” thinking, just evaluate where they were with nuclear fission in 1941, it was worth looking into a little, and then a little more...

Japan didn’t send diplomats, didn’t try to negotiate, they didn’t run anything by Germany, they didn’t even officially declare war until after the attack was over, just in case we hadn’t gotten the message.

You don’t indiscriminately go all in, you still use rational analysis, but subjectivity can be stronger than objectivity. Auftragstaktik, honest appraisal and tight strategy done right. We even made the weapons grade isotope for “little boy,” it took like 1100 people working around the clock for an entire year, when they still didn’t even know if it would work. World war 2 was the only time our economy has ever been successful.

The economy wasn’t even the goal, lets do real, let’s do nationalism, stone and steel, or how about some kinetic astrophysics?

Oppenheimer was an American born German Jew, he was at boarding school from day one, got his degrees and worked in the ivy league (which used to be good schools). Oppenheimer was savvy enough not to carry a card, but there’s no doubt that he was a socialist. Today we have liberal elites, but they used to be leftist Americans. Oppenheimer also interestingly, was a completely unremarkable physicist within the profession, he basically got educated and then lived off his families wealth his whole adult life, until the day he got his call.

All the professors on the Manhattan project were at such high levels in their fields, none of them would understand what the guy next to them was working on. Oppenheimer was maybe the only person on the planet who could have managed the making of that bomb.

That's how America bombs an island when we want to make an impression, yes we heard you loud and clear, how do like me now? Oh you want more? That was the little one.

Everything else including and especially the economy took care of itself. We won the world wars and the troops came back, bought homes, went to school, or got good industrial jobs, had families with 2-3 maybe even more kids, and one salary provided a good quality of life with retirement, healthcare. This is why the baby boomers are a failed generation, they grow up under the new deal, got to go to college bc of the new deal, but their attitude was bc they come from working class parents that justified neoliberalism. So they took down the things that worked, and brought in the dickless Nazi regime, Austrian economics, talk about a cheap knock off.

Notice too, that if we'd continued really investing in and studying nuclear power, we wouldn't have the climate change problems we have now. Nuclear power is more powerful and efficient than hydrocarbons, but don't tell that to the economists. Economists aren't scientists they're quacks. We've been conditioned to think the economy is a science, but there is no macroeconomics, it's all just policy.

Throw out the whole field of economics. We have things we need, we have people who can build and do them, those same people can teach up the next generation of doers and producers. The goal isn't economic growth, it's production, on the ground heavy duty, real work, these are the American pillars, why are the book keepers even noticeable? Stuff them back in their closets and have them balance the books, that's what they're for and that's all they're for.

We need affordable housing, the answer isn't rent controls, or no zoning restrictions, or allowing market solutions (another sick joke). It's building housing and selling it at cost, private/public sector doesn't matter, the goal is the results, in the real world. We need steel, concrete, glass, engineers, foreman, architects, PVC, copper, construction crews, class A drivers etc. etc. and then there's another ring of ripple, mechanics that can work on the trucks, food, tools, cement mixers etc. and all those things create more need and another economic ripple, that's working economics.

The US is a second world country, we need trillions of dollars of infrastructure. That's actually good, we will never run out of useful things to do, and building that infrastructure is good for the economy, but don't expect the businessmen to handle it. They want someone else to pay for it, and they want to keep us helpless and desperate. Everything we think about the economy is not true, we're kept artificially weak.

Property rights aren't inherent to humanity, in the wild we have to guard anything we want to keep, but as a society we can create property law, and as a whole be more productive, people should feel safe in their communities, we want property rights, codified into law, upheld by law enforcement, but people also need to be held accountable, no matter how politically connected or wealthy they are. Property rights aren't the only thing that matter. We make the fiscal policy that best works for us, it's policy, economics is politics.

They had it figured out in 400 BC, Humans have been the same since the beginning of time. Economists don't read Adam Smith bc they're being indoctrinated, they're drones and shells.

Big corporations that operate in multiple states and can pick up and offshore or automate jobs, they're like bastard states. They squeeze their customers, they squeeze their employees, they loot and plunder and then when everything is squeezed dry and run through they pick up and leave to the lowest bidder. Corporations are state level powers, CEO's deal in legislation. Corporations are enemy states within the nation.

Don't give them credit for creating jobs, they don't like creating jobs, they invest billions in cutting jobs. Big business is in it for themselves and they know this, that's why they invented a pseudoscience to explain it.

Example

A firm makes doorknobs at a cost of $10 each, and they sell them for $20 each. That's a large margin so 4 other firms end up entering the market. With 5 firms all making door knobs for $10 a piece, in a properly functioning free market, that price will come right near to $10.

This is a very simple example, but it still holds true, the guy charging $10.02 gets undercut by the guy charging $10.01, who gets undercut by the firm willing to sell for $10. There's no margins in healthy markets, that's why business merge and corner markets and spend a lot of money on campaigns and lobbying. All that money being spent by corporations into politics, is to manipulate policy to undermine natural markets. Money in politics corrupts politics and markets, it's compound corruption.

Corporations are working against free market economics, true working markets make max wages and minimum price tags. Profit only comes from market inefficiencies, arbitrage, all markets are planned. Corporations say central planning doesn't work so we won't take away their ability to plan and corner their markets through policy. Corporate business models are central plans.

LLC v. C-Corp.

C-Corp's and LLC's are two types of company holdings, but they are not like comparing apples to apples, they're not even like comparing apples to cattle. LLC's are small business, they are the lifeblood of economies, 70% of employment in the US is by little business. C-Corps are publicly traded companies, they are trans-continental state powers operating within the state, but with no accountability to the people, they are essentially everything wrong with the world.

Small business and small banks are what economies should be, a lot of little local economies and communities. It takes government to secure and maintain that. Startups need different things than mature companies, the same regulations that hurt major corporations with global supply lines, help a young company and vice versa. There's no such things as free market capitalism, if the government doesn't step in, the corporations will manipulate and undermine the markets. Advertising is brainwashing, PR is propaganda.

We're a commodified labor pool and consumers to exploit, we're like fish in a barrel with no political influence what so ever, we are capital to the capitalists.

Trust busting

Walmart is a perfect example of a monopoly that needs to be run through the wood chipper. Blackrock needs to be liquefied, breaking just those up, will cause lots of little local firms to be able spring up all over the country.

Property rights is a good value for a society to uphold, so is healthcare, education and retirement plans. The state should provide a strong benefit package that will empower small business' that can't compete with corporations on benefits, now small business can hire top talent, and education prepares the next cohort.

It'll pay for itself all we have to do is just take the private insurance companies, run them at cost, use the excess to lower healthcare costs. Let's just take Pfizer, think their biotech profits can pay for med school for Americans? No jobs lost, nothing changes just who pockets the profits. Them or us? Let's invest in ourselves, private corporation have been eating us alive since 08. Just on principle, it's time we turn that around, and its superior economically too. All the exotic financial instruments, all the stock buybacks everything they do is destructive to the economy. All lending is not productive lending, they borrow to speculate, it's privatized profits, socialized costs, they call it externalities, it's economic destruction that's not their problem, our government is failing to do it's duty. We are obligated to action.

Corruption and unethical behavior is so common within our ruling class, that we just sort of ignore it, but all the legal and illegal fraud and corruption and insider dealing are destroying the United states as well as the worlds economies. Our current system isn't sustainable, we're in the bubble of bubbles.

We lost in 2008, lets not lose the next one.

The Libertarian Party

The first political ideology I ever aligned with, or thought I alighted with was libertarian. I stand by that bc 16 year olds should be anti-authority, but it turns out its not anti-authority, it's not even a serious platform it's privatized authority, it's unaccountability for power. All these libertarians like Musk, Thiel, Andressen, They all contract with the government, they all work in or closely with government, Thiel has Vance turned out and in government. They don't coopt government bc government doesn't work, they want it to not work. They're not doing what they do for the good of the American people.

So what are they doing in our government?

"Personal responsibility" might sound good at first, but if you give it a second doesn't it ring kind of hollow? It should because its a word salad intentionally meant to muddy discourse. All responsibility is personal responsibility. Responsible to who? And for what? It's a statement to nowhere intended to diffuse. Responsibility is something you owe someone else, you're not responsible to yourself to pay your bills, your responsible to paying your service providers who are providing you a good.

If you fail to pay a bill and they cut off your service, you have failed to keep up your end of the bargain. It's your fault they cut off your service, bc they are now holding you accountable, and you have failed to be responsible for your end to them.

All responsibility is a person being responsible for something to someone else. “Personal responsibility” intentionally has no subject. The subject is not you. It’s designed to be thought terminating and depoliticizing. Everything is policy, everything wrong with the world is someones choice. We have failed to make them accountable for their responsibilities to us, they are not us.

No one has ever refused to take good paying full time work with healthcare and retirement, its the corporations that offshore and automate jobs, cut workers, cut hours, undermine unions, bring in part time gig work.

If American workers were prudent and saved they got wiped out in 2008, and again in 2020. Where is the responsibility?

As always there is an answer, they aren’t responsible, how can anyone ever think that our ruling class shows even trivial responsibility to our nation. We as a nation need to hold them accountable. Violence is a net neutral, it is a tool. When I think about our posterity, it reminds me of a pregnant woman who’s surprised she doesn’t feel drunk after a 3rd glass of wine, so she sees no harm in having another. Our unborn posterity can’t ask us to care about them, and they certainly can’t defend themselves, but we can. Don’t tell me political violence is wrong. Big oil in the 70’s knew what they were doing. They all know what they’re doing, we need to too, fuck this ruling class.

25,000 banks have closed since 2008, that isn’t markets sorting out winners and losers, the big banks have their tentacles all throughout our system. They’re not too big to fail, they did fail. The banks did fail and they’re still failing, they’re living on borrowed time, bank profits are the result of policy. If those profits are from productive lending then the policy can be left alone, but if those profits are anything other then productive lending the economy is doomed to fail. It’s time to start hog tying CEO’s and throwing them out of their high rise offices, it’s going to end badly for this government no matter what happens, it can be Turkey in 100 years, or it can be us now. Let’s call in some accountability, let’s hold this over class responsible for the legislation they choose, and propaganda they espouse.

The Fundamental Therom of Economics

One day people are going look back to the turn of the 21st century and they’re not going to see any meaningful difference between neoclassical western liberals and soviet ideologues, our economists don’t have a clue, we are already a collapsed puppet state, our ruling class never has had an answer, our system went under in 2008 just like the USSR in the late 80’s, and now were being stripped for parts. 2025 might be remembered as the US/NATO’s 1991.

The University of Chicago economics department was founded by people who were going to be executed by Nazi Germany. The silver lining is our economy worked when those guys were still in Germany and Austria, they should have stayed there, broiling Milton Friedman would have been good thing, literally. No one who spends $750K on a degree not worth the paper it’s printed is going to ever face that their advice is worth less then nothing, and people rallying on the left don’t actually want anything to change, the left rather nothing be fixed then real solutions take place, bc real solutions take real actions.

Remember our ruling class created the USSR, and the republicans saved China, Nixon created the CCP that we know today. It’s not economical, it’s political and our ruling class doesn’t know that they’re stupid, but they are, we need to act accordingly. We defeated ourselves with our total victory in world war 2. It not to late for us to undo the damage, but we have to do something different. Pre-economic policy was true, world war 2 was true. The way we are is true, our policy needs to reflect that. Neoclassical economics didn't work, neoliberalism didn't work, the new deal worked, and Alexander Hamilton left us a lot with his contributions to the federalist papers, we have the pieces, economies might not be easy to run, but they're not hard to understand. Every decision robs Peter or Paul, fiscal policy makers choose the ruling class over the labor ever step of the way, we have had oligarch's since the civil war and they will remain in power until we remove them.

Our whole system has been backwards, there's no facts in our science, there's no policy in our politics, we're an undemocratic inverted republic, kept divided and desperate and economics is part of the propaganda used to keep us down, but there's nothing more then meets the eye, our politicians are anti-American, everything is policy, economics is politics. Liberalism is a failed political philosophy bc economics is scientifically invalid. That is the first empirical fact in economic history, it's a scientifically invalid subject, and that's actually to bad.

It's to bad there isn't really a Nobel prize in economics, bc I have discovered the fundamental theorem of the entire field: Economics is bullshit.

4 - The 1st & 2nd Amendments

In a very real sense the only part of the constitution that matters are the first 2 amendments.

Freedom of speech, freedom of press and the right to assembly and to bear arms. Right off the top, information/action, the whole rest of the thing is just the fine print for the lawyers. Our founders were journalists and our founders were generals, and they gave us the tools reformed the United States, they gave us the quill and the bayonet, amendments 1 and 2. They are two principles that stand alone and they matter alone, but it's when taken together that they become exponentially greater than the sum of the parts could ever be, just like Americans.

The only full proof way to avoid state capture or tyranny is a well informed and regulated militia, there's no other way. No perfect system can be created, humans can always sell out or become compromised, Trump is pounding on the Fed right now, bc if he gets a couple more stooges in there he can get all sorts of crypto fraud through, at the end of the day, it's all guarded by people, so it's only as good as us.

Our founders didn't listen to the news coming from England, they wrote and circulated papers and formed complex underground information networks. The first volley on the Lexington green, the 14 Minute Men did not win, but the rest of the mission to Concord and back was an utter nightmare for the British. The information was out in front of them, every farmer and craftsmen could drop what they were doing to pick up a rifle and that's what they did.

Second Amendment

I am going to solve gun control once and for all so that it never has to be litigated or campaigned on again. Our founders were gun guys, that's why they are our founders they were huge gun guys, they had gone to war with the top military in the world and won with bunch of rag tag, but well trained rebels. They codified what they had done and very consciously gave us their instruction set. In Scorsese's "The Gangs of New York" Daniel Day-Lewis puts a cleaver in a guys back and says "That's what we call the minority vote." Firearms are democracy.

If our revolutionary forefathers had known about gas impingement and rifled barrels they would have written books on ballistics and probably invented shelled artillery. They very consciously gave us the second amendment. There's no monopoly on violence in the American nation, freedom is you can have guns, you can not have guns. Freedom is not telling other people that they can not own firearms, that is a very weak and unconsidered understanding of safety. The second is a check and balance on government, we need to hold our government accountable, the second amendment is the answer and it's own solution bc we all have the same rights under the second amendment. If guns make you feel unsafe, get yourself a gun.

Freedom is you can have guns, you can not have guns and the defense for guns is guns.

First amendment

Notice the order though, it's the second amendment for a reason, poorly informed action is less than useless. Good information is paramount. I call fox news "fox shit news" bc it really is rank information, the left does have an anti-white, snowflake bias, but fox shit isn't a solution. We're at war with an oligarchic ruling class we can't win if we're getting their planned corporate media program. The left is censored and coerced by big business, they are far from perfect but they're not as sold out, and journalistic integrity will always have value, even as we continue to sink below it. The liberal bias, it's facts with untrue or disagreeable opinions, pretentious and weak, but there is information in there and as detached as they may become leftist journalism is about holding those in power accountable. Journalism comes from the left.

"Illegal military grade deadly assault weapon" isn't hard to translate into "AR-15." "Murder" might be manslaughter, "Genocide" is impossible, you wipe out Gaza you still have Palestine, we will never be that lucky. Leftist journalism basically always roots against straight white Americans, but they still do deal in facts, and it's the facts that matter.

Timothy McVay bombed a government building with government employees in protest of the FBI for their mishandling of Ruby Ridge and Waco Texas. There were crimes committed by the FBI field agents that were never followed up on, including the sniper who killed Vicki Weaver. No indictment, no charges, no nothing, totally illegal, off scot free. McVay didn't bomb a day care center, that was a military target, federal offices and federal employees, protesting our federal government. Timothy McVay was wholly american, but you break law to make law, we have to replace our government and institutions with something better. That's the truth, the left misses the point, the right misses the goal.

Sometimes you just have to laugh, liberal media is all over the cops for anything and everything except if it's against white men, then it's "white supremacy" which would be "civil liberties" if it was anyone else. It is true that lethality rates are higher among white people, it's the one law enforcement statistic where white people are disproportional higher. We are not adverse to exchanging fire with feds, our government is the bad guy, that was the case in 1992, that was the case in 1776, the left misses the forest for the trees. Our government has been out of line for a long time against the American people, we're not wrong when we go kinetic in response, the law is not the truth, it works different than that. The facts are in there though, information comes from the left action happens on the right.

True revolution is fact backed state combat.

Fake New Real Bitch

Obviously Donald Trump is not a good source of information, obviously when he's criticizing fake news, it doesn't mean anything. There is fake news, but Donald Trump is not to be the judge of that. Trump is fake too, he played a businessman on a show, the banks owned the buildings with his name on them. Who wins when we go along with what Trump is telling us? Trump has never been good at anything, including his first time through as president. He's always making excusing blaming Biden, or the Clinton's, cry me a river you fucking pussy, that's the job, the job of president is dealing with all the problems of the world, it's all cleaning up other peoples messes, that's what he signed up for. Donald Trump is a fraud, the information is out there, don't choose to not see it.

It might seem unnatural at first, but conservative people should still get their news from the left and the left needs to realize that the stuff that works is on the right, don't let anyone shame you down from violence, they're useful idiots, they're the happy slaves in slavery. Even Gandhi didn't win, peaceful protest has its place, but we've had 50 years for slow democratic change, we got gay marriage and oligarchy.

Undemocratic forces can fester in democracy, but democratic forces don't have 50 year life spans in autocracy. Once democracy is compromised, violence is the one right tool, and that should suit us just fine, political violence is American, when in doubt punch up and fire at feds. We have to do the stuff that works and have to face what we're dealing with, Trumps administration doesn't care, the supreme court doesn't care. Trump can ignore a hunger strike, that's not him winning, but hunger strikes will still lose. Evaluate the situation, what are we looking at?

Trump is incompetent, state level kinetic action will cause him to make reactive mistakes. Put pressure where they're weakest, they want action, they don't have a clue, and we can probably even get full state level intel just bc of how those morons use the apps. Trumps administration is the short bus squad, an average 16 year old hacker can down our government, that's more reason to do it. Our whole government is truly and dangerously compromised.

So let's not let them continue to lead us, that makes their incompetence our problem, we want it to be their problem. Let's see how this administration holds up under stress.

News in Culture

Satire sometimes is the truest thing and God damn Tina Fey has never looked better. No wonder Trump hates the left, he spends all day looking at caked and clumpy makeup...and I'm talking about the men in his cabinet.

Ken LaCorte's (who used to work at fox) "The elephant in the room" is good, some vets tracking the Russo-Ukrainian war and 4th Gulf War like Preston Stewart and Valhalla VFT. A few other gun/military tech type channels are right of center, there's conservative subjects in media, but actual conservative current event reporting or analysis, it doesn't exist. It used to a little, Limbaugh and Fox killed it though, news isn't reported its sold, there's no conservative journalism in the US, just like there's no American conservatism in US politics, it's a populist veneer over global corporatism.

Fox News is officially an entertainment channel, that's how they don't get in trouble when some yahoo hurts himself listening to them. Their legal defense in court is that they're not actually reporting news. Fox News is like KFC, it's just slotted in there between CNN and MSNBC. They know what they're doing, they know they aren't news. They are not looking out for the American people, they are selling fox shit. They're not for the nation. Rupert Murdoch is the first Oligarch, he got his start with British tabloids. I call Murdoch Rupe'al Ghul, bc he's going to live forever, he was there for the fall of Rome too.

Flooding the zone is intentionally being not true, we want what's true, Fox News, conservative radio/podcasts, its all trash. "Fake news" about Trump is the real news, Bannon is Wall st., Donald Trump is fox shit.

Washington Post, New York times, CNN and MSNBC are OK, not great, but something. They all have their own individual bias, I'm not saying I like or want to support Gates and Bezos, it's all one ruling class, but you're learning, you're getting information, you don't want to agree with all of it. If you agree with everything, you're not getting anything. You definitely don't want all your information coming from one source and don't waste your time with X, or TikTok, they took down fact checking at facebook, think about that, why trust anything from there? We don't need the information coming from facebook. Elon Musk is anti-truth he's trying to be a bond villain, just bc these guys are clowns doesn't mean they're not problems.

You be conservative, don't get fake conservative information. You be real, don't even chance fake information, at least not more then you have to.

Democracy Now, Chris Hedges, Lejia Miller, Timothy Snyder (and Snyder has a good college lecture series on youtube about the history of Ukraine), Heather Cox Richardson are all good sources of information, not perfect, they all have blind spots and I certainly don't agree with them on everything. My position is we're allowed to whack leaders and install our Fed buttons if that serves our interests, the problem is our government does not serve our interests, it doesn't serve the American people. We bailed out Javier Milei bc our hedge funds are invested in Argentina, Trump bought 20 Billion dollars worth of Pesos, don't pretend he's a good businessman.

Correction of our Perception

We're not the shining beacon of freedom to the world, that's never been the case, and it doesn't need to be, we're not fooling anyone but ourselves anyway. We handle ours, no more no less.

We ally with our allies, we don't police our allies, we do good win/win negotiations, build long term relationships, neutral towards neutral, and doors always open, diplomacy first, but when our interests conflict, they need to get the deal done, bc our second call is our last call. We crush our enemies. Wars are fought to be won, or they're not fought at all.

The rule is that journalists are free to report and should be supported by the military. When US tax payers spend all this money training and deploying killers, we expect to get our moneys worth. Stack the bodies high. If we train soldiers to kill, give them weapons and deploy them, we better get lots of reporting on lots of killing.

If you do it, you better be able to stand by it, mistakes are ok that's how you learn, but executions and rapes aren't mistakes. Don't do bad business, even on the battlefield, especially on the battlefield, Troops are there to lay waste to lesser people, our journalists are allowed to freely report and think different, that's the first amendment working.

1st amendment, 2nd amendment, honest appraisal, honest action.

Information comes from the left, education, journalism, but like it or not the action that works is the far right stuff, the right isn't were you get your information from though. Don't listen to Hannity and get hurt, listen to Lawrence O'Connell and go hurt someone. A well informed and regulated militia, training, reconnaissance, auftragstaktik.

Freedom of Religion

Freedom of religion meant freedom from tyrannical religion, or problematic religion, England in particular struggled with Catholic and Protestant successions, our founders wanted to be free of those problems, globalization has created a new set of issues, so we adjust, it's not ideological, it's not as hard as people make it.

Cults back then weren't like today, bc money back then wasn't like today, and Islam is in an open war with the west, there are no peaceful Muslims, they're just biding their time. There's no reason to even risk it, we don't take the safety and security of our people lightly, we do take the human rights of sand niggers lightly, very lightly, and everyone should want a crack down on the cults. Both parties have bananas in both houses of congress, that's from bad journalism and cult lead lemmings.

The right to assembly

The first amendment as our founders intended was about the right to meet and discuss serious issues and potentially plan serious action, it overlaps with a well regulated militia and there's a reason for that, they're one and the same. Information without action is masturbation, action without information is meaningless terrorism. We are the enlightenment projects flagship nation, liberalism has failed, look no further then what's going on with science. Science was the additional piece that created the enlightenment, we've inverted and perverted ourselves, literately, this is what happens when you go full decadence. Capitalists can't run capitalist and we have a man who played a businessman on a show as president. This is what dystopia looks like, quacks and economists, instead of scientists and statesmen, and political violence is a legitimate tool especially against an illegitimate government.

The only solution is a new constitution faithfully based on the original, but updated and fit for purpose. How we get there is of no consequence, that's the right to assemble, and that's the right to bear arms, American violence is vertical violence.

Protected speech

There was a time when the little voice might get ignored, that's really what art is for, and the first amendment protects artistic expression, as it does political discourse, but only in search of truth. Parroting debunking, uniformed, slop isn't what the first amendment is for.

There's another Simpsons where they're in Australia and Homer thinks the embassy guard is going to be like the British soldiers who don't react to anything, he starts making faces and making fun of him, the guard just drops him "No sir, we don't tolerate that kind of crap in America, sir." They make fun of Trump in Russia, Putin controls all the media out there. We have to get intolerant again, the goal is the truth no more, no less. Don't cry for Charlie Kirk, he was selling foxshit too. We don't have time to tolerate anything less then true, Kirk was less then true, real talk, moving on.

Freedom to speak is giving everyone a chance to speak in search of truth, but that's it, its not freedom to speak if you're not pursuing truth and it's a short leash. The second amendment is closely behind the first. Our founders weren't idiots that liked wasting each others time, freedom of speech is not the right to intentionally be wrong, or muddy the discourse. The first amendment is going out on a limb without certainty, sometimes you'll fall and that's ok, the first amendment is tenure to be wrong or make mistakes in good faith. The first amendment is our collective search for and defense of truth.

Remember Tories got tared and feathered, that's also a part of the search for truth. Agendas get served hot mud, today you have to stay on top of the truth with fierce possibly even violent defense, in a flooded zone, the way to the truth is shutting down the feedback. Censorship is silencing the truth and honest self expression, we don't do that, but violent intolerance of intentional non truth that's fair game. Information is the most valuable resource there is, and it deserves violent defense, without true information all roads to lead to nowhere.

Bahamut

Winner/loser dramatic debates might get ratings, but they're useless, there's no win in winning, what if the better debater is wrong? The goal isn't two separate middle of the road results, negotiations are one issue at a time, there's no quid pro quo, there's a policy solution to every problem, the goal is finding that.

Our collective debates are discussion to discovery, between all of us, between us we have the totality of human knowledge, but no one of us has it all alone. We're a social species, we are a collective, debate isn't what it is, it's a brainstorm build. There's nothing to win, everything has a policy solution out there somewhere we build our collective conscious to it, we all lose when we half lose, but between us we do have the answer.

It has a lot of names the Machine, the Wall, the Dragon, the Goliath, the Matrix, the Minotaur, Hobbs called it the Leviathan, they're all the same thing though, it's the sovereign, it's a singular truth that we're all a part of, no one can access it alone but we have it together, I call it Bahamut. The way we get ahold of it, is dropping what's not true and continuing without breaking stride, it happens on both sides, we have two sides that are both wrong and arguing over what amounts to nothing. When we get control of the truth, when we get the patriot consensus, we have the American electorate, we have the next edition of the American experiment.

Information without action has become our norm, it's every day, it's all of our lives, but action without information accomplishes nothing at best, America needs both the right and the left, but more importantly America is the right and the left, it's never not been both the right and the left. We were founded by a well informed and regulated militia, and that's how we'll be founded again. The true answer to all questions is both, the first two amendments are the DNA/RNA double helix superstructure of the North American Bahamut.

Section III – The Two Party State

5 - Alexander Hamilton & Thomas Jefferson

Our founding fathers are a group second to none in history, and no two were greater than Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson, our first fed chair/treasury secretary and secretary of state as well as the founders of our two party system.

Legislative Design

The studies back the one house two party design, majority/opposition legislature, in house PM everything done in the one law making chamber. That's a major overhaul we need, congress stands alone with no peers and we need to build the party system into government. Congress makes the law, executive functions more like a sheriff or chief of police, they work with congress, but they work for congress. Everything can be done right there in a one chamber congress and it should be only one overriding law per bill.

We have forgotten in this country that we are a single nation, going one direction, the legislative and executive branches are supposed to lead the way. The two parties are not supposed to be hostile to each other, the parties are just a shorthand to help voters know what a candidate's policy positions are likely to be, the minority party actually helps round out long term durable legislation, there is no actual "opposition." One nation, one direction, full perspective.

It has the check on power built in by the minority party. If we had qualified members of congress the party wouldn't be as important an issues, nothing and no one is above the nation, including and especially the parties, which are just a shorthand way to let voters know what someones policy positions are more likely to be, the parties don't matter, the policies do. Our congress is morally bankrupt, more reason to topple them.

The two parliamentary parties work together to draft good durable, considered, legislation. It's flexible, limber, in a pinch it can be immediate. The checks and balances are inherent, functional and avoids the high cost premiums. The executive branch works for them, cabinet secretaries come from the congress, and a good president would build a bipartisan dream team.

A second congressional house like the senate should be like a house of lords, filled with experts like scientists, architects and engineers to help shape policy, not lobby groups, not businessmen, bills need to be understood by the law makers and written in house.

Hamilton's government was top down for what needs to be top down, we live in the age of big government, we need government, we want robust capacity all through our state department. Foreign policy takes big government, efficient, well designed and maintained, but big none the less and it takes big government to protect little government and small business, corporations are the problem, don't listen to what they say, look at what they do, they don't create jobs, they cut them at every turn, and they poison democracy.

Hamilton

Possibly the greatest genius in the history of this country, Alexander Hamilton got his revolutionary start circulating papers rallying support for the patriot cause while he was enrolled at Columbia. When the war did start, Great Britain took New York right out of the gate, forcing Columbia to shut its doors. What does a college kid do when school is canceled bc of military occupation? Well the obvious thing of course, enlist in the army in search of fame and glory. Hamilton served as an artillery officer (the same position as Napoleon) and ended up being Washington's number 1 for many of the historic battles including the battle of Yorktown the final battle of the war. Hamilton led the 400 man bayonet charge that brought the final white flag from Cornwallis.

Years later Hamilton's life came to an end in a gun duel with Aaron Burr behind the capital building. Some people try to play it off like gun duels are foolish, but fighting is not low IQ. One of the problems of our time is people rather lose than do the things necessary to win, both parties just rubber stamp, our elected officials are utterly useless. They used to just take it out back and then get back to work.

Hamilton wrote the Federalist papers, designed our original fiscal system, rallied support for the patriots leading up to the revolution, and then was basically a tank commander for it. Hamilton killed many men before dying once and after starting his life as an orphan Hamilton passed away surrounded by family. To this day Hamilton is as great an American as there ever was, and the $10 bill is not bad for fame and glory. Hamilton got it in.

Jefferson

There's nothing more poetically fitting than Jefferson being on the $2 bill, he was vehemently anti-bank. What Hamilton ended with the bayonet, Jefferson started with the quill. Less well known than having penned the declaration of independence is how much battlefield action Thomas Jefferson led, he was a General in Virginia's militia. He founded the University of Virginia, wrote extensively and was a decently prolific inventor and architect including designing the capital building still in use in Richmond today.

Our first secretary of state, second VP and third president, he bought the middle third of the country from Napoleon for pennies on the dollar, and passed away 50 years to the day from the declaration of independence. Mind over matter, revolutions are won by this thing we call heart.

The Washington Administration

States rights means state government, it starts there, good local government with good central government that protects those states rights, regulatory agencies where necessary, interstate infrastructure, foreign policy. It's a grass roots foundation, with a high end for this age we live in, the age of globalization. Hamilton and Jefferson were both right, that's what it is, the two men didn't get along to say the least, but they were both in Washington's cabinet for good reason, they are the founders of the 2 Patriot American parties, If we get the parties right, we get it all right, both parties need to be kept on point, 1 bad party is 2 bad parties, we do not tolerate tory sludge.

George Washington was made the commander of the continental army by default. When the revolution was over Washington wasn't just known the world over, he was the man that 13 colonies had chosen to follow into war, and he led them through to victory, start to finish, and then at the height of his popularity and power, he gave it away, handed it over to the congress. That's the history that we're still living today.

Our founding administration was as crucial to this nation as any single document or action, not the least of which bc it included Hamilton along with our severely underrated second president, John Adams, creating our federal fiscal design under the banner of the federalist party which today would map center left. The Federalists were everything that today's Democrats should be.

Opposite the Federalists were the Jefferson, Madison and Monroe founded bottom up confederate platform in favor of strong state governments, small business and personal freedom, they called themselves the Republicans.

6 – Democrats, Republicans & the Tories

November 4, 2008

In 2008 Barack Obama was elected president bc black people very openly voted for the first black president and white people didn't want to be raciest. Down ballot team blue flipped 21 congressional and 8 senate seats. It was a massacre, the republicans were just like the democrats after the 2024 election. They seriously thought it could be the end of the party, so the party bosses met and came up with a plan to undermine Obama, which is the same thing Genrgich had done to both HW Bush and Bill Clinton.

The republicans were in what they thought was an existential crises, they never thought about adjusting their policies, it's simply not an option for them, it's all just political maneuvering and campaign strategy, and that campaign strategy actually started going anti-white, which paved the way for Trumps 2016 populist run all the way to the presidency.

Trump never messed with the GOP agenda, look at his administration now, cryptocurrency, he's damaging the dollar, he hasn't lowered prices, he hasn't done anything. He's spending more money to make a big show out of deporting less people. It's the republican party that does the deficit spending and they don't accomplish anything for it, Trump is more of the same actually. He's anti-nationalist, anti-states rights. Trump like all every member of this so called republican party, is anti-republic, get past the fox shit, at policy, they are a federal corporate oligarchy for global commerce.

The GOP above all else is the trans-global corporate party, politicians don't even write the legislation, bills are written by private interests. Gingrich was the one who cleared the policy people out of the republican party in the early 90's, that's not a good way to save money, but the republican party doesn't save money, they don't make government smaller, they campaign on it, but it's simply not true. The republicans cut the stuff for the people and pump up the stuff for corporations, they don't break trusts, but they regulate unions. 2008 the republicans refused to give Obama anything, but they still let TARP through, it's everything else that they made not work. The republican party doesn't make government smaller, they just make it shittier.

This republican party that we have today, has always been a political front for corporations, banks and finance interests, insider dealings and corruption. Populist rhetoric, anti-national legislation, Trump is just blatant with what they've been doing since Nixon. It's all the same though, the republican party has always been top down big business, concentrations of power in the executive and judiciary, it's an anti-republican design, Nixon, Reagan, Trump, the Labor wars, the civil war, they've always been anti-state right, anti-constitution.

These republicans are the anti-patriot party, at policy. Don't listen to what they say, look at what they do. Reagan took credit for ending the cold war, just like he took credit for being for small government, it was Reagan who started the deficit spending and he still raised taxes 12 times, while knee capping the unions and it was Reagan who brought in neoliberalism, which is what killed capitalism. The republican party runs populist campaigns that taps into American conservatism but they are, at policy, for the banking and international, now even trans-global, corporate sectors. The Republican party is explicitly anti-American.

The republican party we have today is of course not the same republican party of our founding fathers, This republican party is the party of Lincoln and has no political, platform or historic connection to the original republican party.

We were founded by Massachusetts and Virginia, based on the republican design of ancient Rome. The party of Lincoln has always been an anti-American party, the party of Lincoln, Nixon, Reagan, Trump and every other “republican” since 1852 has been in name only, they are not the republican party, and they don’t operate a republican structure, the Party of Jefferson was the Patriot republican party, today what we have are tory conservatives.

The Patriots

Alexander Hamilton was 50 years ahead of his time, he basically set up the federal fiscal design we would need once we’d industrialized. A republican government is like 5 speed manual transmission car, when the conditions call for it, you manually shift into higher gear, federal top down policy, when the situation changes back, downshift back to sovereign state governance. The things that need federalism operate on the federal level, but the default is always states rights/state governments, the default is con-federal government. The federal government is just an available top end, it’s a support system for the state governments which all together serve their people and serve the nation. The Federal Government is supposed to help the states, and the states work for the people, not the corporations, not lobby groups and not foreigners, blood and soil real Americans.

At the start of the 19th century we had our federal republic in place, but without major federal or geopolitical issues, we didn’t have a need for the high gears, so ended up with two labor parties, Whigs and the Democrats which makes, sense we were founded by the patriots, the patriots were a labor party. The proto-corporate platforms in New York and the Midwest were there, and they were well funded but they couldn’t get a foothold, they couldn’t make a scratch, we were to anti-bank, to pro manifest destiny, that’s the real work.

The Democratic party founded by Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren in 1828, was the party of the people. Sometimes Jackson is referred to as a populist, but he lead the way campaigned, and lived the way he lead, Jackson was a General who came from the people. Populism is politics, we used to make praxis policy, Jackson was a democratic leader.

The Donkey comes from political cartoons trying to make fun of General Jackson, it backfired, Donkey’s are tough “tug boat” animals, they were the diesel truck or tractor of their day and they’ll stomp coyotes to death, not to dissimilar from Jackson almost beating an attempted assassin to death with his cain.

All our presidents in the early 1800’s were for strong state governments with mostly sovereign rule, anti-bank, anti-big industry, battlefield commanders. It’s really a stark contrast, all our presidents before 1860 were generals or trial attorney’s, we’ve had MBA’s and Corp JD’s since with a couple war hero generals, Grant and Eisenhower, who were not good military commanders, they just were symbolic war hero's. Grant was the most corrupt president until Nixon, he was very Tory republican.

The Blue Heart of Labor

The Democrats were the party of America they were the labor party, our labor war was a true war waged against the Lincolns Tory's, but not for nothing, it returned the democrats to office, and gave us the trade unions.

If Jackson was alive today healthcare and a state pension program would be democratic party staples. Social security should be a pension program that pays for itself, we're not run by competent, ethical or patriotic people, Donald Trump is nothing new just more of the same. Small local banks for small local business, job creation, sourcing local, first amendment, second amendment, that should be the democrats, at Americas core beats the blue heart of labor.

The Tories

Historians have done us a disservice, they call the true Virginia Republicans the Democratic-Republicans and the Gay O' Party the republicans, but the Jeffersonian Republicans are the Republicans, they advocated a states rights republican design, and the party of Lincoln fought a civil war to retain a federal union, and now is Trans-global and gay marriage rights. Today we have Democrats and Tory's, we no longer have a republican party, they are republican in name only. They are Tory conservatives and if we're going to get a clue, it starts with identifying them for who they are, the party of Lincoln is the party of Trump they have always been anti-American.

The Tory party was created as a federal abolitionist platform in 1852, Abraham Lincoln brought them the presidency in 1860 they went to war to prevent states rights, and they've been the political front for global business elites ever since. The republican party is not for smaller government, they don't spend less, they're not good for the economy, they are not for states rights, look at what they do, they've never done anything, they didn't care about slavery, look at human rights abuses of the gilded age. The Tories came up with a more exploitative business model.

This party has always been a federal and now trans-global platform for corporate and banking interests, this party doesn't have anything to do with a republican government, the US constitution, our founding fathers or America at all. It never has, during ww2 they campaigned against the draft and against FDR's war economy, this is while US troops are on the front lines, this republican party, at policy is anti-American they are Tory conservatives.

It's not derisive, Margret Thatcher was a Tory, Reagan brought in the same neoliberalism in 1980 that she had brought to Parliament in 1979, and that was just a retread of the neoclassical economics that came to power with Lincoln. Abraham Lincoln, Donald Trump and every pachyderm in between has been an agent of a bank and CEO driven, global ruling class, they are Tory's.

The Party Switch

"The party switch" happened, Lincoln wasn't even on the southern ballots in 1860 and the Confederacy was all democrats, there's no serious denial of the party switch, but its important to understand what that really means. The parties have not switched, the voting bases did, and this is key bc yes the democratic platform has flipped on every issue under the sun, but the Tories, under the republican banner, have never changed, not once since 1852.

The gilded age, the world wars, Reagan, Trump brought in the Fugazie age. In the entire 165 years since Lincolns inauguration, this fake republican party has never changed at all.

They are the party of corporations, banks and global trade, they have always been anti-union, they are the managerial representation, publicly traded companies and asset managers. They campaign on whatever is in vogue and are astute enough to scoop up whatever constituency the democrats discard, in a two party system there's no where for the votes to go. When the democrats give up gun rights for gay rights, that's a lot of free votes without having to do anything, the republicans have never adjusted their true pro corporate, anti-labor platform, it's red meat and rhetoric.

We had two great depressions under the Tories and then get 20 years of democrats for the world wars, including the Truman upset. The Tories were a non-American party and everybody knew it, the jig was up. For real, in the new deal era, it was fully known that the republican party was garbage, they were the corporate party, they were the banks, they were anti-labor they'd caused the great depression, everyone knew it in the 1940's, we've lost sight of it today, but it's no less true now.

One generation down and then the baby boomers brought neoclassical economics back, gave us the 80's gave us today, the baby boomers are the neoliberals, they are the Tory generation.

This republican party that we have today, had war profiteered during the world wars, just like the civil war, they are bastard entities operating against the American people. The Tories had like 20-25% of the seats in congress and senate during FDRs presidency, there were even other little labor parties cropping up that should have displaced the republicans, but the republican party was so well financed that it didn't die.

We didn't crush the Tory republicans, we didn't crush the soviets, McCarthy, a Tory, runs his show campaign against our artists and journalists, We should've tarred and feathered his stupid ass.

McCarthy and Truman post ww2, between the two of them had no balls and no patriotism, we lost labor, and then Eisenhower who would have won on either ticket, ran on the republican ticket which gave the Tories new life and let Nixon slither in as his VP.

Non-union labor voted in Reagan in 1980, Reagan crippled and then Bill Clinton finished the unions, the rust belt voted Trump to power in 2016. Our politics continue to devolve to this day.

Clinton's place in history is starting to come into focus, his balanced budget is irrelevant. He oversaw a bubble don't give him credit just bc he got out of office in time, his lasting legacy is he removed all restrictions on internet business and you didn't need to be a genius to see any of this coming. A lot of people wrote predicting exactly this, one guy couldn't get a book published in the 80's about where neoliberalism was destined for. "The age of big government is over" Bill Clinton was a doofus, and apparently Trumps wing man back in the day, I'm not sure who that makes look worse.

The Democrats in 2008 become the Karenrats, they are social justice neocons, neocons are war profiteers it doesn't get more neoliberalism the "deterrence."

We have the Karenrats and the Tory's, that should explain everything about this country today.

The Dixiecrat's & KKK

The Strom Thurmond Dixiecrat's made mistakes too, following Truman going civil rights, the Dixiecrats in the south should have unionized and gone labor, that's what the democrats lost. The "states rights" democrats actually choose social justice as the battleground. It takes both sides to make an issue, ignore what doesn't matter and focus on what does.

One of the foolish things the KKK did was go after union organizers in the south, unions were everything, we want a labor party and American conservatism, we don't have either one, honestly ask yourself what is disenfranchising black people going to accomplish? Then or now? It should have been these Tory senators being pinned to crosses and dragged through town behind cars, we should do that now. We need to get intolerant again, we don't tolerate Tories taking the party name of our founding fathers. Republican really used to mean something.

What is letting this gerrymandering project go accomplishing? We all lose with both parties, it makes no difference. They are not the party of our founders, they are not the republicans of our roman forefathers, the party of Lincoln is the party of Trump, they are Tory turd sandwiches.

Everyone needs to take responsibility for this, we have no American conservatism, the republican party that we know is complete bullshit, they always have been, they are not our constitutional republican founders, they are an anti-american party, we have two anti-american corporate oligarchic parties, this is Abraham Lincoln's regime, we live in the Tory Republic.

7 - Socialism/Capitalism

Why do we cheer capitalism and boo socialism? Is it bc of the cold war? It's not bc capitalism works. What's known as the "great depression" was the 2nd great depression, following the civil war there was a thirty year period of great depression, re-branded the "Long Depression" when the bigger depression landed, Tory Presidents like Taft and Hoover were talking about "trickle down" before that one too, the way interest works money gets extracted up, the ruling class knows that, we need to know it too.

When the dust settled on the second world war we were the only economy standing, 25 years later it's starting to sputter, so Nixon decides to print money, it's illegal so he doesn't tell anyone, but Europe's leaders put 2+2 together and there's a run on the gold reserves. Nixon reneges, France wasn't having it and sends a warship to New York to get their gold, they call that gun boat diplomacy.

Nixon had bankrupted us, not even 30 years after the Breton Woods agreement, the US had defaulted. OPEC took the chance to twist the knife and they never untwisted it. Today our gas prices are 3 times what they could be, OPEC is a cartel, which is a monopoly, monopoly's plan their market. All markets are planned. Business models" are corporate central plans, campaign finance is money spent for political influence. It's not a science, it's not a mystery and it's not hard to understand, the economy is policy

Jimmy Carter got crucified, but the Eurodollar crisis and energy shock of the 70's were directly caused by Richard Nixon, Lincolns party had the economy in the toilet for 60 years, FDR fixed it, and then there was 8 years of Eisenhower's continued new deal before Nixon gave us our third great depression level downturn, which leads to the election of Reagan.

Ronald Reagan ran on states rights, but he wasn't states rights, he made the central government bigger. Look at what they do, not what anyone says, Reagan raised taxes 12 times, he consolidated power, built up the central government, knee capped the unions. Reagan wasn't even federal rights, he created a global corporate free for all, Reagan is the most anti-American president we had in the 20th century, at least the republicans before world war 2 advocated for US based industry.

Reagan is the one who really opened up the global commerce. He's not remembered honestly bc he was good for the capitalist ruling class, he brought in the University of Chicago designed neoliberalism, Nazi corporatism by the guys who would have been buried alive by Nazi Germany, nothing we think about the "Republican" party today is true. Black Monday was our 4th depression level downturn.

Asain Tigers

1987 was a historic crash but we recovered in 2 days, not bc we fixed anything, but bc we put it all on Japan, to this day their economy still hasn't recovered, and get this, they blame immigration. They're an island nation and of all things to blame the economy on they blame Korean immigrants.

What happened is we've had our puppets running their central banks since ww2 and we pulled that lever. We've done it to Germany too, both of their economies were passing ours in the 80's.

Japan has officially been a pacifist country since world war 2, they're run by our corporate stooges and they cleared house of everyone who had been in government during the war. They put their generals on trial and sentenced them to death. They're run by anti-Japanese bc they lost world war 2, you know they're anti-Japanese bc Japan is not a pacifist nation. Even in business they used to take risks and do creative things.

Ceremony has it's place and policy is the solution to many things, but it will never change who people are. You can kill them, you can burn them, you can mame them, you can set stooges in their board rooms and let US banks write their fiscal policy, you can punish their warriors and promote their guppy's, you can even go as far as installing colonial fogies in the halls of their government, but putting a tiger in an apartment can never make it's a house cat.

Japan isn't a pacifist nation, that's what they're struggling with, they lost world war 2 and they've been anti-empire of the sun ever since, but Japan wasn't not Japan in world war 2. Immigration is not the issue, our policy makers fucked them, simple as that, Japan is misidentifying the cause of the economic stagnation, but still Japan is not wrong at the same time.

The way we are
is the way we are
is the way we are
is the way we should be.

Japan isn't wrong when they hate Koreans bc that's just Japan being Japanese again, and who are we to criticize their culture? You can't put a tiger in an apartment and blame it for not being a house cat, Japan just isn't a pacifist state. There isn't a best rifle or pistol or tank or cannon or catapult, or bow or arrow, but there was and is still a best sword, even without being a weapon of war anymore the Katana is still made today and in 1000 years when AR's and AK's are long forgotten, they're still going to make those steel alloy masterpieces. No one can actually think Japan is supposed to be a pacifist state. Think of how wrong their law makers have been for that country for "Pacifism" to be their official foreign policy.

Japan never has been and never will be pacifist and I can sure say this I wish we had an ally in the pacific that didn't put up with the shit from China and North Korea that we do. I think the only thing wrong with Imperial Japan was attacking east in fact. Perhaps they are the rightful rulers of Asia, perhaps they will fulfill Hirohito's destiny yet, no one would miss the Han, and every dawn brings the rise of a new sun.

International Liberetarians

Part of Russia's invasion of Ukraine involved blackmailing Germany over energy. Germany bit the bullet, which I honestly am proud of them for, but it is costing them and they might not survive it politically. With the entire EU and NATO a mess, Germany is in a legitimate economic crisis, their current issues are self imposed, (just like ours) they have the same capitalist ruling class, their current chancellor works for Blackrock, and the AFD isn't the answer either, it's a trap. The libertarian party in the US is the same thing, it's premade astroturf, the solution to the problems caused by the capitalist ruling class isn't more capitalists in power.

Germany's leadership since world war 2, has been explicitly anti-German. Look at the world today, the Nazi ideology was flawed, but they weren't wrong about everything, that's a naive and obtuse view. In 200 years when people look back on the 20th century, it's not going to be fascism that they criticize, it's going to be capitalism.

The Nazi's were anti-capitalist; anti banker and merchant is where the anti-semitism came from, the antisemitism stayed while their economy turned in a capitalist/socialist hybrid with central bank, so we don't draw the connection anymore, but the National Socialist German Workers party started as a street brawling labor party, just like the Patriots.

Capitalism isn't necessarily the problem, it's the bankers and the brokers, the commodifying businessmen, the Tories, the people with no loyalty to the home state.

The AFD is a German nationalist voting base for a global corporate platform, just like MAGA.

The Libertarian party in the United States was started in 1972, all the money to keep a party together for 38 years without getting people into office came from big business, guys like the Koch brothers. The Libertarian party is not a real party, it's not even supposed to be real it's gravitational pull towards corporate interests and state decay. The Libertarians believe that the state will fall off leaving corporations, just like Marx thought the state would fall off leaving labor. Libertarians are anti-labor globalists, it's not bc they think that's what's best for the people though, if Libertarians are so anti-government why do they spend so much money and time involving themselves with politics? Why even create a political party at all?

There is no field of economics, it's all politics, Corporatism and Marxism are a horseshoe of the same global philosophy. I can't believe people even take these fiefdom theories seriously, corporations are the enemy and they have their own internal bureaucracy and codes of conduct. The Libertarian party reinforces the global capitalist order and capitalists can't run government, they can't even run the economy just look for yourself.

1987 was our fourth sever crash, 2001, 2008 and 2020 brings us to seven great depression level crashes in 160 years, a system that fails every 23 years does not work.

The AFD is well tuned German nationalist rhetoric, but they have no policy for Germany. One of the things that doomed the Nazi's is Hitler sold out to the industrialists, that's what the night of the long knives was. Capitalists have no home state, which is what Hitler condemned the Jews for.

Capitalism is a colonial project, that really is true. Through slow dispossession and privatization corporations have taken over the United States and put a colonial 2 party puppet regime into our government. Just like Japan, just like Germany, the western world is colonized by the Portuguese/Dutch imperial design, it's ports and trading posts, favorable local governors, without actually conquering the people, bc you don't need to. Just monopolize and withhold all the resources, the people will conquer themselves.

German Alchamy

Modern Germany was dependent on Russia's gas bc they shut down their own Nuclear power plants. That doesn't even make economic sense for Germany, it serves big oil. Oil money is a huge detriment to our society, and it comes out of the ground, it shouldn't make anyone rich, it's like water, we're being sold our own oil. The whole EU has been tanked by us, we fail our allies and prop up our enemies, that's capitalist policy. Weak states, global trade, anti-science, anti-decisive war, obsolescence, that's monopoly capitalism at work.

The Chernobyl disaster was what soviet science got you. they beat us in the space race bc they were willing to lose cosmonauts when their rockets exploded, it was all a show anyway. Nuclear power plants are a day in day out thing, I'm not sure if Elon Musk knows this or not, but we wouldn't want to go to Mars even if we could. We need to spend less time listening to retards on drugs and more time with real scientists, engineers, doctors and professors the kind of people Germany produces, we need more of them shaping western policy.

Chernobyl was retards playing with loaded guns, that was a reflection of the Soviet Union, not nuclear power, and Fukushima got hit with a 40 foot high tidal wave produced by an earth quake the registered 9.1, the Fukushima meltdown was an example of nuclear safety. Nuclear power made environmental, economic and security sense for Germany, so it should have made political sense, but the German law makers are capitalists so they don't invest advancing nuclear technology; making it smaller, better, modular.

Germany's policy makers are doing exactly the opposite of that, they're capitalist colonial plants, literally, a Blackrock Lieutenant is the German chancellor. Germany's law makers keep Germany explicitly anti-German, you see it everywhere, there's only one thing more German then nuclear engineering.

Capitalism has things going for it, my point is not that capitalism is wrong across the board, but it's a tool we want to use when it works, where it works. It's no different the Roman alphabet or the English language, they are tools that should go relatively unnoticed. The way we use SAE and Metric is a good example of a hybrid system, we officially use SAE, but we end up using metric where it works better. Metric isn't better then SAE, it is some of the time, if you had to pick one, most people would choose metric, but we don't have to choose one and using both is better system then one or the other. The answer is both.

Money

If you think about what money actually is, it's nothing. It's not bad, but its not good, it's just nothing. Making money is like paying bills, having money means you can pay those bills, it's good, but the definition comes from everything else, the inputs and outputs. What do you do produce, and what do you do when you consume, that's what defines.

Money is a medium of exchange and store of theorized value, even gold only has value bc we all agree to value it. It's a good system, it handles incremental transactions and signals price. Information is king and price signals are a good part (but not all) of the available information, you have to look at a few more things, but if you know what you're doing, price signals can be reliable on the ground information real time. It's just a tool though it's not what makes us exceptional, America is defined by American's, capitalism is just a malnourished economic practice.

Capitalism can be a good tool and we want to use currency, banks and markets, but we have to keep it in context and manage it and we do it with government. Our government needs to be ours, we have capitalists in our government and capitalists have no loyalty to the home state, they want to destroy the home state.

True pure capitalism in theory means max wages and minimum prices to the end user, it means firms competing themselves down to no margins just to stay in business, capitalists don't like that. True capitalism works, but the ideology of neoliberalism doesn't. Even if climate change wasn't real (which it is) one day the oil is going to run out, and they won't have an answer. These guys are stupid, we're not going to mars, google was a good idea once, facebook never was. Capitalists hate the nation state, they hate everything true real and good, that's why they undermine and corner markets, that's why they involve themselves with government even though they claim government is the problem, but they're the problem, capitalists hate capitalism.

The Fourth German Reich

AFD's party leader is a blond dyke named Alice, the party has built itself dog whistling and doing stupid things like giving her a Hitler stash, but Hitler isn't German nationalism, the Nazi's aren't German Nationalism, though that is closer, Germany just needs to be German again. In world war 2 the Nazi Generals wanted to make alliances with France and Britain first and then churn slowly east, the way the United States moved West.

Today, Europe is in crises, there's a power vacuum on the home continent and Russia is trying to raise the Russian empire. Get with it Deutschland the Eurodollar is already just the Deutschemark, NATO is destabilized, and the EU is a liberalism ceremonial far left mess. People immigrate to places worth living, but there's limited resources so first secure the home state.

The Nazi's lost world war 2, but they weren't not Germany in world war 2, and Russia still holds their Prussian land, the solution for the EU is a unified European Federation, with its own standing Wemarcht under Prussian military command. Who better to rebuild Europe around then The Fourth German Reich?

If the AFD was actually German nationalist, they would just put Alice Weidel in an SS hat and have her campaign on forming the alliances with the rest of Europe, before wiping the untermensch of the face of the earth, finally put an end to all the problems they cause.

World War 2 was supposed to be Germany moving East, it was about lebensraum and untermensch. Fascism is anti-capitalist, they were dynamic so they used private enterprise when socialism wouldn't work, the nazi's actually used a hybrid economy similar to the new deal, and look what happened,

The new deal economy worked, but that's not even important to think about, our identity is American, we are the labor forces and combat troops, we're not the capitalists, capitalism is not our identity, Patriotism is. We hurt ourselves bc we don't use government against these out of control tech companies. If capitalism works you use it, if it doesn't you don't. Same thing for socialism. They don't conflict, by definition what one does well the other doesn't. The problem is when for artificial reasons policy makers use only one all of the time.

They both work half the time, they don't conflict, they're symbiotic, but they also check each other. Capitalists won't use the public sector for the public good bc it would come at the cost of decentralizing some of their power, the USSR did the same thing, they avoided public markets to hold onto absolute power, even though they couldn't plan shit.

Ukraines Nazi Party

Ukraine does have Nazi's, the Ukrainians wanted to collaborate with Nazi Germany, but Hitler had ideologically locked them out before they even got there. Some things are good while they last, ideology lasts as long as its good, as soon as it's counterproductive you drop it. Germany was met as liberators by the Ukrainians. Ally with your allies, practically, politically, ethically, we want allies, ally with your allies, crush your enemies.

No one wants to be yoked to Moscow, and for good reason, the Berlin wall was to keep people in. The whole thing was one big gulag including waiting on line for toilet paper and gruel. Russians are subhuman, the evidence is everywhere it is an empirical truth, they must still know that in Germany and they've always known it in Ukraine.

Why take pressure from the slush nigger nation? WW2 came off he rails, but the Nazi's weren't wrong, not about Russia, Russians are untermenschn. Capitalism has ruined ever facet of our society, and it's going to continue to do so, we're not even taking advantage of modern medicine or science, while at the same time were letting these companies run roughshod and the white house is investing in crypto.

A note on Nukes

I shouldn't have to say this, but maybe people don't realize that the US nuclear arsenal is mostly defunct too, what makes nukes what they are is the warheads have extreme rates of decay. To keep them live and deliverable the warheads have to be replaced every ten months, that's each single thermonuclear warhead, every ten months, the US doesn't actually have tens of thousands of nuclear weapons, the numbers are totally bogus.

A state like Russia can't afford the upkeep on a mass scale, at the height of the cold war they only had 4 actual deliverable nuclear weapons, the whole cold war was propaganda and rocket science really is that hard, everyone with a triple digit IQ left Russia in the 90's. Russia does not have working or deliverable nuclear weapons. All the hand wringing and not doing anything will lead to nuclear proliferation, bringing war to a warring nation is how you prevent the spreading of nukes.

Nothing in Russia works, intercontinental ballistic thermonuclear missiles aren't going to be the one thing that does. Russia does not have nukes.

Nuclear proliferation is very real, and a huge concern especially with this corrupt administration. That is the concern, China is too level-headed to actually push that button and Russia doesn't have nukes, even Kim Jong Un just wants his regime to be left alone (for now at least) nukes are basically off the table. Russia is the one who fears us.

LLCs vs. C-Corporations

Small business owners are able to own their firms in the capitalist system but they're not capitalists. They have a specific field that they work in and started a firm in. Small business owner is a machinist, or a master chef, a barber whatever it is. Even if the business grows big enough to where he no longer does the actual job, he just manages the business, he's still in his field. Even branching out into related fields is still a professional owning a business in a specific sector. It's when the unneeded commodities or financials become part of the corporation, it's when they bring in MBA's and Corporate lawyers and tax experts etc. It's when the management starts dealing in legislation and code, that's when a firm becomes capitalist run.

Capitalism isn't an identity, people do honest work in socialism, feudalism, mercantilism, all production is the result of work. Right now, we're not doing the necessary work, we're letting the ruling class get away with murder. Real work is overthrowing a corrupt government not for your personal wealth and power, but because there's people that need things like healthcare and they're not going to get it with this system. Nothing is coming back unless we bring it back ourselves.

Violent revolution is the only way for people without healthcare to get it, not all of them can bring their own heavy metal and certainly our unborn posterity can't do it yet just like our founders can't do it anymore, but we can.

Don't listen to ruling class or brainwashed people, violence is neutral, it's not good or bad, and when it becomes the correct tool for the job, then it's the tool to use. There's nothing right about violence, there's nothing wrong with violence, but our violence our way to get a government serving the people again, it's good. Our violence is good. Stay out of the way if you don't like it, because we've got a backlog of heavy hauling to get through.

Personal responsibility is doing work for others, we live in a collective and we need to be able to count on each other, the only thing stopping us is us.

At first it's counter-intuitive but the logic is actually airtight, businessmen can't run an economy. Even the insurance company went under in 2008. Capitalists increase margins without any concern for anything, they "externalize" during negotiations, that's how they do business, they don't care about what they're selling or who they're selling to. They're against their employees, want to pay no taxes so they can hoard money - which is bad for the economy, they say it's good for the economy, but they're lying, they lie about everything, your employer is not your friend. It's the companies that offshore and automate, the capitalist class is our enemy class, they take no responsibility to their employees and don't care about their customers.

7 major economic failures in 160 years and were in the middle of something now, they've been flooding liquidity since 2008. We've been feeling the irresponsible fiscal legislation the last 20 years, and it's only getting worse.

We're not responsible for taking this, we're responsible for fixing it. So we fix it. That's the only standard of measure, no body count is too high to fix this nation, fuck you, pay me, we're going 18th century, American exceptionalism is back.

Corporate socialism/crony capitalism

The Soviet people were given food coupons, and they had money that was supposed to be temporary (just like we're temporarily off the gold standard), they ended up with black markets for everything from blue jeans to baby formula. They sold grain and oil and got aid from the west, the USSR didn't have a communist economy it was just really shitty capitalism, but communism was the ideological excuse for the politburo to remain in power.

Our system since 2008 has not been capitalist, the banks were saved with public money, technically we actually own them, our government was derelict under Obama. All the oligarchs contract with the government, there's handouts at the top of all systems and we're especially bad in the crypto age. 2008 was caused by the legislation spearheaded by Hank Paulson, the treasury secretary in W's white house. We have corporate socialism, it's all crony capitalism at the top, it's all policy made by the policy makers for their own benefit.

What difference does it actually make whether you have politicians who work for the corporations or a politburo that owns all the capital? Socialism and capitalism are the same thing. Only a ruling class with nothing going for it, would build national identity on the system for allocation of resources. They're the same thing, they're both half of the whole, the ruling class just doesn't want to give up power, they'll sell their people out before giving up power and they'll believe their own bullshit bc that keeps them from facing that they're untermensch too. The Chicago boys were going to be buried in same mass graves as the German socialists, and they should have been.

Economies are man made markets, you have private and public producers and private and public consumers, the economy is made up of both public and private and its driven by public policy and private agenda, you always have both.

If something doesn't work, we adjust, economy's are dynamic, sometimes laze faire is the answer, sometimes government does things best. Our ideology is outcome, our identity is nationalism, our privilege is our exceptionalism.

Anti-capitalists ≠ Socialism

Facebook is a major problem in our society, Zuckerberg blocks legislation to protect children, that's really inexcusable. It's sick how profit driven they are, 2012 all these issues go parabolic, there's no doubt about the problem and it's not insurmountable, it's not even difficult. The solution is to collectivize facebook and run it as a public service, we could even run it without algorithms. The private sector doesn't handle public well being, so we do. Drop the anti-socialism pick up the anti-capitalist. Capitalists can't run government, they can't run an economy, so we don't let them. It's a conflict of interests to have policy made by businessmen, especially ones under the employ of the very business' that are destroying the state. Corporations are competing state powers, and facebook is dangerous and unethical, Zukerburg and a bunch of these other guys are making plans to just jet off to isolated islands. Think about what how much guilt that implies.

Do the simple obvious thing, the goal is not GDP, its production and outcome, there are no externalities, someone internalizes everything, let's put the accountability where it belongs. It happens on the ground. America is built from rock solid earth, vertical. Blood and soil framework, heavy liftin demolition, smash mouth politics. Violence is an answer.

Smash Walmart into millions of mini marts, give small banks a different set of rules then the big banks, give them different interest rates, don't let big banks lobby, they can count beans in the backroom, that's their job. Speculation is out, keeping the gears aligned is all they need to do, we'll handle the production, capitalists do the book keeping. Little banks and local economies should be our bread and butter.

Let's just take Amazon, why not? It solves everything and don't say it's immoral. Bezo's built himself up with the strategy Rockefeller invented. JD Rockefeller along with Vanderbilt and Carnagie built out this countries physical infrastructure and Rockefeller in particular was more savage then the outlaws and smarter then the squares, he was innovative, didn't waste a penny and was just out in front of the law that he then used to secure his holdings.

Rockefeller wasn't good or bad he was good and bad he used frontier free market fundamentalism and government rule of law doctrine, the true answer to all questions is both. Sometimes it takes a genius to see the simplest thing, Rockefeller didn't allow anything to limit him and thus wasn't hung up on an ideology that handcuffed him. We should all learn from that, the answer is both, but it's not pageantry, and ideology, its productive output, means to an end, sword and the pen, Bezo's is like the drippy sad sack version of the ruthless oil tycoon, his online bookstore was able to exploit tax loopholes to undermine booksellers and he benefited from available roads, shipping and the US government invented internet. Bezo's isn't smart, creative,or tough. All the "internet barons" got in between 1997 and 2004, what've they done since? They're all system products, don't listen to what they say, they believe in a meritocracy that is not there, the emperor has no clothes.

Bezo's has US policy, courts, military and law enforcement protecting him, and its with that backdrop, he was able to leverage his online position to undercut competition, hold state governments hostage and now he even controls markets. He busts union organization, squeezes third party sellers, uses algorithms to promote and advertise and even sees himself as a predator picking off wounded gazelles.

Amazon is one of a handful of monopolies that made it bc Bill Clinton was converting the former labor party to neo-librolism. Amazon wasn't as good a bookstore as Barnes and Nobel, he just paid no taxes and no rent until brick and mortar stores were out of business, he still pays no taxes in Europe but now seeks rent. Why let him get away with this? Bezo's is a joke, yeah rent out your wife you fucking faggot, you're going to need, year 250 and we clear the system, reconquer our continent.

All of our problems can be solved, the economy is policy and we can make that policy. The solution to the problems caused by amazon are to take amazon, turn it into a public marketplace operated at cost. Give all the employees full time salary, PTO, retirement, child care, maternity leave, healthcare provided by the health insurance that we also collectivize.

It's not socialism, it's imperialism, we take it with the sword, legitimize it with the pen. Fuck the health insurance companies, fuck big pharma, fuck the Walton's, stuff Zukerburg in an oven, lets find out once and for all who screams louder him or the pizza. It's them against us, the "wounded gazel's" are small business and legacy operators, the ruling class knows we're in class war, this will not fix itself through system means. What are we hanging on to? You can not go wrong bringing violence to the top floor.

Aristotle wrote about it, our political leaders have more in common with oligarchs in other countries then they do with their fellow countrymen and Smith wrote about how we can't have businessmen make policy. It's common sense actually. There is no room for ideology when it comes to the economy, American exceptionalism is the ideology of outcome.

Right now, we're a conquered and subjugated people, we're ruled by the capitalist class, it's ok, we aren't the generation that put us in this position, and we're capable of taking our corporate colonized homeland back, but we have to stop looking and start seeing. It's right before us, one of the major paradigm shifts we need is capitalism is politics and capitalists are a class of people who own the major stuff and they're in our politics, we have to stop believing what they tell us, bc it's not true. Nothing the ruling class ever says is true. Capitalism is a colonial project, and we are colonized by these wannabe Dutch voc's.

Ideology vs. Mechanics

Capitalism should be a tool like the roman alphabet or English language, notice we still use roman numerals, but we've also adopted a new flagship numeric system that works better, we also use binary in computer science, it's like shifting gears. Capitalism like everything needs to be governed for the greatest good, we need to moderate it, especially as markets have gone global and capital has become intellectual property.

Freedom is ground level, Americans have freedom, our markets are not necessarily free, they are our spaces made up of our property, we control them, and they are not us. Capitalist can't manage markets or run government, judge for yourself, nothing in the US works, and the current solution of unilateral executive is the newest "Bright idea" with a dim bulb. These guys are fucking morons.

We even go as far as privatizing utilities, that's profit at the expense of the people. It's civil (property of the people) infrastructure that guarantees a monopoly on things like electricity and running water, they sell us water through our own pipes, people can't shop around for better deals on natural gas. Privatization isn't the market system it's the political philosophy at work. Its neoliberalism, a reboot of the failed liberalism.

There's nothing wrong with capitalism, but there's nothing right about it either, it's a good mechanical underpinning, but a failed philosophy. We make our own way, government is how we rule we are a patriot founded nation. The mechanics of capitalism only work if you don't have capitalists running it. The frontier period and world war 2, our governments were involved in the economy and things worked. Our presidents like Andrew Jackson and Zachary Taylor lead the charges, that was executives carrying out their policies and the will of the people.

The new deal was active in production, and spread the wealth across this great nation. They weren't hard enough on war profitters and numbskull, Taft-Hartley was passed over Truman's veto. The southern democrats might have liked spiting Truman, but sometimes taking it out on the world is taking it out on yourself. The dixiecrats hurt the south, the rot continues with Trump, we can fix it, but we have to see the capitalist class for what they are.

The new deal saw us outproduce Germany and Japan and then we had one generation of the American dream; Lifelong careers at a firms loyal to their labor force, one salary was enough to support an entire family, buy a house, have two cars, health and retirement for the whole family. Mother, father, 2-3 sometimes more children, loving homes, education.

We want the mechanics of capitalism run by good technocrats, we want good bureaucracy and tight tolerances, we need to get intolerant again. Markets are man made and exist in public spaces, every transaction is a conscious decision made by people and shaped by legislation, sometimes the private sector works, we want Americans to be free to engage in innovation and enterprise. Strong patents serve the people, so we use them, corporations don't have rights though, people do. Corporations don't have freedom, people do. Corporate structures are their own internal governments, they're authoritarian, but only we are allowed to rule our nation. Government is us, we are the government.

The bottom line is this, capitalism has things it's good at, it has things that it's not good at too. Socialism is a good ideal, the break down happens in the real world production, we want the production of capitalism with the distribution of socialism. There's no real world conflict between those two things, don't listen to the capitalists, they are lying, patten law and a strong tax collection arm. ICE should work for the IRS and instead of beating up beaners they should be disapearing bankers and businessmen who try to duck taxes.

Americans can produce, we can do anything, it's bad policy and bad leadership that has lead us to this position, capitalists can't run capitalism, you can't make a dipstick a piston seal, and you can't have poorly machined parts. Capitalists can't run the engine of capitalism, and we need to lock down the tolerance, tolerance is decadence.

There's no way in hell we should let our bankers run free. We should have chain gangs doing our finances at gunpoint, go ahead you can execute a few of them for fun. The world doesn't need more capitalists they are enemies of our nation, we are the west, we are the imperial state.

Tight tolerances, accountability, robust high capacity government paid for with the money currently being rat holed and used for stock buybacks and bonuses. CEO's are our hoes, we need to break these bitches hard turn them asses back out knowing who they work for. Our corporations exist for our benefit, they don't go global, they work for us globally. They're just hoes on the global market.

Our mission is the greatness of the nation, we are a warrior class people, that includes non combat administrative positions, medics, kitchen workers, barbers/hair stylists, there's a lot of logistics to military, also known as bureaucracy in peace time. Bureaucracies pay for themselves they save more money than they cost, it's just at the expense of the corporations, they want margins and externalities without accountability. That time is done.

If companies can't operate successfully under conditions favorable to the American people, then we collectivize them and run them at cost. It's not socialism, it's iron fist imperialism, and there's nothing stopping government from putting good managers in place, and operating with the mechanics of capitalism, but for the people.

You're not paying attention when you listen to capitalists, they're the ones who crash the economy every 23 years. Capitalists aren't scientists, or artists, or diplomats, they're not teachers, or mechanics or engineers, they don't build anything, they don't do anything, they've never invented a thing, they're middle men, so why would we have them managing government? Capitalists aren't good at anything.

States rights means local economies, our big corporations serve the people and the nation. The puritans is where the American work ethic comes from, but they were strict about what could be considered work, it had to serve the greater good. They believed in institutions and rule of law, but they weren't snowflakes. The Puritans were the minute men, they established their truth, they stoned sinners to death and burned faggots alive and both boys and girls got educated, town halls, city assemblies, Boston tea party. It was an egalitarian floor with no limit on the ceiling, and they fought for what they believed in, they were an educated and violent people. The city on the hill is the glory of the nation.

The Schism of Capitalism and Society

Get anti-capitalist bc that's how we run capitalism. Capitalists are globalists they are enemies of the nation. The sun is setting on the American empire, and they're stripping us for parts. It's just like the vultures when the USSR went down, it's different but it's the same, capitalism and socialism are global crony corporatism in the late stages. It's all oligarchy, they world is a single marketplace and it's a free for all for these ruling classes.

We need to take back the reigns and get our ducks in order. There's lot of uncertainty and we can't allow the baby boomers to continue dig us deeper. Manifest destiny is our economic policy. If we're going to do things better, it starts with understanding whats' what.

Don't listen to the ruling class or their fanboys, socialism and capitalism don't conflict, they're symbiotic they make each other work better by distribution of duty, it's a check and balance. We have lost all checks and all balances in government as the last stages of capitalism collapse, it happened with the labor unions, it started with Taft-Harley, it goes back to the civil war.

Capitalism is supposed to be a market system, but it's become our whole ideology, it's become Neo-liberalism which is liberalism which is a failed political philosophy just like communism. Nationalism is real, neoliberalists were dickless Nazi's who had the means to escape their fate, they didn't do us any favors though, they made our ruling class untermensch too.

To run an economy you need both private enterprise and government oversight, Neoliberalism is wrong, the new deal was right. It was the republican party that poisoned the well during WW2 and then with the help of the dixiecrats they got a foothold against the unions with Taft-Hartley, it's been all one direction since, the democrats got onboard with the Republicans in 92. they're all the same party, the Karencrats and Tories are both neoliberal

Economies need tight tolerances, and premium alloy's, private lending and public investment and you need oversight and regulation on all of it. Tight tolerances are the goal you need good people everywhere. Markets are man made, governments are man made and ours need to be run better. American Exceptionalism is our guide, we are a labor founded nation.

Capitalism and communism are the same thing it's the secular age divinity of kings, they're arbitrary ideologies that justify and concentrate wealth into the hands of an incompetent ruling class at the expense of the people. The true answer to all questions is both, both sides lost the cold war.

Section III – Civil War

8 – The Puritans & The Pagans

The United States is the result of two foundlings, Puritan evangelicals founded New England, and Calvin fundamentalists landed at Jamestown. It was the founding of a New Christian world, and a Norman military excursion. You can still see the northeast and west coasts Puritan culture, with the fundamentalist right filling out the center and south of the country and the swing states in the midwest.

New England

Massachusetts is considered one of the most liberal states in the union, that's not quite right though, they're more just a one party state and even that doesn't tell the whole story. Joseph Kennedy was a close confidant in FDR's administration, FDR was conservative. JFK was a centrist democrat and John Kerry was the junior senator when he ran for president in 2004, they've also put up several governors who got party presidential bids. Massachusetts is a disproportionately powerful state with a ground up republican design, Town Hall, City Assembly, State Legislative, State Executive, State military police force.

The Massachusetts state police have one of the highest attrition rates in the US and they get in trouble for cadet deaths ever few years, but they have strong political support from Beacon hill. Not all democrats are created equal, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has always had a crimson tint across several issues, in the tradition of Oliver Cromwell, including electing Mitt Romney Governor, he's one of the few republican politicians in our lives to actually make some serious policy.

Everyone needs healthcare so the most cost effective thing is state healthcare. We're told different bc it's not the most profitable thing, but the smart money goes towards state health plans. Don't listen to the corporations, we want healthcare, and we don't want it through them. Massachusetts supports healthcare, education and infrastructure, the kind of things that save money or bring in more economic growth. Massachusetts is our oldest republic, they're not perfect they currently go in for the virtue signaling and other pretentious yuppie crap, but the more serious issues they tend to invest well and take defense serious.

New England was literally a new English colony in the new world. Their Puritan leaders were graduates of Oxford and Cambridge and their Massachusetts Bay colony was cookie cutter villages each with a school, church and town hall. Boys and girls were both expected to read the bible so in a time when most people couldn't spell their own name New England was almost universally literate, they founded the ivy league schools, established courts of Law, they were our center left institutionalists. They were the Minute Men and sons of liberty, our best revolutionary politicians were in Massachusetts, The Boston massacre was the first kinetic action and they were the ones breaking onto the boat to dump that tea. The city on the hill is where our admin state comes from, but they were on the front lines too, the shot heard around the world rang out from a Puritan town in Massachusetts bay.

Project 2025, the think tanks, federalist society/supreme court, these people are institutionalists, our Puritan founders gave us the tremendous state capacity that once served us so well, it's been defunded since Reagan and now project 2025 is shutting most of it down, but when we were a great nation, we had state capacity. These guys now are destroying our state for a global business class.

The fact that project 2025 is going after bureaucracy should show how important they are, this is an opportunity to reevaluate, restructure, refit and repurpose our institutions. The German admin design, renowned for it's efficiency, was modeled off of Massachusetts in the 1800's, New York was founded by the Dutch who still now run things well. Director-General and Minister are positions we need to start staffing again, we want to get our institutions up and running.

Critical Trump Theory

The Warren court and civil rights movement in the 1960's was profoundly damaging bc it took so much power away from the states. The overreach was part of the excuse for neoliberalism which argued that government should be smaller, but it didn't make government smaller, look at what they do not what they say, neoliberalism has made the government shittier, not smaller, it's extremely interventionist and the supreme court has been very hands on with key decisions, it's not states rights, it's about their centralization of power.

No matter what your views are, our new deal government got broken bc of the Warren Court even if you like the social justice it was unconstitutional and left the supreme court with undue power, the government has done nothing but get bigger since world war 2, and then Reagan comes in and it's been a social mess and progressively worse economy ever since. It's been a robbery since the 70's economically, and it started with the dixiecrats caucusing with the republicans during Trumans post ww2 white house.

It's horse shoe theory, The 1619 project, critical race theory, the anti-american/pro gay educations plans etc. all of this stuff is government overreach, rolling it back is government over reach too though, and the fiscal stuff all goes one direction, it loosen regulations and insulates big money as they plunder our economy. We're the labor force, they're wet blanket pussies, grade inflated diaper douche bags. The ivy league schools haven't been good in at least a generation. Yale and Brown seem to be the only exceptions. Judge for yourself, they all have lectures and speaker series on youtube.

Critical Trump theory is not a solution to critical race theory it's all untrue and it's all more of the same, The warren court took power away from the states that's what Trump is doing it's a red meat tug of war while actual wealth and power go one direction. Trump is not reversing things,

Today in 2025 with this Trump administration, the supreme court is centralizing more power in the hands of the executive with out losing any of their own. They are well compensated regardless, it wouldn't surprise me if they were making more from every one of these corrupt rulings, and they're not losing power, they can take it right back anytime. There's lawyers on the ground level to lose cases and appeal up, so that they can rule the other way. Our system is littered with these corporate lawyers and office holders, this has been going on since the 1970's. It was in response to the Warren court, but its not a solution to the warren court, everything is anti-labor, anti-consumer and anti-American.

Reform just isn't enough, the judicial third brach of government is a failed part of the experiment. There's nothing wrong with trying a revolutionary idea like an all powerful federal court, the mistake is not fixing it. We need to err on the side of action, it's not hand outs, we're going to take their wealth and power against their will and give it to our fellow Americans.

As currently is the judiciary can always reverse course on the next president, they are embedded like ticks, they are not losing power, they are retaining theirs while building the executive, and the executive has built up the supreme court in turn.

The unitary executive theory only works if you have an extremely competent head of state, Trump is not highly competent.

The Fundamentalist south

The south is why the US won every war up to our recent decadent age, with the exception being the civil war. There were a few reasons the south lost the civil war, but the most important was poor leadership, our founders were great men, the civil war leadership of southern gentry, the democratic party in 1860, they were not our founders. A hard truth that everyone has to accept is that Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis, the whole ruling class of the south, they lost a very winnable civil war.

The Scots-Irish mutiny's that took place after the revolution, were about government and bank corruption. Anti-corruption is where the south's hostility to government comes from, the south was never against legitimate taxation before Reagan. It was not being paid what they were owed for the revolutionary war and the whiskey rebellion was an insurrection against excise taxes targeted at them by the New York banking elites. Excise taxes on the states back then, were tariffs, everything was an import.

The Whiskey rebellion was the Midwest, but the south is the same, we're just a people that take up arms against the government. They were taring and feathering the illegitimate tax collectors, and running local mayors out of town to form their own chieftains. Our ruling class today does not pay taxes, I think our tradition of mutiny is long overdue.

Reconstruction predates this nation. George Washington was able to bridge the gap, we don't have him anymore, but we shouldn't need him, it's not a left/right divide, it's not even liberal/conservative the mason dixon divide isn't a divide at all. New England runs crimson, and Virginia has always been a maroon commonwealth, there's never been greater institution builders or greater warriors then what we are, both sides can't get it done alone, together we can't fail.

9 Occupy Wall st. & The Tea Party

Guerra is Spanish for war, guerrilla means little war, the term was coined during the Iberian war (1807-1814) when Spain invaded Portugal. Napoleon ended up invading everyone and the Portuguese royal family fled to Brazil, not that cool a war honestly, but it gave us this term we use. It's not a "little war" it's a strategic, asymmetrical little warrior who is still punching above his weight in the final round. The word doesn't really work in the native language, but it does work in English, I think that's why it stuck.

Guerrilla war is guerrilla warriors in their natural habitat, force of will, IED's and close quarter combat.

Huger Strikes & AK's

The left is no joke when it stops being a joke. The leftist version of suicide bombing is the 45 day hunger strike, the left isn't soft it's just a different set of tools, it's the pen and the leaping hook. Batista in Cuba was overthrown by a leftist revolution and the rebels in south America weren't shy about going toe to toe with the Junta's in the Jungle. They eventually lost bc the peasants never joined the fight, don't make that same mistake. The left can sustain and the left can bring the pain, just like the right.

The original Boston tea party was a leftist protest, the left anywhere but 21st century America doesn't include managerial elites, or at least not ones who won't come down and join a righteous revolution. We don't have an American left, we have corporate liberal elites who are just squawking Karen's and the social justice stuff needs to stop, once the democrats go neoliberal all they have is social justice and virtue signaling, it's not even a party. Both parties are done, there's no democratic way to fix any of this, 2010 gave us revolution or oligarchy.

The way out is through. There is no to cold, no to hot, nothing is a necessity, everything is an option and if things do go kinetic, dying for a cause is better then living without purpose, and killing for a cause is win/win. I actually think the left would find killing capitalists to be victimless crimes anyway, but there's only one way to find out. Where's your AK spirit left??

GWA

The Irish Republican Army(IRA), was a paramilitary force fighting great Britain that basically held the island in slavery.

George Washington lead the continental army's 13 colonies as they became 13 confederated states, became 13 provinces joined in a republican federation, with Washington Commander in Chief. George Washington was so central to the success of our revolution and founding, I think the way the British have "His Majesty's Armed Services" we should name our military for Washington, an American paramilitary force should be: "George Washington's Army"

That's the best I could come up with for an American IRA, I'm open to suggestions, but that's really what the patriots were, they were a labor party that turned into a guerrilla mutiny and then founded a republic, Patriots and Minute Men founded this country.

To Big to Fail

In the fallout of 2008, the illiquid, insolvent banks were dubbed “to big to fail” They of course weren’t to big to fail, they did fail, that’s why they were being bailed out. What is the justification for bailing the banks out? To big to fail? It’s a self deflating paradox, the banks did fail, the system was structured in a way were the market couldn’t correct for failure without congress being showed the door too. So they bailed themselves out, but they forgot about us, let’s show them the door now.

Capitalism is an imperial project and we are colonized by corporations, our government is seated by corporate stooges. There is no supply side economics, we drive the whole thing, we are the labor, we are producers, the warriors, we do it all, but we are ruled but who and what is not us, we are colonized.

The banks had fought for the subprime lending. Someone had once seen the subprime lending problem before it happened, they knew the risk and they placed a restriction, and the banks for decades were trying to get the restriction removed. W. Bush who was not his father to say the least, gave the banks what they’d been asking for and deregulated the home loan asset class.

The banks knew the risk ahead of time, they still knew the risk after the fact, that’s why they chopped them up and laced them into other asset packages as soon as they got them, they knew they were toxic debt, and they should have known they were corroding the internals of the system.

In the wake of the 2001 crises, the banks created the 2008 crises, and they knew all along that what they were doing was wrong and made sure to get off the bunk assets as soon as they could. They failed on the front end, in the middle, on the back end, they failed to read the paperwork they got. Every new rule is like 800 pages, no one on wall street reads the material on the instruments they use.

Read that again if you need to, it’s serious, the people on wall street really don’t know what they’re doing, they’re very short sighted one quarter at a time, head down. The people on wall street aren’t stupid, but they are negligent and unethical and haven’t read the materials on the tools they use. Wall street doesn’t have a clue, they get away with it bc they regulate themselves and the politicians work for them.

In 2008 the breaker popped, both sides, left and right, had a moment of clarity, everyone saw whats always been in front of us. All across this country in both the red and blue states, people saw that they were looking at, 2008 the system went under and Grass that holds will grow. People stood up in town halls, refusing anymore rhetoric detached from reality

Off the grid, people started organizing and training, it was class warfare.

The Libertarian Party & The Far Right

Of the grid is the place to be, it’s where the left and right truly do overlap. (Semi) off the grid living is how humans were meant to be, and as society keeps getting worse it really is an appealing option, but off the grid is just where you train, we are responsible for fixing this.

Libertarian philosophy horseshoes and overlaps with far left anarchism, Lysander Spooner is a foundational figure in both political philosophy's, and for good reason, but philosophy, like politics aren't stand ins for policy. Philosophy is a truth but it's praxis truth, not true policy. Policy is the enforceable broad and absolute code to manage in the real world.

We live in the age of big government, that genie is out of the bottle and it's not going back, The world is global, interconnected, now we have the AI, it's all intellectual property and patters, government is the solution, Reagan's brain was already rotting when he was in office. Anti-government philosophy is all true, but at the same time, we need government, we have to look at it the way lawyers love lawyer jokes. What government doesn't do, corporations will, we should appreciate that, only a few people have any political influence, our politicians are all puppets including Trump, he looked different but he was just better at being more of the same. In the end everyone in capitalism sells out.

We need big government to manage the issues of the day, and by definition that's an evil empire, we don't want to forget that. We have to understand our blind spots. Government is an imperfect tool, but we still have to use it, bc it's the only thing that works.

The libertarian party is what it claims to be against, it's a government in search of a nation. It's easy to be philosophical when you don't have real world practical considerations to deal with, but the party platform is backwards. Think of how much public sector it takes to enforce property rights, it's not a real platform. It might seem like freedom, especially for people that can get off the grid but we have to do better than that, we have to fix this government and a solution to our two broken parties, is not the premade astroturf.

Do what you gotta do, take big moneys money, but be careful about how much loyalty you really have for sale. Loyalty is an independent variable. Capitalists have zero loyalty to anyone or anything, at the end of the day, it's business. Take free money, take jobs, do what you got to do, but loyalty is never for sale. The libertarian political figures are the problem, even if the stuff they say sounds good, it's just a coincidence, they're not looking out for us. The problems are the banks and the business and the corporate insiders in Washington, it's exactly all these high profile libertarians in our government, they are the problem, it's the lobby groups, and it's the supreme court, all funded by the same people.

The Supreme Court

The supreme court is partisan, partial, political, unjust, corrupt, incompetent, it is the polar opposite of what it was intended to be, 9 poncho wearing kangaroos. Every justice that can get a confirmation hearing is already severely compromise and notice the law and order republicans don't seem to have any issues confirming sex offenders to the bench, nothing about the republican party is true. Donald Trump didn't change the republicans and the republicans didn't change him, they've always been the frauds that they are.

Even if you like them overturning Roe V. Wade, or some of the 2nd amendment rulings they've made the last few years, they're not even thinking about the people on the ground, they openly sit in on cases about their wives or companies they own, they're openly corrupt and compromised, they've been caught lying about stuff that's public information, and then they get scolded in an opinion by the chief Justice who confirms that the law was broken and judges shouldn't break laws, but still does not see reason that the justices need oversight.

They don't need to win elections and they still have donors. Seriously think about that. It's the opposite of what was intended. It was supposed to reign in corrupt courts, but it is the corrupt court that sets prescient for the state courts. Don't take the second amendment for granted, it's very short sighted and naive to think that this or any supreme court actually cares about anything. Our founders missed that religious figures throughout history were the interpreters of law. We ended up with a corporate theocracy, we're a cult with a state.

Let due process do what it does

Due process is extremely important bc every case matters. Every defendant, every plaintiff deserves due process of law. Due process is about scaling law down. It's about tailoring law interpretation to specific cases. That's what courts are for, they are by definition ground level with appellate oversight. You don't need a highest court, and you don't want one either it detaches law from the real world.

There are no big cases, there is no need for federal judicial prescient, the legislature makes law. The idea of a highest court in the land is fundamental flawed, What our founders were doing was way new, they got some things right, they got some things wrong. The supreme court was something they got wrong.

We do need federal investigators, but we don't need federal courts. Severn states with their own judicial systems, district and applet levels, that's all we need. Federal law is made by elected office holders. Courts are state run, laws have to be applied equally across demographics. Federal investigations are prosecuted through the state where the crime took place, if criminal action crosses state lines, feds choice.

The supreme court isn't looking out for anyone on the ground, don't make the mistake of thinking that they're thinking about you when you like a judgment they make. One day the supreme court is going to be how the second amendment gets it's teeth pulled. These oligarch's can't actually jet off to an island in new Zealand and just live in freedom forever, they need society, and they want one that isn't guaranteed to kill them, they're not giving up money or power to achieve that, they're going to take our guns, and it's not hard bc of the ATF's registries. "Ghost guns" don't exist, you don't order build kits with cash. The supreme court will one day reverse it's current stance on the 2nd amendment, just like it's reversed every other decision it's ever made.

By the year 2050 we're not still going to have rifles and my guess is they're going to come for them sooner then that. Maybe even as soon as 2030, it should be scary, bc that's all we have left.

We might as well move now, we got nothing to lose and everything to gain. What's there to be on the fence about? Trump has gone global, when states were country's Lincoln was intercontinental, and now Trump has gone transglobal with these faggots from South Africa, the Republican party has always been gay sex and free trade, we need to do better by our fellow country men. Our posterity can't look out for itself yet, we need to look out for them, just like our founders did for us.

The 2010 Citizens united decision by the supreme court, was an anti-American ruling, by an anti-American over class. The Koch brothers wine and dined a couple of the justices, they openly put a lot of money and effort into lobbying for uncapped campaign finance. Most politicians affiliated with the Tea Party were republicans before 2008. MAGA is the system, American's for prosperity is the Koch Brothers, it's all Wall street, everything comes back to the same ruling class, 2 puppets, 1 regime.

Occupy Wall st.

Greber was a highly intelligent guy who's written some decent books, and he agitated some, but occupy had the chance to make demands and...bupkus, that was Marx's revolution. It's ok that the chance past bc we weren't all on the same page, but that's when the system went under, we have to have a revolution. It is class warfare, our democracy is nothing but pageantry, there's no substance, there's no reform.

Bernanie Sanders got stonewalled and reincorporated, AOC is the democratic version of Trump, she's a tiktok phenom with the perfect story to sell herself to the left, but she'll just reverse some of these social issues that don't and shouldn't matter. No one person or president can fix this system, not even majorities in both houses can get money out of politics.

The East India Bailout

The story most of us have been given about the American revolution is Great Britain got in debt winning the French and Indian war and then expected the colonies to pay for the support they'd been given. It was actually that the English colonies had started as a backwater to the fourth rate empire, but had grown hand in hand with the British isles to become half of the colossal Great British Empire and the crown wanted to reestablish its dominance over the colonial holdings.

The colonies pushed back, eventually the breaking point came to a head when taxes were levied to bail out the East India Company that had busted itself speculating in the newest thing that didn't bloom. Companies are not well run, it's myth, like everything else, we've been hazed with a military level propaganda campaign our whole lives by our ruling class. Ask yourself are publicly traded corporations managed well? All these mega monopolies that are formed by mergers are doing terrible, it's bc they're run by impostors that couldn't organize the sale of girl scout cookies profitably. Remember we've had 7 catastrophic market crashes, and we're driving towards another cliff now. The whole thing is open fraud. It's not enough to complain about it, this is real, and this is really not ok, time for some accountability, let's break these ratchets off.

Corporations pawn off their errors through policy. Privatized profit, socialized cost, fuck that, time for some buckshot board meetings. The 18th century colonies weren't having it anymore, they were locking it down, they gave up tea and they gave up sugar, which were a couple of the major luxury's of the time, and they brought out the tar and feathers as they took the politics to the next level. Eventually waging a gurrella war in the elements.

Occupy wall street diffused over the winter, the tea party was astroturf, it's all a bullshit three ring circus sideshow...but the original tea party was the minute men of the Massachusetts Puritan left.

The Chicago tea party

Rick Santelli's rant wasn't the tea party, that was a strategic move to pin the blame on the borrowers, not the lenders. There was a restriction for a reason, the banks lobbied for it to be removed, as soon as it was lifted they crashed the system in 7 years. The same thing happens every time, there's people that know the problems before they happen, but no one listens to them, bc they don't care, bc they have us to absorb their fuck ups. Trump isn't the answer, AOC isn't the answer, we have to bring the rain and title waves ourselves.

This ones on the banks you guinea midget take it like a man, where's the personal responsibility?

But remember responsibility failed is a responsibility for accountability, we still haven't held those responsible for 2008 accountable. Immigration matters, but it's not immigration... Don't let them scape goat, the ruling class is at fault, this is class warfare.

The banks and the their law passers in both parties of both houses and the executive and the supreme court, where's their responsibility? Even Trumps wife was in on the meme coin action, and that documentary is going to document history, but not in the way the first first bimbo wants.

Tea Party 1773

The real tea party took place December 16 1773 late at night on Boston Harbor. It's interesting bc the guys who carried it out were mostly puritans, and puritans were the stock brokers and bankers of their day, these were not Tories though, these were the Minute Men. staging an act of resistance by forgoing Britain's great luxury, and throwing what today would be millions of dollars worth of cargo in Boston Harbor, late at night in the dead of winter.

The Boston tea party was liberal elites forgoing a luxury, in protest of a principle, they were battering down the hatches for a long winter and they saw the whole war through to the end, The tea party comes from the left, it was peaceful protest, intentionally pumping up the voltage and seeing the response, and when it was a march to Concord, the battle started on Lexington Green, best believe they were still there at the end. That's the Patriot left, the Minutemen were Puritan Patriots.

It's what occupy wall street should have been, there's no to cold, there's no to hot, there's no compromise and violence is an option, Trump is pushing the violence with incompetence at the top, this is what we want, strike when the iron is hot.

Marx's Revolution

I think Stalin poisoned Lenin, but as always conspiracy doesn't change the outcome, Lenin died, and Stalin went on a killing spree, leading to Trotsky(temporarily) escaping to Mexico and Zhukov surviving bc he was off the grid. Ironically Zhukov would go on to become a hero for his defense of Stalingrad.

The Russian revolution was not a Marxist revolution, it was just peasants overthrowing peasants after killing their seriously retarded king. In the end its true you can't have a socialist revolution where there's no industry, it's just a land grab from antiquity. Many more recent Marxist theorists have thought the world was going to be primed for it's socialist revolution around the year 2000 and now capitalism is essentially failing everywhere.

2008 was sort of a fissile Marxist revolution, but revolutions don't happen in a day. Ours is a nationalist project, capitalism and Marxism are both global ideologies.

Decouple from the social justice, there's no such thing as cultural Marxism, we're divided and ruled, everyone from both sides needs to drop the social justice and virtue signaling crap(which Trump is a master of). Our economy, our way, we will have health care, we will have productive jobs and we will have affordable well built housing. There's no global Marxist movement, we don't want to be apart of a global movement, it's full of Russian's and Arabs, we're fixing the American nation.

The Democrats are not the answer, voting is not the answer, revolution is the answer. The stuff that works is what we do and then we frame a new constitution, we're going to default to our original constitution update and refit, equality before the law is equality before the law, there's nothing else to fix.

Citizens Republic

The economy isn't as hard as everybody makes it, it's not ideological, it's not even political, it's pragmatic simple policy, it doesn't matter it just has to work, the way we govern ourselves needs to be more nuanced and informed, not just reactive.

Everything people have been doing is a way of acting like they have control, when they don't. We don't have a clue what's going on with our politicians, they don't have a clue with what's going on with us, this whole thing is being operated by big business, we have no control, we need to get it. Citizens assemblies have brought back impressive results, in-person discussion, meeting with congress, voting, that's the ground level of the American republic.

Political Economy America 2.0

We see the market fundamentals in the US with drugs. Criminalizing drugs effects suppliers but demand is inelastic. There is no supply side economics, ebay is another example, its a buyers market except for new in demand tech, everything is demand driven the market creates the economy, they even get dope into prisons.

Trickle down, Neoliberalism, they keep repackaging the same thing, they know it doesn't work, the only thing the ruling class actually cares about is maintaining the regime. Joe Biden didn't see the contradiction of condemning political violence, Jamie Raskin actually claimed that they were constitutional patriots when they certified the vote. Two puppets, one master and not a single dick in Washington.

The Patriot Way

Money is not power, power is power, they bust unions, we bust trusts, we are no longer going to tolerate monopolies, we reserve the right to bring the pain. The right to revolution is a civil liberty as long as we can frame something better on the back end, which is a given, it's our actual constitution.

Our constitution is meant to be updated and adjusted, but they've bastardized our constitution, they've colonized our country. Role back everything from the last 250 years, but learn from the last 250 years.

The reason is the solution, there's no system way out of this, we were founded by two labor parties, now we have two corporate parties. The way we get back to it, is the way of the patriots, tea party, minute men, American violence.

“Was the civil war about slavery?”

It's a more serious question than it looks, bc while it was about slavery for the south, it was not about abolition for the north, not actually. Were people voting to make America great again? You can't do that twice. Abolition was just MAGA of the day, no one wants to hear about progressive tax reform legislation, they vote for the guy campaigning on “free money!” and then think it's a done deal.

Corporate History

Commerce is as old as recorded history, but capitalism has only been around 400 years. The Dutch VOC founded in 1602 was the first ever corporation, it was an imperial project, they had the best ships, sailors, mercenaries, everything in history, it was the greatest team ever assembled to take high risk/high yield scores.

Capitalism is colonialism, but what the left doesn't understand is that isn't actually a criticism. Imperialism is good if you're the imperialist's, but you don't want to be the locals, and being white does not mean we're not the aborigines getting our heads mashed in, we are. We are a corporate colonized continent.

Corporations only exist to make themselves money, not create jobs, not be positive for the community, they squeeze their employees, they squeeze their customers and plunder the local resources. The only way for them to be positive locally is to tax and regulate them hard, prevent them from picking up and leaving, which can be done, our government just isn't trying hard enough, US politics is a puppet show, and the corporations are the only ones holding the strings.

Capitalists hate capitalism

What does make capitalism work is anyone can invent something, patent it and bring it to market and anyone can get a loan and start a business. Supply and communication channels, education, the ability to hire skilled people, it's all available to the public.

The ruling class constricts that, we should have unlimited money being invested in education, it powers the next generation of productive output. The capitalist don't want to lose control of the capital, they don't invest in anything, they don't create, they keep everything going through them. It's not government that interferes with the theoretical marketplace, it's the corporations, they're the ones that interfere and undermine capitalism, corner markets, create trusts, and our big business works hand in hand with government, government works for them.

Our politicians are corporate agents, what they say is wrong, big companies don't want creativity, they want docile dormant consumers. Creativity leads to competition, capitalists hate competition. Bc Capitalists aren't actually talented, don't listen to what they say, look at what they do, Capitalism is not the problem, its capitalists that are the problem, they don't like intelligent customers and they don't want healthy happy people with interesting lives. They want dumb unhappy consumers who think they're one magic pill away, and they don't want to be responsible to the communities that they destroy.

Corporations are hostile to the home state, don't let them fool you, your employer is not your friend, they want to fire you, and they will when they can, and the big firms use government to jam up the little firms and force them to fold or sell.

We want firms to make a profit, they deserve profit for their venture, but it's not the top state priority, employment, production and or service, contribution to the local and possibly even larger economies. Local banks are good, bc they can productively lend, big banks are a different breed. We want firms to succeed, but not at the expense of society. Firms exist in benefit of the greater good, or we take them and run them ourselves for the greater good. The state can do anything, we want state capacity. Positive local production. We are a single nation, we win and lose together.

Some People Are More Equal

When Thomas Jefferson wrote "We hold these Truths to be self evident that all men are created equal" He didn't mean that we're all actually the same. We are not equal, Jefferson knew that. The Declaration of Independence was a declaration of war against the king back when people were put in jail for questioning that the sun revolved around the earth. Saying that the king wasn't divinely appointed was already heresy.

The subtext of the declaration of independence isn't "Everyone regardless of everything is exactly equal always." its more like "Idiot sons suck balls, so you can suck it moron and you're the son of an idiot, so you must suck big balls. But we've got the biggest balls of them all!" Jefferson wrote the declaration of independence bc he was the best person for the job. We're not the same, we're not equal, and that's actually good, get in where you fit in and get good at what you do, bc we're taking the whole crew vertical.

The solution to incompetent nobility is social mobility. First class public education, and broad wealth distribution are how a society thrives. Small business owners operate in local economies, they benefit from people with disposable income and economic stability. Republicanism is strong state governments and state economies, it is the breaking down of a wealthy un-meritocratic over class. We have sub-humans in our over-class, we have Tory republicanism.

Big business is what hurts small business, not government, good government will have different policy for global corporations then local mom and pop stores. Remember those? Deregulation and lower corporate tax rates hurt little business, if you give people low cost health care, child care, transportation, education, good pay, good benefits etc. then they have money to spend locally, and small business won't have to compete with benefit packages provided by conglomerate corporations.

The way you maintain a robust economy is wealth distribution, the American people have always produced hard, but the capitalist over class has failed to allocate wealth and resources properly, so we will. It's not socialism, or handouts or anything like that, its going to be a strong arm policy, liquefy state street, grind home depot into gravel, let little local banks and little local business get traction in the area that's natural for them. That's is the free market dynamism, it takes trust busting and it takes skull busting, we are colonized, we have a sham government, capitalist politicians are colonial puppet regimes. We need to reconquer our land.

The Tory Counter Revolution

Wars are never about the people who fight them, they're about the ruling classes, in our revolutionary war the leadership class was the Patriots, one of the reasons our founding was so profound is that they were fighting for freedom, not wealth, they risked their wealth. They were already well educated war heroes who rubbed shoulders with the British governors and owned plantations, They risked all that to give us this.

The Patriots won the revolution, they won again in 1812, but it was closer, Andrew Jackson saved the constitutional republic, but the north won the Civil war, and the north by that point was the banks in New York and industry in the Midwest, that's when the Tories took back power. That's when the global capitalist ruling class came to power in the US and then off the strength of the American super soldier, we won the world wars.

The communist manifesto came out in 1848, the conditions in factory's was well known and the labor wars and human rights abuses of the gilded age provide ample proof that the north was not interested in the freedom of blacks, they wanted to yoke white people into serfdom too. They had come up with a better business model, slaves know they're slaves, capitalism keeps the labor cheap, docile and expendable.

The Gettysburg address was a coup d'tait, and regime change against the constitution, the civil war was the Tory counter revolution to our founding and it was the emergence of our current anti-American ruling class. The civil war was about Capitalism.

11 – Abraham Lincoln

For the last 165 years, whenever a third party has played spoiler in a presidential election, it's been the Tory that's won as a result and that's been the case from the start when Abraham Lincoln was elected with 38% of the popular vote in 1860.

Historians have trouble reconciling the contradictions with Lincoln, he is almost universally considered a top 3 president, often voted number 1, Trump is nothing new. There are no contradictions with Lincoln, he has no redeeming qualities, just the republican name for the power centralizing and abolitionist platform, it was a federal platform in 1852, it's a global platform today.

Our founders wouldn't recognize this country at any point post civil war, we don't have perspective on what a true republic looks like, Lincoln usurped and concentrated an incredible amount of power, The civil war was anti-republican, unconstitutional and un-American. and Fredrick Douglass had to twist Lincolns arm to get the Emaciation Proclamation which was just a rape and pillage campaign after the outcome of the war had become certain.

“The first clause in the first sentence of the most famous speech in American history is historically incorrect; ‘four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation.’ No they didn't. They brought forth a confederation of sovereign states provisionally united to win the war and then go their separate ways” that is a quote by American Historian Joseph J. Ellis (who then goes on to praise Lincoln).

The states precede the union, before the civil war the United States was like the United Nations, that's why we call our providence's “states” they used to be sovereign independent states. The south had the right to secede, despite all the debate, it has never been debatable, the experts are wrong, the secession was constitutional and thus legal.

Abraham Lincoln holding on to the union was no different then Putin taking back Ukraine against it's will today. It was Lincoln who tore down our whole constitution. He had droves of founding documents like George Washington's personal letters, destroyed, he knew he was upending the republic, he pushed his unitary agenda despite knowing it was unconstitutional. There's nothing for the democrats today to wonder, we've had a constitutional crises our whole lives and you can't vote your way out of a constitutional crises.

The election of 1860 was a regime change, Donald Trump isn't doing anything that Lincoln didn't do. The Gettysburg address was a conscious coup, we went from a compact of confederate republics with a Federal high gear, to a centralized corporate system. The republican party of Lincoln astroturfed our entire founding and historians have played along with the abolition narrative but the party founded by Monroe, Madison, and Jefferson, was and is the republican party, based the government of the Roman Republic from which we come, all Americans are republicans, but the republican party is not.

Lincoln was not a good president or person, his party is anti-states rights, anti-republican, anti-patriot, anti-American, they are the party of insider dealing, banks and trans-continental business, Lincolns party maps directly with the royalists who remained loyal to the crown. This republican party was against the war in world war 2, not bc they were pro-German, but bc they're anti-American, they're anti-everything, they are pro-business only, they are the capitalist class.

Nothing we think about the republicans is true, the party is a sick joke. The republican party we've known all our lives, has always been in name only. They aren't for limited government, are you kidding me? When's the last time a republican president reduced the centralized power and all the federal intervention? It's never happened in the party's history, since Lincoln, not a single republican has actually made government smaller. They don't not regulate, they regulate unions and labor and health care, they just do the opposite of what they should with those things, they're the opposite on everything.

The party of Lincoln, was the one party in rule for gilded age and the labor wars, they replaced the treasury with private banking, and had our economy in the gutter for 65 years, and that didn't stop them from creating the IMF and World Bank. Capitalism will never work if capitalists are running it, we need better people making our policy, they exported a failed system globally after world war 2, we crashed 20 years later. This is dystopia, this is 80 years of US policy.

We live under Lincoln's corporate regime, we have been colonized by these corporations, our founders were labor party leaders, today we suffer under Tory rule.

The Tory Republic

Lincoln started federal income taxes, got the whole financial sector going with speculative lending, and junk bonds etc. and war profiteering was invented by the north in our civil war, they killed the fourth largest economy in the world to usurp all the US economic power under one federal regime. Lincoln's Republican party came to power with a federal business agenda, and with the railroads connecting New York to San Francisco, the industrial age of America was ready to kick it into high gear, the age of big government was upon us.

The difference between slaves and serfs is you don't buy and sell serfs, they just come with the land. Slavery's time on this earth came and went, Lincoln didn't end slavery, that was a product of history. What Lincoln did was he leveraged the issue into an electoral victory for a platform that would never get elected, still to this day, it's a party that should get 10% of the vote, it's dog shit. The north failed to see the forest for the trees, and the southern democrats have been failing since the civil war.

Slaves are expensive and might escape, or worse kill you. Capitalism through, capitalism keeps us dull docile and dumb, we believe it has legitimacy that it simply doesn't have, we need a higher caliber of politicians, that's all there is to it. We need real republicans, we need what we were before that stove pipe wearing shitbag came to power.

We were founded by born Statesmen, they were humans with flaws, but still no one can honestly criticize them for anything, we really need to appreciate our Massachusetts bay and Virginia founding. Even in some of the less successful administrations, like John Adams and his sons John Quincy, the men we had at president were all truly great and talented politicians, we didn't get our first bad president until John Tyler in 1840. Popularity polls don't mean anything, the fact of the matter is since our first 8 presidents we haven't had a president that could crack our top 8, we were a vulnerable little nation rewriting the book while empires were circling like sharks, but we figured it out. Now we're an industrial super power that can't find it's way out of a paper bag. Our presidents used to do more with less, now we have nothing but rhetoric. Our presidents are businessmen, they are capitalists and capitalists will ruin government, they can't do anything but fail, their margins exist in error.

Judge for yourself but if you actually look point blank, we haven't had a good economy since we stopped shipping cotton to England. We basically conquered the world in world war 2 and it's been a steady decline ever since.

Capitalists can't run capitalism, and they certainly can't navigate the complexities of diplomacy and policy, the world has become a dangerous place again, we can no longer afford to humor this failed, system. Our constitution has been null and void since the civil war, Trump has doubled down with his invalid oath of office. The system crashed and burned in 2008, the system never had a chance, not since the civil war.

I do not deny the south succeed to retain slavery, and I do not deny the party switch, but I believe in the southern lost cause, to me Abraham Lincoln is the myth. Any party that purposely campaigns differently then they will govern and then ushers in a coup, can't be the idealistic fantasy that the GOP always has been. Nothing about the republican party is true, it's not a republican party in any way shape or form, the solution is republicanism, the solution is limited government, but they are corporate global rentier, corruption and usury class, they are Tories. The Lincolnian Republicans had no concern for the slaves, they had no concern for labor, they had no concern for anything American at all, including and especially the constitution.

The party of James Madison, James Monroe and Thomas Jefferson were the republican party, they were our patriot founders and we are the posterity of that preamble, we are the direct descents of ancient Rome. Abraham Lincoln isn't just the worst president in US history, bc of our victory in the world wars he is the most damaging world figure in at least the last 400 years. Everything wrong with the world today can be traced back to when Lincoln took office. Honest Abe the corporate attorney, married to an heiress 8 years his senior and by many accounts likely carried on lifelong sexual affairs with several men, he was the proto-robber baron, closet homo, douche in a suit, Abraham Lincoln is world histories first capitalist world leader.

Lincoln overthrew our founders. It's staring us in the face. We are not a republic we suffered a hostile takeover, we're a hedgefund with a state, we are lawless, unjust and untrue the party of Trump is the party of Lincoln, they are not the party of our founders, they are not us. A long time ago and half a globe away, while we were still very young, our lives were in danger but our great grandmother bought us time by feeding our great grandfather a rock. Zeus went on to topple the titans and the gods have held power atop mount Olympus ever since, Achilles, Jason, Marcus Brutus, Cromwell, The Minute Men, it's all one history. John Wilkes Booth was the last true republican, we are the founding fathers sons, we are the grandsons of liberty, we were atroturfed before birth, but this moment has been destined since the beginning of time.

249 and 81, we're one minute to midnight, and not a moment to soon...

Sic Semper Tyranus, it's time for America to get heavy again.

Section IV – Iron & Blood

“In France things are different, there this individual independence is lacking. A constitutional crisis would not be disgraceful, but honorable instead. – We are perhaps too "well-educated" to support a constitution; we are too critical; There are a lot of conspiratorial characters who have a great interest in upheavals. This may sound paradoxical, but everything proves how hard constitutional life is in Prussia. One is too sensitive about the government's mistakes. Public opinion changes, the press is not the same as public opinion; one knows how the press is written; members of parliament have a higher duty, to lead opinion, to stand above.

Germany is not looking to Prussia's liberalism, but to its power; Prussia has to coalesce and concentrate its power for the opportune moment, which has already been missed several times; it is not by speeches and majority resolutions that the great questions of the time are decided, but by iron and blood.”

*Otto Von Bismark
Prussian Parliamentary Address
Sept. 30, 1862*

12 - January 6

Here's the thing about January 6, people on the left criticize the day for being an insurrection, people on the right say it was a peaceful protest. Everyone is operating off the baseline assumption that overthrowing the government is wrong. It's the only thing anyone in this country can agree on, that it would have been wrong for January 6 to be an insurrection.

We have a two party corporate monopolized sham democracy, money owns politics, agencies are staffed by the companies they're supposed to be regulating, bills are written by private interests, the Fed pays private shareholders dividends, law makers are just spokesmen for big business. It's been scientifically proven that our votes are meaningless, political influence isn't coming back on its own. The economy went belly up in 2008, We have only have one solution and that is insurrection, that's what was right about January 6. Jan 6 was an insurrection and insurrection is good.

January 6 was the best day for this country in any of our lives and it's bc it was an insurrection. Fuck this ruling class, why am I the only one saying that? Get off the hamster wheel, meaningful pointed action, insurrection, revolution, reframe, refit the constitution. How is everyone in agreement against that? We need to overthrow this order, we need a new constitutional republic.

I get it about public statements, say what you have to say but don't go believing your own BS, January 6 was an insurrection bc we need an insurrection. Coup d' tat followed by constitutional convention, nothing more American then that and nothing short of that is American. The country isn't fixed, and we all need to agree as to why, it's bc Jan 6 isn't done, but revolutions don't happen in a day.

The actual insurrection was a success, the rioters got there, they did everything they were tasked with. Even the cops, even Mike Pence, especially Mike Pence, there is only one person who failed that day and that is the man who called for it, Donald Gay Chump.

The 2000 Election: Gore v Bush

The prescient was set in 2000, that race was decided by 5 electoral votes, flipping any state gives it to Gore, and he just might have, we'll never know, bc Gore couldn't get a recount in Florida. The entire state was decided by 537 votes, multiple ballot issues, Jeb Bush was governor which is already a conflict of interests.

Conflict of interests is corruption, it's become so normalized that we don't see anything wrong with for example Trump's family making about $2 billion a month since he took office, after not making anything since the last time he was office, or ever in his life. Corruption compromises and delegitimizes the whole system, it weakens the nation, and any president acting that way is not serving their office.

We need to start treating corruption seriously, freedom is not free, it takes work, tolerance is sloppiness, The truth is a taught balance between barbarism and decadence. It's a high line, the American skyline. Our nation needs to become intolerant again.

5-4 is a famous number but it wasn't that the supreme court decided the outcome of the election 5-4, that's what they stopped the recount by. They just stopped the democratic process when it at the very least is would have confirmed a free and fair election, we are not a democracy, we're a kangaroo theocracy.

The supreme court has been an abject failure, one of the easiest things to fix is the judiciary, we simply don't need it, the legislature makes law in the rare case something needs to change at the federal level, we shouldn't be litigating back and fourth, we should be governing. Legislation is for governance, reform happens naturally over time.

The 2020 Election

Politicians use the courts, they did it in 2000, that's what Trump would have done in 2020. Trump has used the courts his whole career, just look at how he's using them now. He spent November and December 2020 publicly saying the election was stolen and he even tried to show evidence, but no one went for it, so he just dropped it and kept going, but that was the best evidence he could come up with. He can't know the election is stolen without evidence, so obviously he knew he was lying. Trump of course is a liar, that's something his supporters have liked about him, Trump lives by critical Trump theory, the left invented it, he perfected it, and that's not even the problem.

This is how stupid Trump is, the election wasn't stolen, but that's not stopping this supreme court from giving it to him, or making some other bogus ruling that gave Trump some action. In 2000 they prevented confirmation of a free and fair election and this current judiciary has been diametrically opposed to justice, especially in support of Donald Trump. They have been pulling prescient out of their leather asses plus exerting brute force on states like Colorado, which was both unconstitutional and un-state rights.

Trump didn't need evidence, if he takes it to the box, he has the same Tory conservative apparatus behind him that built this supreme court. The coup already happened, McCarthy, Powell, Nixon these guys can only exist in a shadow government. There's nothing stopping the supreme court from openly giving Trump something to work with, they might even have given him the presidency.

Trump doesn't do that though, he doesn't do the political/system thing in the system he's in. It's an absurd claim, how do you rig an election against the incumbent? But Ok, Trump does the revolutionary thing, he goes for the coup d'etat and to his credit that is the solution.

Podcasters, fox, you name it, half the country got on board with "Stop the steal"(registered in 2016). Trump schedules his rally for the day and time of the ceremonial certification of the vote. At that rally Trump ignites what still could be a new American Revolution, insurrection and new constitution.

President is the head of the executive branch, Trump was still president, its telling that from all the branches of military, intelligence and law enforcement no one inside backed or helped him. Our federal law enforcement does not seem particularly bound by law, yet no one wanted to support Trump. I think Trump should have just listened to the enforcement arms, but as the gurrella commander Che Guerva said "The revolution is not like a fruit that will fall when it is ripe, you have to make it fall." Sometimes you just have to dig in with what you got and they did.

Insurrection

Trump fires up and sets off an American patriot force, They took the capital building that hasn't fallen since Cockburn came down the river in 1814.

The insurrectionists succeeded, they got there, I don't think anyone appreciates how profound that is. Americans were in the American capital for the first time since Van Buren was in office. You can see the empty chambers of congress in those selfie videos, the hard part was over, all that was left was for Trump to hold court....

From all over the country people came to support the man who would be king and they did it. They parted and held the red sea, but Trump never got there. His rally, his rioters, his insurrection, on the other side that's his cops sworn to defend him, he was still the president, that was his capital building. The day was won, but he never showed up. Trump knew to get there too he was demanding that secret service escort him to the capital building, but they're getting different orders, they don't apprehend him, but they won't escort him. He was still completely safe, he could have made that walk, the whole place is a gated community, it's a walk down the street, but without secret service he wouldn't go.

He is swearing at his secret service, demanding that they bring him to the capital, but they didn't go for it, so he didn't go, without protection he's not going to the insurrection he called for, at his capital, he instead goes back with them to the white house and then watches his own insurrection on his own propagand channel. The way we are, is the way we are, weak and stupid are synonymous, Donald Trump is the stupidest person to ever get a single electoral vote, in hindsight its no surprise that he is the weakest president we've ever had. Trump is a bloody pussy with a bloody pussy.

If you have a problem with what I'm saying come look me up anytime, but I'm not criticizing the rioters or the insurrection, just the opposite I'm saying that's exactly what we need, but what I'm saying is that Donald Trump was never going to be the guy, bc if he could be, he would be, there's nothing more then meets the eye. It checks out that Trump likes Putin so much, Trump is untermensch too.

The Collapse of the first republic

It was a good run, but everyone needs to understand that it's over for the first republic, even good politicians can't save this system and our politicians aren't good, the constitution is null and void, Trumps oath of office is invalid. The law is not the truth, we have righteous cause, insurrection is the answer, but Trump isn't the guy, if he was he would have been. It should have been Trump pushing through that last barrier, Ashli Bibbit's life is on him.

Hes' still the sitting president, no one is shooting him, chambers of congress cleared, he should have held court and reframed the constitution right there, but Trump is a fraud, a flunkie and a fool, that's what he was born, that's what he will die. Let's make it happen, Donald Trump failed his own coup, he's the only person who failed. He failed his rioters, he failed his cops, he failed his military, he failed the secret service, he failed the entire nation that day.

Don't blame the FBI for following up, they're doing their jobs and at that point it's not hard. We're living under big brothers surveillance, it's just privately owned but in state sanctioned capitalism which is just a buffer. Don't blame investigators, and don't blame those cops, what are they supposed to do other than their sworn job?

Donald Trump didn't warn the cops bc he didn't care about the cops just like he didn't care about the rioters. If Trump did care, Bibbit wouldn't be dead and he wouldn't have just commuted those sentences. Trump has served his purpose, he is the demagogue for the collapse, he has fully invalidated the supreme court, the constitution, and exposed both parties for the drippy dipshits they are. There's no defending this republican party, that's always been the case, it's just completely undeniably apparent bc of Donald Trump, who himself was undeniably on display January 6. Mike Pence was in mortal danger and he hung in there, Trump was the only person in all of Washington who was in no danger, and he was too scared to go to his own coup inauguration. Trump should have been leading the way, no Americans had to die that day, but Trump is not a commander in Chief, he's not an executive, or an admin, or a statesman, or a bureaucrat, he's untermensch.

The VP and the President swear the same oath. Our whole executive branch like the legislative and Judicial is completely and factually and provably illegitimate and illegal. It's only bc we have a Mikey Mouse Secret Service that Trump wasn't just killed on the spot in 2021 during his own failed insurrection.

Trump couldn't get a security escort, so he went back to the whitehouse and watched his own insurrection on fox news. Who watches their own propaganda channel? Donald Trump is the weakest and stupidest president we've ever had. That is a statement of fact, Trump proved it. He failed his own insurrection when everything went off perfectly, and then he watched his own botched coup on his own propaganda channel. Donald Trump is subhuman.

13 - Strong Men & Dunces Caps

What is the definition of a great man?

We can be sure it's both nature and nurture, if it was just genetic, idiot sons wouldn't be a pandemic, running parallel to that is without talent you're not going anywhere, but talent has to be developed. It's a myth that it's easy for people who are good at things, it only looks like that because they've trained/studied whatever it is until it's ingrained. Talented people have to work harder, but that's good, that's purpose in and of itself, everything is something, be that someone.

Great men make history interesting, and they're better milestones than dates and numbers, but it's not the actions of great men that drive history. The Chinese call it the problem of the good emperor, when they're in power they do well by their people, but there is no status quo every day is a new day, what do you do after the great leader is gone?

Political Philosophy

The French revolution turned into madness, until Napoleon created nationalism, the keystone of national sovereignty. "Valeur et Discipline" is virtue.

A generation of Germans grew up watching the Grande Armée and then their era was marked by Otto Von Bismarck unifying the German empire. Napoleon III in his jealousy decided he would not be ignored, it ended with the German flag flying over Versailles. Years later Von Bismarck was dismissed for criticizing Wilhelm II who was in an arms race with his cousin George V. On his exit, Bismarck predicted a great war, and 25 years later Silly Willy fumbled his way into what is now called world war 1 against his cousins Nicholas and the same King George.

The allies won and the terms of Germany's surrender were decided at the treaty of Versailles, but Germany was allowed no representation because of the sour grapes still felt for the shellacking of Napoleon's moron nephew.

So Germany was already broken, busted and angry for the roaring 1920's and then the New York stock market crashes the entire globe, but what limitations? 20 years of preparation and then the single Nazi state pulled the whole world out of the great depression, Japan and Germany conquered the industrialized world but then we conquered them. Leaving us the first global empire.

FDR was not a class trader, he actually left the Tory's hanging around, that has been lethal twice now, it was Truman who sold out the working class and the American people. Our banking Tory elites couldn't wait to take their failed model world wide and that's exactly what happened.

Liberalism is a gay Tory retard, neoliberalism is the gay Tory's son, it didn't turn out any better, we're in serfdom, capitalism can be a good economic system, it is not a good political philosophy, and it's simply wrong ideologically, we are a collective, we are the nation, we are Patriots. We need bury the Tory's for good this time. Liberal elites don't like liberty and capitalists can't run capitalism, the enlightenment is running pretty dim.

Great men simply ignore the things that don't matter, they address the actually issues, with actually operable solutions, great men stabilize, whatever situation they come into the public sphere by, they're getting command over the turbulence that sociologists call "societal forces." It's chaos theory, human history is chaos until a born statesman streamlines everything into order and from there navigates through thick and thin while passing reforms and establishing institutions.

The natural state of civilization is inertia, stable society's don't destabilize on their own, it takes a power vacuum, someone in power has to fall from grace, it might happen fast or slow, but power vacuums are locally grown. Civilizations aren't conquered, they cannibalize themselves.

We've confused ceremony for substance, tolerance isn't an end, what are we tolerating, who are we tolerating it for? The greatness of the nation is our greatness in this life, liberalism is undemocratic, it's a pageantry masking gangrene rot, we need to get serious with our political discourse.

We want science, we want to invest in education and the right to revolution is a human right that we're simply going to take and thus we have. The rest of the enlightenment has been an abject failure.

We have two parties that keep getting more corporate and gayer and that's bc that's what neoliberalism is, social justice and global commerce.

Baby boomers

The reason that competent leaders don't sign failed policy and bad leaders do, isn't luck. Anyone conscious can see where decisions are going to lead before they happen. Failed policy, failed wars, and failure to adapt, is what moves mankind, it's idiot sons that turn the wheels of time.

Some people were predicting where neoliberalism was heading in the 80's, they couldn't find a platform, even today good people get drowned out. There was heavy off grid rebel action in the 80's bc Ronald Reagan was never going to be the answer. We do ourselves no favors when we pretend Reagan wasn't just a corporate shill reading a teleprompter.

Everything wrong with our society was predicted before it happened. Bill Clinton had advisors telling him that if they didn't regulate online sales, it would be a lot of failed firms with a couple super monopolies at the top. We didn't even have to wait long, 2001 should have been a reality check, but instead of regulating the internet, Bush signed off on deregulating the brick and mortar housing that was the hard currency of the whole system.

"The Department of War" sounds less badass then "The Department of Defense," "The Gulf of America" isn't better then "The Gulf of Mexico" Trump fakes it, he fakes everything, remember the 1776 project? Trump is not a nationalist, he's a populist, he's a fraud. W. Bush should have just come with it, no one cares about Iraqi freedom, who are we kidding? "Operation pack out sand niggers" wouldn't ever need conscription.

Our goal is the truth no more, no less. If we were going to invade Iraq, which isn't necessarily a bad idea, then we're there to win, we're there to kill, there's no international law, our job is to protect ours, advance ours, and secure ours.

The way we are is the way we should be, we care about our black and brown people, but even half of our black and brown people would have a blast wasting Arabs in 3rd world shitholes. We don't give a fuck about your Jews, we don't give a fuck your Germans, there's nothing greater than the truth, we reserve the right to bring the pain.

W. Bush bought his own bullshit, even the democrats bought into Reagan's bullshit, Nixon, Truman, even FDR, he was a capitalist class liberal elite, the greatest one we've had, but still. His greatest achievement I would hope isn't saving capitalism. Lincoln was bullshit, Trump is bullshit, we need to stop buying our ruling classes garbage, they're wrong about everything.

The baby boomers are the idiot sons of history and Trump is their king. Fred Trump was a dishonest yet sharp, meticulous and shrewd business man, he was a poor mans version of JD Rockefeller. Fred Trump would be ashamed of his son today, we all should be.

Getting the job of president isn't succeeding, most powerful people in history have been failures, Donald Trump is no exception and its not hard to see why, he's a fucking slob hes the exact opposite of his father.

Something we all need to accept is your parents, my parents, all of us in this upcoming ruling generation, our parents are the most failed generation in history. They were given the world, and as soon as they came onto the scene they started failing in the most epic and impossible ways, they continue it today. AI is the anti-antidote to all of our issues.

We need to topple this ruling class, and bring an iron backhand to these tech hoers. Get them asses back in line, broke off and turned out, our co's make us our money.

Josip "Tito" Boz

Trump's wife is a mail order bride from Yugoslavia which isn't even a country anymore, but the reason you have heard of the name "Tito" is because of the Yugoslavian president Josip Boz. Easily the greatest leader of the 20th century, Boz fought the Nazi's, fought Stalin, created and held together Yugoslavia during the cold war, on the soviet side with Stalin wanting to kill him, and somehow he pulled off getting money from both the Soviet Union and the US. This was a communist who Stalin wanted to kill, and he played both sides. Stalin was red rust, Boz was the blued steel.

Boz tortured two Russian hit men to death and then Stalin couldn't get anyone to take the assignment, so he just gave up, that's how you handle the KGB. I hesitate to call Joseph McCarthy a drunken baboon, bc that would be insulting to monkey's everywhere, but you get the point, he was a cracker jack crack pot. Yugoslavia was 6 city nations, with basically 2 Nazi groups and 2 Bolshevik groups, including Bosnia which where the count and his wife were shot point blank to set off world war 1, and then was the site of a genocidal civil war following Boz's death.

Boz put together Yugoslavia out of all of that, while dealing with Nazi and Soviet occupations, he led a fierce resistance against the Nazis, who really never held the area, and then ran the country for 40 years while everything else was falling apart around them. You're telling me we can't smooth over our left/right divide? Yugoslavia didn't even all speak the same languages.

Boz made it to 87 passing away in 1980 and now Yugoslavia is 6 terrorist states again, we don't hear a lot of news about them, our ruling class doesn't want us exposed to white lead political violence, but it's out there. We come from the maritime European forces, the land forces are still in Europe today.

We've been waging gurrella campaigns for the better part of 1200 years now, half the people in this country are born rebel insurgents, political violence is simply who we are. Boz was the true iron fist socialist and they had a functional "Market/Socialist" hybrid economy, De Gaulle in France and Franco in Spain, both fascists, and Mannerheim in Finland, a socialist, were the other great leaders of the 20th century. Not a single capitalist would even be an honorable mention, not outside of capitalist propaganda, capitalists are a joke, we're prevented from seeing what leaders really look like though.

Market principles have their place, but capitalists can't do shit, not right at least.

Great Leaders

Great men, great leaders, are violent bureaucrats. They're all either social fascists, or fascist socialists, they are violent bureaucrats, that's the answer to the question I asked at the top of the chapter (and social fascists sound like fascists who could still throw a good party), great men bring violence and leave institutions, whatever you think about that, it is the truth, violence and institutions are the independent nation state. Constructive violence reduces conflict and solves problems, violence saves lives, and violence or the threat thereof writes and enforces legislation. The pen coordinates the sword, the sword enforces the pen, everything is political violence.

Think of all the life that was lost bc we didn't just cut our newest allies Germany and Japan free and go finish what world war 2 was supposed to be about. Ukraine, Georgia, Belarus, even Russia, would be better for it if we'd just wrecked the Soviet Union when Stalin showed his hand. This invasion of Ukraine is in no small part on us. We had a solution that was even keel, just and true, no cold war, no nuclear proliferation, no north Korea, no slush niggers, it was perfect.

Don't listen to what anyone says, these last 80 years have been the most untrue, sick and inhuman in history, being against violence is no different then a refusal to consider reasonable compromise, it's project kick the can down the road, our whole system is set to keep us ineffectual, while the ruling class stays insulated.

The people in power are not legitimate, the left was weak and now it's stupid too, the right was stupid and now it's weak.

It's ok, bc that was the baby boomers, the baby boomers vote republican bc they're stupid, they vote democrat bc they're weak, the baby boomers are the idiot sons of history. They are the most failed generation this world will ever know, but we are not our parents we are the generation to carry this nation through it's collapse and build it back on the other side, we are the inheritors of the right to revolution, we are the sons of time.

Che Guerva, Ben Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Napoleon, Bismark, Cromewell, all men of military and bureaucracy. The Huns are famous for their violence but they were bureaucrats, Geingis Khan was a historic politician before he was ever a general. The Qin Dynasty is 12k years old it invented institutional structure, just like it developed the first professional army, today we know the Qin as China, they are the longest standing empire.

It's to bad they've become such a bag of dicks, otherwise I'd be rooting for them, they've been around all of recorded history, but they still seek vengeance for the opium wars and as far as they're concerned we're still a part of the British Empire. Their culture is one to hold a grudge, we need to not take anything about them lightly.

They're a totalitarian surveillance state, the "organized crime" that's making the base fentanyl and getting it into the US is operating with the support of the CCP. China is not our friend, they remember what we did to them. Civilizations don't get conquered, they commit suicide. It's idiot sons who sign the failed policies and declarations of war, we should appreciate that, we've been watching the baby boomers in power our whole lives.

Great men are rare, but they really don't do anything hard to quantify, they use violence bc it works and the install institutions bc that's how you successfully run a state, bureaucracy is the state, military is the nation. Great men throughout history, have not been businessmen, they've been statesmen and generals, they're violent bureaucrats.

Strongmen

What strongmen do is they use state power on civilians, they're the opposite of terrorist and that's where the word comes from, it's projection. Who strikes more fear in the heart of tyrant, the reformer or the revolutionary? Strongmen don't care that they're wrong, there's no compromise, reformers do them favors, they're a non threatening example to be made of and they subdue movements. Any system way to fix the system has already been preempted. How are we going to frame and ratify a constitution in this mess? Everyone calling for peaceful protest is a useful idiot.

Strongmen don't care about truth or justice, they create their own truth, but they live in the same world of fear that they rule by, bring terror to bare on the man who rules by fear. Strong men get strong treatment, then you find out.

Strong men use military force and state intelligence on their own people and they control the resources like food, education, jobs, to manipulate and weaken the masses, they harm the people they're suppose to be advancing. It works on the surface, they kill, exile or imprison their political competition and presumably they have oil or coffee or some other export commodity that gives them some global protection.

The irony of the strongman though is for all their absolute power everything they do is just about staying in power. Bad wars, bad policy, dunce cap inner circle, autocratic rule comes at the cost of merit, there's no bigger threat to the dictator than the talented subordinate, there's no legitimacy, no competence, no nothing.

Trump's regime is an example of this. Every good person has resigned or been fired, he silences the truth, his inner circle has a couple guys that know what they're doing, but by and large they don't. Rubio has four jobs that he can probably barely do one, and he got those jobs bc Trump owns him, Rubio is morally bust and the truth is he always was, it just has been exposed by Trump. There isn't a single person in the Republican party that can be trusted to put nation over themselves, and remember the nation isn't suppose to serve it's leaders, it's the other way around.

There's not a single dick in all of the congress or senate, 3 defectors could impeach and indict, they've been neutered though. Arrange a 3 person coup and start carrying firearms, you don't need a personal security detail, all Americans are born with the right to bare arms. The defense for guns is guns, and strong men get strong treatment.

Trump's whole administration knows it's illegitimate. Only Vought, Miller and Bessent actually have a clue and I'm not sure what they're trying to accomplish, they can't think much of Trump though, no one does.

What's JD Vance fucked up today? He talks big, but when there's actually work to do- he was non combat and Peter Thiel is the one who sought Vance out, that's called peepin game. Vance is easy pickings bc he's weak, unethical, grew up without a father, he has no loyalty, no principles, not to mention seriously looking like he struggles with synaptic nerve and/or concussive brain damage from all the dick and dope his mother took when he was in the womb.

This regime is incompetent and compromised, everything they do is self serving political maneuvering, The whole command structure is Trump yes men, The only worse situation for police or military in the world is being conscripted into Russia's army. Stand down for America 2.0 or go down with America 1.0, Trump doesn't have a fucking clue, but he will sacrifice everyone and everything, he's already done it.

Autocrats can't admit ever doing wrong, a single chink in the armor and it all comes down, all they do is fail. It's not hard to steal money when you're the head of state, autocrats end up surrounded by yes men, Trump is even firing people who report statistics. It is impossible for his administration to make good decisions, they either don't have or won't act on true information.

Napoleon had other historic commanders under him. Washington recruited both Hamilton and Jefferson into his cabinet. Talent begets talent, strongmen are dumb as rocks, and soft as mud, they're slush nigger slugs.

Autocrats live in their own censored world, they actually go in for their own propaganda, no one will tell them bad news or contradict them when they're wrong. There's internal conflicts, nothing gets done. Strong men are stupid people, with incompetent assistants and weak states. It goes until it doesn't, it goes until they're met by state level force.

Winter War 1939

In the 1930's after Germany and the Soviets split up Poland, Russia starts pushing up on the Baltic's and then Finland, but the Fins wouldn't play ball, so Russia invades with what was the one of the worlds most modern armies, going against Finland's mismatched hand me down 19th century equipment. It was 5k tanks and almost 4k planes against 32 tanks and 114 aircraft. You should already be sensing how this is going to play out, and you're right. On paper advantages mattered just as little then as they do now.

It's almost a blessing when a country gets invaded, everyone is forced to drop everything except the one true ideology: Nationalism and the one true action: Violence. Even when big invading armies win they usually get their faces kicked in and Finland didn't disappoint.

Gustaf Mannerheim was Marshall of the White Army, Finland was guerrillas on skis, but they worked with what they had, they trapped tanks, fought in the woods, froze out and starved out troops, their most famous ad-hoc weapon was the the Molotov Cocktail, it's an anti-tank weapon that still can work today, named for the same of the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact.

Ultimately the Fins did have to surrender and the winter fighting helped prepare the soviets for the Nazi's, but taking Finland came at the cost of 1 million Russian casualties, which is like 200K people.

It might sound corny about Mannerheim and Finland but it really was team work, they counted on each other and they were there for each other, we're not solo market operators, purpose is doing things for others. If Finland had half the material that Russia brought, they would have won. Money does make a difference, but all the money in the world will never buy the thing we call heart.

And as it turns out a million casualties was just a warm up.

Operation Barbarossa

Talk about a dunce cap parade, the sun is going to burn out before there's ever carnage on this earth that matches the eastern theater. A maniac and a moron with absolute power and not a single dissenting voice between the two regimes.

Because the transition of power is predicated on their death, Strongmen live with a constant paranoia, it's why powerful men really can go mad. It puts the regime under tremendous stress, no one trusts anyone, no one actually believes in the system, and how could they? Everything could be a set up. Even someone not trying to usurp the throne has to worry about being perceived as a threat, and there's nothing more dangerous to the strong man then the competent politician.

All authoritarian regimes struggle with internal information, the kingpin breaks up the communication between his inner circle to control them, and no one will deliver honest information to the despot, especially when things go bad. We see this with Trump, his administration was intentionally filled with stupid people.

The KGB was all throughout Germany like they are with us, Stalin knew about operation Barbarossa while it was being planned and he knew when the Panzer divisions started rolling towards Stalingrad, but sometimes strong men turn out to be less than advertised, that's why strength gets verified, the man named for steel turned out to be slush nigger mush.

Stalin received multiple confirming reports, at first he's still not believing what he's hearing, he's rationalizing that Hitler doesn't want a two front war, and that they were "friends." Hitler even wrote about war with Russia in "Mein Kampf," it took weeks to dawn on Stalin that it was real, and then the next thing he does is lock himself in his office for a week long drinking binge.

That was the spot for real leadership to step up or some ambitious wannabe autocrat, but no one did anything, there was no despot, no statesmen, no lieutenant, just slush nigger mush in the bejeweled dildo dome capital of the world. Stalin had so purged everyone that there was no one willing to step up, the soviets were headless for a week and then Stalin finally got himself together and sent 10s of millions of soviets to their deaths. Russian Military doctrine paraphrased, but not exaggerated could be "We have more people than you have bullets, and your bullets are worth more than our people."

Russia today celebrates ww2 like that was their victory, they know they're subhuman, we need to understand that too, the Soviet union only survived with our aid.

Civil service Off ramp

Overthrowing Trump's administration gives an off ramp for people who are in the civil service for the right reasons, there can't be anyone legitimate working for the federal government that wants to keep going down this path. This is an off ramp.

This was destined at the end of world war 2. The baby boomers are the idiot sons of history, they were given the world and they doubled down on every mistake and failed at every opportunity and now their time is done, there's no more rope.

Che Guevara's legacy has been bastardized and commercialized, but he was a medical doctor in south America, he could have been a top tier elite professional in basically a feudal kingdom. He wasn't going to live like that when so many people had so little, Guevara's life had purpose, there's no one in the united states today that can say the same, but liberal elites just have to come down from the tower, and packing an AK never hurt nobody.... No one important at least, violence is bad for the other guy. I'm telling you all leftists have some Jacobin in them. "Guillotine Wall street" could be a unifying cause for our beleaguered nation, where's your Jacobin spirit left??

Look what's happening in the US now, strong men have weak states, do we really want to end up like Russia? That's what Trump wants. We're suffering from talent flight, everything is breaking, everyone is stupid and Trump's trying to keep it together with muscle. Trump dodged the draft 5 times, he's a bloody pussy with a bloody pussy and strong men get strong treatment, it's time we gut his fat ass.

Trump's leadership dooms his followers to failure, but he has served his purpose, Trump compacted 40-60 years of party building into 8, there's no question about what the solution is, yesterday was too early, but tomorrow is today.

Trump was necessary up to this point now, and look what he's done, we just have the Fox News team standing between us and revolution. We have a completely morally bankrupt and un-American Republican party, and the Democrats are scrapping the bottom of the barrel for more minorities to promote. We're not losing anything, we have a lock win.

Don't listen to our historians, they're no better than the conspiracy theorists, they're blinded by ideological agenda too. Lincoln was an illegitimate and illegal president, and he usurped our constitutional forefathers for this global business class. We're post-constitutional, I say good, because strong men get strong treatment, it's time to start snapping the necks that move history.

Whadamir Whattabitch Pussy

Putin looks more sophisticated than he is, capitalism exploits itself, it's by definition a prepackaged group of competing and unethical individuals trying to beat the system they're a part of. Capitalists have no allegiance to the home state, and because they operate on a quarterly cycle they're hopelessly short-sighted. Capitalism is made to sell out.

When the USSR collapsed, our system broke itself open, our capitalists were seeking them out, most of the people in Russia lost to the west, but the west lost to the Russian oligarchs. The oligarchs who secured the fields and mines, pimped out the whole globe. The transactions were illegal but our bankers don't care about that, and they wouldn't understand ethics if it punched them in the mouth. It wasn't hard for Putin to have everyone owned, Trump is guaranteed to have been compromised, but he wasn't even the breach, it goes back all the way to the Manhattan project honestly, it was Winston Churchill.

Our elected officials and bankers are more anti-west and anti-rule of law than any Russian oligarch. The cold war was the capitalist class against labor, everything is the ruling class against us.

Putin is a cold-hearted bastard, I'm sure he doesn't lose sleep when he has people thrown out windows and I even think he could kill someone by his own hand, but Putin isn't strong, he's surrounded by weakness, seriously look at his inner circle. Those Russian thugs were tough in the 90's, they've gotten soft though. Capitalism got the KGB just as good as the KGB got capitalism and Putin's advisors are crony corrupt idiots, all the Russian oligarchs are and were under Putin's thumb, he was most of the west under his thumb, but not Prygozhyn. Strong men get strong treatment, that's why Wagner mutinied, Prygozhyn knew Putin would crack.

Wagner had the Soviet forces completely overmatched, they were really the only legitimate war-fighting units in Russia, but it's that state-level conflict that brings men who are less than strong to their knees and thus Putin panicked.

I think they've buried the video, just like they've buried the story, bc I can't find it now, but when Wagner was heading up the 101, Putin did his thing, made his public denouncement, sent out some jets and attack helicopters. Wagner knocked them out of the sky like they were playing video games, the drivers didn't even have to take their feet off the accelerators.

That tripped something for Putin, he full on sprinted, still in his suit, down one of those huge halls and out the back of the Kremlin. It was on youtube, maybe someone still has it, it was defiantly recorded and up for a minute. Putin denies it now, but he was wheels up when Lukashenko cut that deal to end the mutiny. Putin was wearing rifle armor under his suits in public for the couple weeks after that. Prygozhyn spooked him. Probably still haunts Putin's dreams. Actually is kind of creepy, Prygozhyn will forever haunt the Kremlin kitchen.

Strong men get strong treatment, Putin is about as hard as egg shells, his callous disregard for life is a product of reigning over the untermensch kingdom. Now Prygozhyns is dead, Wagner is all dead and Russia isn't better for it. The strong man internal politics always come at the expense of everything, including ability. In the end it would seem Putin is all the same pitted rust that Stalin ever was.

Putin is a bitch with the levers of a shithole state that happens to have a lot of cannon fodder and oil, Putin is the ultimate strongman, a mushy faced inbred midget, with something worth a lot of money to the capitalist class. Capitalists and communists really are equal but they are not equal.

Vladimir Putin has the cash and credit for his war to continue forever. The West is going to fund its own invasion, Putin controls the west, bc he controls the money, it's Templar style imperialism, but he didn't have to be a genius, we just had to be weak and we have been.

Strong Men Get Strong Treatment

When strong men fall is when they're met by state force.

Strong men can't survive a peer power war, peer rivals have their own intelligence gathering, can sanction and blockade them, meet them for symmetrical state combat. Once on an even playing field, now the strong man has to play a chess match without good advisors, the whole inner circle is just there to plunder the home state, it's a dunce cabinet. Plus depending on the propaganda strength much of their population might be rooting for the other side.

Worse yet are the home grown militant movements, bc they're the real representatives of the nation. All the powers of state are for not when when a ruling class fails to divide it's people. Strong men are the terrorists, the solution is solidarity and force, we need to punch up we need to bring the gurellia nightmare to bare on the man who would crown himself King. Dead King walking, Trump even said he liked McKinley, President is one of the most dangerous jobs in the world, we whack president, we behead kings, we slay emperors, it's tyrants that we don't tolerate, and Trump is a flunkie, a faggot and a fool, and he committed treason, so we have legitimacy and reason.

The Dunce Cap Theory of Time

Che Guevara could have been Castro's number two in Cuba he instead went into the next war zone where civilians were going toe to toe with professional military. When you have an attitude like that, it's just a matter of time, and he knew it, he went as far as he could go and then the day came where he was caught. Before executing him they blew out his kneecaps with a machine gun. He didn't make a sound. When they did kill him, he still hadn't broken, Guevara never broke.

Timothy McVay was executed by lethal injection which makes you pass out before you die, he died with his eyes open. As rare as truly strong people are, they do exist, tip your hat to them if you come across one bc they might be doing something worth doing, but most "strongmen" are just bad leaders with dysfunctional states.

The strongmen that we hear about they don't choose to not run their countries well, they think they do, but that happened after they realized that the job was harder then they could accomplish. No one gives up power, so they become despots. The reason people with the levers of state use them against their own people is because they suck at their job, it's the only reason.

Strongmen depend on terror to manage their weak states. Terrorists either die for what they believe in, or end up getting that desk job, and great men are the terrorists that can handle the admin work too, but then their children have no hope but to be the reversion to the mean, and they're the ones who drive history, it's the dunce cap theory of time.

The Baby Boom generation

Enough of this weak tough bullshit, we're back in the real world where everything starts and ends, boots on the ground, shoes on the marble, we are the salt of the earth.

100 years ago, President Calvin Coolidge, while in office, had a son die from what today would be knocked out in 24 hours with some penicillin, it was basically strep throat. It was that recently that half of children wouldn't make it to their 18th birthday, and even the ones that did had to survive multiple bouts of sever disease without medicine. People in this country use to starve to death, a generation later it's diabetes and heart disease.

Something we all have to accept is the entire generation of baby boomers, your parents, my parents, all of them, the entire generation they are most failed generation in world history. They had it exponentially easier then any generation to come before and they have failed in impossible ways, they continue to this day. AI is the anti-antidote to all of our problems, we're going to start having water shortages in 5-10 years if we don't get a clue.

Deep seek proved that where the leader is on Monday, everyone else is on Tuesday. There's no serious AI arms race, it's a race against us. How long are we going to be deer in the headlights? Doing something "wrong" isn't wrong, it's their problem not ours. What Snowden released was less the what Palentir and Tesla are doing now, what used to be unconstitutional search and seizures is now sold and collected. It doesn't matter if there's a user agreement to something, illegal search and seizer is more illegal when it's commodified and sold. Our system doesn't work, bc the baby boomers are the idiot sons of history.

There's nothing that can save them, their legacy has been written, now we define ours.

The 3rd millennia of human history is going to be defined by the United States and United States policy over the next 10-20 years, we are accountable for the trajectory we lead and we're not allowed to fail.

What are we hanging onto? People are already losing stuff, so what if we lose some stuff, it's time to sacrifice for the greater good, our comfort, their lives, they brought this on themselves. Nation above fuck up generation, you can't go wrong punching up, you can't go wrong mag dumping Wall Street.

Trump is bringing troops into our streets, also unconstitutional, but we haven't had a constitution since before the civil war, stand down for America 2.0 or go down with the with the dunce cap king, choice is yours. There's nothing out of the question, shoot outs with Feds is wholly American, Trump wants to be a strong man, let's give him what's he's asking for.

14 - The Kingdom of Christendom

Whats amazing about this moment in history is how early a moment in time this all still is. We always think were there, but we're not, it took 290K years to go from the first humans to the first settled civilizations, it took us another 6K to develop writing systems. Dinosaurs lasted 180 million years going extinct 65 million years ago and they're not really extinct. Pigeons are T-Rex's, they slimmed and trimmed when being the biggest and the baddest no longer was the best survival strategy, and bc of that, they are still around. Adaptability is the only necessity.

We're talking tens of millions of years of back and forth, trial and error. Recorded human history is only like 10K years old, globalization only started 500 years ago, the US is half that, we're not supposed to have it all figured out yet, we've barley scratched the surface of this American experiment, but we are responsible for getting this project back on course.

Something we all need to appreciate is you can't separate church and state, we think we don't have a state religion, but that's like saying we're a democracy, it's a sentiment that hasn't held water in quite some time. Our official state religion which we crusaded around the world has been capitalism. We are a nihilistic, naive, gullible, shallow, superficial and consumption driven cult. We have pop culture business magazines, our celebrities don't even pretend to be artists anymore, we have no philosophy, no counterculture, MTV today is more what it originally was against then even existed in the 90's. Capitalism has even ruined college sports. Everything and everyone in capitalism sells out, it's just what the system does.

Marx was not wrong, they're really running out of stuff to bastardize and sell, and anyone that's had the misfortune of being lectured by an atheist will know it's the most totalitarian dogma you could ever come across. No one spends more time thinking about god then an atheist. Liberalism is like a cancer destroying everything from both ends, science is not a legitimate replacement for religion.

We worship the "all ighty ollar" (Simpsons). Our shamans are economists, our laws are made by think tanks and corporate attorney's. The supreme court justices don't have to win elections and yet they get lobbied. Thomas Jefferson without meaning to laid the ground work for a corporate theocracy, and between Jackson ripping up Hamilton's fiscal wiring and then Lincoln becoming corporate attorney in chief, the civil war was a corporate takeover. Politicians are the PR for their corporate clients. We are kept in line by the theology of economics and the fantasy of one day being rich, the American dream is a pyramid scheme.

Get Your Tory's Out My Politics

Ted Cruz is the epitome of the Tory republicans, he's like something out of Greek mythology that was put together with all worthless pieces. He's got elected as a "tea party" libertarian, but he's a Mexican Canadian who went to Harvard and Princeton, his campaigns are backed by health insurance money. Ted Cruz is as anti-American as you can get, he's Mexican astroturf, AKA dirt. He runs on populist rhetoric, but in office he's a total corporate snake and of course he can't be a nationalist he's a wetback from Vancouver.

Cruz is part of the regulatory revolving doors, of ivy league alum, it was refereed to as affirmative action back then. His shtick is "Get your government out of my healthcare" No, get your corporate shill out my politics. Nothing from 2008 got fixed, Ted Cruz is everything wrong with the Tea party, he's everything wrong with the republican party, he's everything wrong with everything, how do you even be a Mexican Canadian? What the Eskimo's rejected him too?

Profit motive does not make insurance run better, there's no free markets, it's so tightly regulated, it's a health cartel, and they know it, they made it to be what it is. Insurance is supposed to be for spreading the cost for low probability/high cost risk. Healthcare is a guaranteed monopoly on a necessity, we're put in a helpless bargaining position, our policy makers have failed us. We have to much to litigate to be fighting about an American right. We have medicine, it's a public good practiced by trained and qualified professionals, but they, like everyone, are in service of the nation. Health practitioners are highly educated and skilled, their compensation will reflect that, but they work for the good of the nation.

Even the word "insurance" is failure on the part of our law makers. Health insurance works closely with government to undermine free market principles and protect themselves from fraud and lawsuits. They need legislation and responsive law enforcement, they're in government, they are government it's called regulatory capture. The original tea party is where we get our institutions from, we need to go old school, regulatory muscle is American, Cruz is not.

Get your sick and twisted business model out my healthcare and get your beaner hoser six feet deep.

Speration of Science & State

Science has no place in policy, none, this is one of the single biggest failed aspect of the enlightenment, we push science where it doesn't belong. There's no short cuts, science can not create a formula or model for governance. We have to go beyond objectivity.

Social engineering is by definition the inverse of natural man, and it doesn't work, that's why the Soviet Union and US both ended up backwards. There's no set it and forget it policy. Science is a good tool if used right but it's limited, sterile, objective. Governance takes subjectivity, intuition, feel. Leadership takes emotion, including caring about the people you lead, you can't succumb to emotions but we have to go beyond the page, we have to be a good subjective.

Economics, Political science and Social engineering are miscategorized, and arbitrarily structured. Political science is a good set of fields, but they're not sciences outside of statistics which is just managing aggregate data. Science adds concrete facts and figures to work with, we use facts, but you need talent for statecraft.

Humans are born into this world prepolitical and our desire for meaning gives us what some people call spirituality, but we are not a solo species and we understand our mortality, humans are born with religiosity.

Separation of Corporation and State

It's not hyperbole, the reason our economy doesn't work is bc we elect capitalists to government, they are the only people who can't run capitalism. The banking and merchant class is not the right tool for the job of government. Separation of Church and state was a mistake of our founding, it needs to be separation of the Mercantile class and State. Actual good Christian morality would cure everything.

What the church has to stop doing is debating science. The church used to do policy making, story telling, military, and arbitrate disputes, it no longer manages those areas(though notice how much of it is still beneficially with us) science is ready to leave the nest too. This should be welcome by the church, science is a burden region is freed of, and that's good bc Christianity has a big role to play as it steps back into the cultural, political and religious roles that science has failed at. Religion and science only conflict if they go where they have no business being.

Science is good at objective non-political things, like measuring the age of the universe, Science can not be used to model the economy, and the ruling class knows that. Politicians are constantly choosing Peter or Paul, economists keep us from reacting when we get fucked every time.

It's a political con game, there's no science in our policies, it's capitalists covering themselves. We've been conquered and colonized by rent seeking rump professionals. neoliberalism never was going to succeed, bc neoclassical economics had already proven failed. Liberalism is a failed experiment, it failed on the continent, it failed across half the globe, and it's failed globally too, it doesn't get better when it gets bigger, it is a failure, but the capitalist class doesn't care bc it keeps them in power, our policy makers are derelict of their offices, they need to be served their walking papers, there's only one way for that to happen.

Capitalism is not an identity, nationalism is our identity, manifest destiny is our ideology, the Holy Spirit watches over us as does Odin. Christianity is our culture with the occasional slide in a Pagan violent nature but as a great man once said "A little rebellion now and then is a good thing" the enlightenment gave us science no more, no less.

Reunification of Church & State

All the problems seemingly caused by religion in the US are actually Christian cults, which are capitalist cults that have co-opted Christian symbolism. The US constitution is a Calvinist document, our founding fathers were deists, basically they believed in Christian morality they just were open minded about early science and theology. Everything is policy, we are a Judeo-Christian nation, even if you're secular, being a christian nation will protect you in this genocidal war that's being waged against the west. Muslims are out there trying to kill us right now.

Religion is about culture, values, attitude, perspective, only maybe 10-15% of Christianity is theological, the church is very much concrete for the here today and the bible is a mythologized history. We are a deeply plural society, our multiculturalism used to be an overall asset, it still can be, social issues are not political issues, we share a religion, that is the social solution.

Religion is political and it is a vast field of cultural and moral common ground. Official state sanctioned Christianity will help us with our plurality, some people will feel left behind, but they're being left behind anyway, we're all left behind when we let them hold us back. We can give our posterity a dystopian nightmare that includes them being conquered by China, or we can leave the people who will never be equal. Right now we have untrue and unhealthy individuality, it's not conformity to unify for a patriot cause.

No ones forced to do anything, secular is fine, but anyone not able to fit into a Christian nation, they create conflict and division without any meaningful addition. Our goal is the greatness of the nation. Policy deals with divisible goods, you can't successfully use it to manage morals, culture, religion is political for a reason, humans are spiritual for a reason. Religion is for the more abstract components of society and Christianity has been durable for a reason. Culture and religion can operate where law is unsuccessful.

If food is scarce and people are trapping and eating wild pigs at a rate that's going to run them out, leaders are not going to be able to successfully enact and enforce laws to prevent poaching. No one who's family is going hungry is going to follow that, and the few pigs will be run out and then the problems are going to be even worse. Kicking the can down the road is a buzz term that gets thrown around, it means criminal negligence, things have to addressed. The environmental damage we're doing is no different then over fishing lakes or over hunting land. If people are going hungry and leaders make pig poaching illegal it doesn't work, but if you make not eating pork a religious custom, then it can become a practice that last thousands of years and continues even when food is no longer scarce. Religion is strength for the struggle, and it makes the struggle worth doing.

The Coat of Cross & Sword of the Lord

It started as a superstition practiced mostly by women similar to astrology today, but 3 centuries in Christianity had gained enough traction with the slave infantry that Constantine converted his army to it before a battle. They painted crosses on their shields and then ran off a succession of victories to reunify Rome.

Religion isn't conservative, it's slow moving, it avoids trends and flashes, it's even keel, but it's egalitarian and giving, turn the other cheek, look out for your fellow man. Christianity is a passive feminine religion, which is good, it was the perfect religion for vikings to convert to as they assimilated with their conquered people and then continued to rampage up and down the continent. Christianity is moderating ethos for our warrior culture, it's discipline and restraint, strength of spirit.

Back in the day, every year the whole family would do the work tilling the soil, fertilizing, planting the seeds, re-shoeing the animals, the whole deal and then they prayed for a good rain. Religion is faith for what you can't control. They did all the work and then prayed for rainy season, if it happened they didn't go to off the deep end. How many lottery winners end up broke? That's cultural, we all do it, we are a spend and waste society. On the other end if there was a bad harvest from a dry spell or anything else, religion helped them collectively endure.

It's not that Christianity isn't working, it's that we're not Christian. The Puritan work ethic was for the greater good. Even if something was legal but it was useless then it was not acceptable work to the new English. Usury is useless, capitalists are useless too, they're just idolatry and mammon. we have Christian cults all around, everyone should want those shut down in favor of real Catholic or Protestant Christianity.

I'm not going to go as far as to call off grid Christian groups cults, but there shouldn't be too much direct overlap between militant training and religious practice. It can be the same groups of people doing those things, but you don't want religious leaders also planning the clandestine operations. Some of these militant groups remind me of Larry Flynt mixing religion and porn, it maybe sounded like a good idea, but you can't do that one top down, religiosity needs to grow organically. What Christianity is good for is consulting with a cleric, getting their opinion and advice, and then you still go do whatever violent/depraved thing you were going to do in the first place, but it keeps your perspective somewhere in the middle.

Christianity is a passive religion and for the first 100 years Christian followers were mostly peasant and slave women illegally practicing their superstition. They became notable bc of their resiliency, there were even cases where women were publicly executed but couldn't be broken. They were supposed to be examples, they became martyrs. We are the descents of Arian and Pagan conquerors, Christianity was a way to assimilate with their constituencies, and the Vikings for all their barbarism were statesmen and civilization builders, the Church was the left hand of the Bahamut.

We need banks and interest is how banks are compensated for their risk, we can't avoid it. Its good to recognize that modern day we do need to have interest, but it's been a problem for thousands of years, it's a sin in the bible, and it's a source of exploitation today. Usury is an unfortunate reality, we need to keep a tight grip on it. Speculation is where the line should be drawn. Religion is a good guide for morality, but it has to be absolute, religion is sometimes used by elites to suppress the masses, and in our capitalists society it's happening daily, that's how things have gotten this bad since the 80's. We call on our Christianity to undo cults and idol worship.

The False Prophet

Do people even still read the bible at all anymore? All denominations of Christian believe that one or more false prophets arrive before Christ's return. The false prophets are dragons dressed as sheep, and demonic beasts, like mammon, certainly Satan, Nixon, probably most of the Republican party. Idolatry and usury have always been very serious sins, they are usually associated with false prophets.

If you believe in the bible then there's no way Jesus can return until we've had the false prophet. If you don't believe in the bible then every religious figure is a false prophet, either way Trump can not possibly be this nations savior but it's not meaningless that some people think Trump, who's a sack of shit in a suit, is somehow divinely appointed.

The fact of the matter is Trump is not the leader of a cult, he's just who all the cult leaders threw their weight behind. Our system was already so broken and it's getting weaker by the day under Trump. We're going old testament, get off the prosperity evangelicalism, its grift, anyone who wants to be on TV is not in it to help people. Gods work is selfless, it's fine for public servants to become well known, but there's something no good about a cleric that wants to be famous. Martin Luther King was leading his people, how does Kenneth Copeland still even have a congregation?

You don't actually want to be in a moral majority, bc what that means is the silent moral majority and of course someone running for president or being nationally broadcast is not silent, they were just immoral. Get with the basics, you don't even have to be a good christian, idolatry is out, greed is out, help those in need, be good person, it's not hard, big obvious things, it's not hard to be a decent Christian. Get out, join a physical community, get involved, help people, meet people. The church can offer some solutions, we have to clean out the charlatans.

The purpose of the reformation was that Church officials could no longer use Latin as a buffer to interpreting the bible, Anyone could read it, discuss it, learn from it, anyone can interpret it, but not anyone can amend it. Luther wanted to reform the Catholic church and Luther made good points, against all the extravagance, excess, wealth, greed and waste that Catholicism was suffering from at the time.

The British Leviathan has become Mammon the demon pig. Bahamut is often depicted as a dragon in mythology, but his original form was more like an amphibious Rhino, Bahamunt is the monster to stomp out Tory pigs.

Emancipatory conference

The way we organize our denominations of Christianity into officially state recognized Churches is an American emancipatory conference.

Church leaders can hold a meeting to discuss and organize how they want to be structured. There's no rules, the churches can organize however they choose, the only thing necessary is all individual houses of prayer need to have accountability somewhere.

The leadership of the various churches are already political figures, they can't not be. Religion is political, we are a Latin Christian culture. However the churches want to do things is fine, but, there's no more solo religious leaders, people meeting for bible study or whatever else privately no one is going to bother them, but if there's public religious practice, it needs to be biblical Christian we're shutting down the cults, which shouldn't be an issue to anyone.

Donald Trump is the result of every institution in the US failing at least two times through each, they are continuing to fail. Our whole system needs an overhaul, the problem is the capitalist ruling class designed this. The solution isn't no institutions, we want to fix and restructure them, the Church is an institution.

Jihad

Jihad means doing the work of creating universal Islam, it's a conversion by the sword. Islam believes that one day Muhammad will return in a space ship, kill all the white people and then live with black people in an everlasting paradise. That's the religion, that's their revelations. Islam is engaged in a genocidal takeover of the west, there are no peaceful Muslims, just embedded assets. If we don't take the proper precautions we will lose, it might be in 10 years it might be in 50, it could take longer, but surely it will happen. Why even take a risk?

Democracy has pitfalls that we can't just ignore or idealize away, ceremony is important but it's no substitute for substance. It doesn't matter that Muslims don't like it, that's the point, we're creating something worth being a part of and nothing worth being a part of includes them. Islam has decided on a genocidal war against the west. We need to stop being intentionally weak, tolerance is not a virtue, America needs to be sharp, polished, fierce and real. We will be measured by the greatness of our nation, that's the taught balance between compassion and prudence.

People are busy, no one takes the time to understand Islam, no one really follows politics, we need to account for that. We can't dream it away, we have to create a system for what we're dealing with. The good news is that the same system we would create if we were all fully informed is the same system that can deal with not everyone being fully informed. It's grass roots, citizens assemblies, town halls, local communities, the Church, conditioned on the church dealing in facts when it comes to mobilizing action. Spiritual leaders need to lead their people to success, they are not doing that, they are not Christians they are cult leaders and scammers.

2 parties labor and classic American patriot conservative, constitutional republic strong state governments, official state Christianity. That's what an informed electorate would work with and that's what an uninformed electorate can't fail with. If we want votes that matter, we can't create un-American plurality. Democracy takes tremendous work, we keep our tolerances tight.

The Ottoman Empire

Today Islam is practiced in third world countries, but there was a time when the Arabs were the most successful people in the world. They got their start bc they had a historic statesman and general, two separate people, at the same time and founded a third Abrahamic religion which eventually would conquer the eroding Byzantines, they were the Ottoman Empire.

Leaders were on the ground leading from horseback, they had well educated and trained bureaucrats and had science successfully alongside their religion and of course all great empires win wars. The Ottomans had the Janissaries, an elite combat force made from kidnapped white slaves.

The Ottomans peaked when they stopped innovating and adapting, then they got sloppy, self aggrandizing, the idiot sons of the battlefield commanders moved into palaces, hired middle managers that were in it to make money. As the quality of leadership declined and corruption rose the elites started plundering state resources while losing wars and racking up huge debts. To restablize the sultans encouraged infighting among these corrupt and incompetent elites, which is a short sighted solution, that has ended the same every time. Eventually the sultans would spend their entire lives without contact to the real world and their mothers and concubines would control all the information to run puppet governments through them, usually having them beheaded and power transferred to their newborn son as soon as they had one.

Every empire does the same thing, it's clockwork, we don't want to end up like the Ottomans, we will if we're not careful. There's nothing that can't happen here, it's happening. We're actually on a worse trajectory, at least the Ottoman dunces had harems. Who do ours have? Marc Andressen, and Curtis Yarvin? We are the gayest empire ever.

After The Ottoman collapse in world war 1, there was a meeting of Islamic leaders and they updated the religion to the current theology, ideology and doctrine. That's where they choose a genocidal war against the west. It doesn't mean we just declare war and invade, but our doors are not open to them. Islam was once a great religion for a great people, but that day is long gone, and nothing can ever bring it back. If we're not careful we're going to end up just like them. We need to fight corruption, incompetence and decadence, we need to be intolerant, the only good Muslim is a dead one.

Arianism V. Eastern Orthodoxy

One of the success' the KGB has had with us is getting people to convert to or interested in Eastern Orthodox Christianity, Most schisms have been political, including the protestant reformation, usually it's just a power struggle between two guys however many centuries ago. Eastern Orthodoxy however, was addition by subtraction, it's in the fabric of Russia just look at it, Russian are subhuman, just look at them.

Idolatry was the official and original reason for the schism between the West and the East and you can still see that today. Orthodoxy is overtly about jewelry and gold, its a vacuous religion. Christianity is supposed to be stone and steel. Arius was a third century Roman Philosopher who was a part of early Christian scholarship but was not included in the council of Nicaea, which established the Catholic Church as the official religion of Rome. Arius ended up in Europe, where he translated bibles into German while living with and teaching scripture to Gothic Warrior tribes. Rome was conquered by it's own Arian Mercenaries, we are not above collapsing, Russia is not our friend.

Arianism sometimes spelled Aryanism is the religion for people interested in a harder more obscure Christianity. The council of Nicaea was almost like all the Church leaders ganging up against Arius, but they were the decadent ones. Modern Germany was always trying to move east and being stopped from the west. The tragedy has been the loss of Prussia, and Russia is a mistake of history. When in doubt you obviously choose German over Russian, choose Arianism over Orthodoxy. In the third Indiana Jones Movie, the Nazi archaeologist thinks the holy grail is the pristine gold cup, it kills her boss. Harrison Ford correctly picks the clay chalice, that's Christianity.

The Holy American Empire

What makes Christianity what it is, is that it was a peasant religion. Nice cathedrals and grand architecture are fine, the Church doesn't have to stay poor, but it wouldn't lose anything if it did.

You can't separate religion out from politics, Christianity is our religion, it has been and will continue to be a corner stone of our culture and it taps into something that we want the ability to call on, whatever that is, whatever it means to people.

Evangelicalism can be a life lived in constant contact with god, Catholicism can be a life of public service, maybe for you church is only once a week, or midnight mass once a year. Christian Fundamentalism can single you to your purpose, and lead you along your cause, it can be your community on the grid, it can be your community off it. Maybe for you Calvinist fundamentalism is as little as never cracking a bible a day in your life, but then when the ATF and Marshall's enter onto your property, you spray paint a cross on your plate carrier before airmailing them that stockpile. However you want to use it, Christianity is there for you.

The best part of all is if you die in the heat of battle you get into the Viking heaven where you spend all eternity shooting it out with feds every day and returning home to your family every night. What could be better than that? Dying in battle is the only way in. If you win a shootout with feds you win, if you lose a shootout with feds you go to everlasting paradise. Exchanging rifle fire with feds is a win/win, religion is about healthy balance.

Christianity ultimately became wealthy as Europe dominated the world and that's fine, the Vatican should be a palace, the Church should enjoy some of the wealth and successes of the people it leads, and it should visibly reflect that, but that's not the point. Whether it is forming a holy grail from the dirt upon which you stand, or making a masterpiece out of marble, Christianity is the same religion. Christianity was the same under the Hapsburg's, Charlemagne and Constantine as it was when it was witches in backrooms, or being executed in the coliseum. It's always been the same religion and one people.

Christianity isn't 10k person mega churches or famous clerics, its not podcasts or channels, it's not world class schools or historic architecture, this stuff is all Christianity, but it's not what Christianity is. Christianity is not defined by the cathedrals, or saints, three story high organ pipes or even a parish at all. Christianity doesn't even need a building, a room or a book, it is an idea, the force of will, that is why it is able to transcend space and time. What more could you possibly ask for then this?

The Kingdom of Christendom is hearts and minds, heaven is the empire of earth, our cross section is the cross, we share a state, we are a Christian Nation.

15 - The UN Nato & the Kyvian-Russ

The Nazi's got within eyesight of Stalingrad, and then broke down bc of supply issues, Hitler didn't even provide his troops with winter clothes. All they had to do was go for the oil fields and then sit out the winter, but Hitler had to go for the city named after Stalin and Stalin refused to lose it. Two men with absolute power and not a clue.

Hitler was not weak, but he was bat shit, impulsive and foolish and I'm not sure Stalin was wrong to go all in to hold Stalingrad, but Russia would have collapsed if not for our aid. The Nazi's were so close that T-34's would come off the assembly line, a crew would load in and drive out of the factory directly into battle.

Our money and their cannon fodder outlasted the German invasion.

Chamberlain & Churchill

Neville Chamberlain has very unfairly gone down in history in a negative light. Britain was appeasing Germany publicly, but they ramped up their military behind the scenes at the same time and remember he was also appeasing western Europe that didn't have the stomach for a second world war. Victory can defeat you and Germany didn't actually lose world war 1, they defeated Russia and then were grinding France down, on French territory, but one day they came off the front lines and went back to Berlin like they were getting some R+R, and they never went back. At some point they were just told they had lost. It really never ended for Germany.

Chamberlain read Germany as well as anyone, he very openly despised Hitler, but Chamberlain saw Stalin for who he was too, no one else did. We've never recovered from allying with the Soviets in world war 2. The loudest voice in parliament in favor of Nazi Germany when they took Austria was Winston Churchill. He did then quickly reverse course when he realized Germany wasn't stopping and he made his play to get back into the PM role, but Churchill had been a pariah for a reason, he was a drunken moron.

Democracy has a severe flaw in that everything is so obtuse and short sighted. Internal conflict, like Newt Gingrich, can't be tolerated, there's a healthy building discussion/debate, and then there's the real destructive stuff. The solution to Gingrich would have been just shooting him in the face, that would have been constructive and productive and the US would be better for it today. C-Span could have recorded his body rotting next to the podium.

By the time operation Barbarossa was ripe for Hitler, Churchill was in power. Chamberlain was right though, and if not for the internal undercutting he really played the whole thing as well as possible.

Germany and Japan failed to coordinate in world war 2, and Ludwig Beck, the General who was involved in the Valkyrie assassination attempt, wanted to form alliances with France and England before churning east, just like we did west. Hitler fantasized about being allied with Great Britain, and they almost were. Oswald Mosley barley lost an election to Chamberlain, but obviously it ended up going how it happened and we saved Russia from Germany, Just like we saved the Chinese Communist party from Japan, after Japan defeated the Nationalists. No one played the diplomacy of world war 2 right, Russia and the CCP are the results.

The Kyvin-Russ

It's actually Russia that's not a real country. The Kyvian-Russ come from Ukraine, where the food grows, the frozen wasteland northeast of Smolensk, is where the people of Kyiv dumped their sludge, but Ukraine suffers from what all axis states have suffered from since before Rome. All the countries on the black sea are like the middle spaces of a chess board, it's physically impossible for a land empire to exist without holding at least half that area. The Scythian's, Byzantines, Goths, Carolingians, Huns, Mongols, Polish Lithuania, Hapsburg's, Ottomans and Germany. For 3000 years Ukraine hasn't been able to get up on two feet before being invaded by the next empire on way to war with the last.

Russia is the opposite of that, it's off and out of the way of the trade routes and fertile soil, it's a frozen wasteland that thaws into ten feet deep mud for the summer, no European power ever wanted anything to do with it. After the mongols lost their grip on Europe there was no reason for anyone to ever go through there, it was regarded as what it is and forgotten. As it turns out though, some of those aborted fetus's survived and climbed up out of that muck and with a 700 year free hand, they were able to found the city known as Moscow.

Moskva means "dark puddle" or "marsh", literally translated out it means "dark water river." The Moskva Slavs are "marsh slaves" or "slush niggers." Moscow means "Slush Nigger Metropolis." It is the shithole capital of the world, and while historic army's ripped though a 1/3 of Europe every generation, no one had any reason to pay Moscow any mind at all, until Catherine the Great brought in a late renaissance at the end of the 18th century.

Catherine was an Austrian born princess who became Tsarina of Russia when she overthrew her husband(!) Like many European dynasties the greatest ruler in the history of the kingdom was the queen and Catherine really was, she almost turned the sloppy butthole of Europe into a clean rump at least. In just a few years, she expanded and modernized everything to the point where they were starting to integrate with Europe and while we did get a couple centuries of great art (Western institutions with Russian pain created some of the greatest works of art all time) in the end it was all for not. Any hope for Russia died when Catherine the great passed away in 1796. 5 years after Catherine's death her son was killed by his own Generals in a botched coup. Russia really just didn't waste any time at all.

Liquid Gold

Hunting whales is dangerous and difficult, and nuclear power would have gotten serious people like scientists and engineers into politics, capitalists don't like real scientists, they only like their quacks, quacks will say anything for money.

Oil was the answer to all of capitalism's prayers.

Now don't get me wrong we want to use combustion, but here's the thing we don't need it for the majority of transportation and we don't need coal. There's little to no actual industrial need for hydrocarbons outside of the army, and aviation.

Combustion is only more powerful than consumer safe electricity, it's not actually even especially good, it's portability is what makes it useful. Nuclear, hydraulics, gears, electromagnetism, we have more than enough to work with and it's not like we can't still fire up a two stroke tool. Why keep making big oil richer with no actual benefit? We need to get off of the industrial scale fossil fuels.

The Oligarchs

Even the Russian oligarchs avoid Russia and refuse Rubles, and I can't say I blame them, they made it, and all you need is money in the west. I think we should give those Russian gangsters a chance to show they've still got the stomach for the real dirt. We fire up the war industry and get the supply lines out to Ukraine going around the clock, lets find out what Russia really wants to do, they can't even beat Ukraine with our tech, they're going to declare war on us too? We should be so lucky, give us an excuse complete Germany's destiny.

UN/NATO

We owe our EU allies better, all they ever did was faithfully follow us, and we've paved the path to hell, every economy is under water, that's bc of us, not Greece not listening to the IMF, not the semi-socialist countries being semi-socialist, we're the ones that ruined Europe and we're going to cut bait now when the Russian federation is rolling their way? I don't think so.

Bottom lines are for the CPA's, we take Gasprom and get our money back before its over anyway. Capitalism might not work, but imperialism sure as hell does. Fuck Putin, inbred midget.

We load Ukraine up like we're supplying our own storm troopers, they might as well be our own storm troopers. They want to be our ally, they get to be our ally, simple as that. Putin does not want to be our ally, he has Trump pimped, but he doesn't care about anyone.

We're not just giving Ukraine equipment, were keeping our troops out of harms way while putting down an enemy. Ukraine is offering up what is now the best infantry force in the world, they aren't well supplied, being tied to the Soviet Union harms your economy in ways that probably take a couple centuries to really recover from.

We get the supply lines going, maybe firehouse some Blaster across the rust belt, it'll be like starting the reactor in "Total Recall" see what we can grind to a start. We bring the industry back online like it's world war 2 again. What escalation? We're the only country that even has deliverable ICBM's and even Putin in Russia can't get away with nukes politically, plus they don't have them, they barley ever did. We don't have much intelligence in our intelligence gathering. At the height of the cold war, Russia had 4 nuclear weapons. At those parades they would drive around the block over and over spray painting a different serial number on the same piece of equipment every time.

Russian Lockdown

The front end is loading Ukraine like they're our own troops, the back end is breaking Russia politically. We lock down their economy, enforce sanctions and by enforce I mean use force, sink shadow tankers, bomb ports, no mercy, no margin and if Russia doesn't like it, we're not adverse to finishing what the Nazi's started. Russians are subhuman, it's addition by subtraction. Karl Marx wasn't wrong and neither were the Nazi's, we are. We are weak and stupid, but it's a switch we can flip and get back with it.

Bring the hammer to the oligarchs, hats off to them if they've still got anything left. Oil Prices don't matter, we manage it, government can do anything, we work with our allies and hopefully cooperative banks. We take whatever we want from Russia to square the balance at the end. We give the Russian oligarchs an ultimatum, they give us Putin, they give up their plants, fields and mines and the war ends on Ukrainian terms or we choke out their economy until the Russian people overrun the Kremlin.

They can keep their money, they can keep their soccer teams or whatever other European business and property they own. They can keep their visas and villas, their children can keep going to their boarding schools, no warrants, charges or trials, clean break from what was once the USSR. They're not keeping Putin's money, they're not keeping the industrial materials they hold, but they're out free and clear. That's a pretty sweet offer, all they have to do is deliver Putin.

Russian Rule of Law

All trials are show trials, but putting Putin on trial would go a long way to establishing rule of law in Russia. I think Julia Navalni should lead Putin in on a leash and he should stand trial in a cage, like the last Gasprom guy that he got. That is up to them though, Putin fates ultimately should be decided by Ukraine and the Russian resistance.

It's not a counter factual, there's no doubt about the outcome of policy designed to break Russia, it's time we started making policy like we got a pair. We can handle anything, lets do something.

16 - Fascism

*“Of all the unanswered questions of our time, perhaps the most important is, what is fascism?”
-George Orwell 1944*

People have been comparing us to 1984 and Fahrenheit 451, books both written in response to Nazi Germany. Brave New World, written by Huxley in the interwar period, is on some ban lists. Huxley was Orwell's French teacher in college and he had a brother who was a eugenicist. Say what you will for it, but they had talent in world war 2. The same people who condemn Eugenics, promote state sponsored gender affirming care, what's the difference?

If you achieve perfect equality today it will not still be equality tomorrow and then what do you do? That's why social engineering doesn't work, it's a totalitarian synthetic that degrades the end result. There is nothing greater than the truth, what socialism gets wrong is across the board universal equality, what capitalism gets wrong is it's belief in it's own meritocracy.

The United States today, 2025, this is what dystopia looks like. This is it, this is the height of dystopia, the real world is boring and mundane, there's no cyborg armies building themselves to conquer humanity, AI is just a new thing to speculate in and concentrate wealth and power, cryptocurrency, automation, smart phones, obsolescence, subscriptions, 30% of our GDP is financials, it's numbers being moved around, it's less than nothing, we even have gay Bond villains. Our ruling class is so untalented that even dystopia is a letdown.

Animal Farm is the book that describes us, we have it all, the puppies turned pit bull, sabotaged and scapegoated wind mill, the sheep who bleat and adjust away their confusion. The horse who thinks she better than the other animals and ends up going to another human farm, content to be conquered. We all suffer from that inertia, we have shed the comforts of the cage.

At the end of the book the animals are outside watching the pigs and humans playing cards inside. An ace gets played on top of an ace starting an argument and the animals still watching from outside can't tell the difference between pig and man anymore. Did we really think we won the cold war?

As good as Orwell's ending is, the classic animated movie is better, it's not just some whitewashed ending for kids, those animals have agency. They didn't need the pigs to overthrow the humans, and they don't need the pigs to overthrow the pigs. Strong men get strong treatment, bc we can, bc we have agency.

Political Framing

There are 4 state level political frameworks, Socialism is bureaucratic rule, capitalism is corporate rule, theocracy is judicial or clerical rule and then there is fascism, military rule. That's all it is, chief of staff head of state. Pagan Executive, Marshall statesmen. "Junta" also comes from the Iberian war, it basically means a party congress made from the officer core, our constitution was written by a Patriot Junta.

Europe's policies used to be written by cardinals, knights were governors, generals were kings. The senate that assassinated Caesar after he declared himself dictator for life, were his officers, Brutus was Marshall of Rome and in the civil war that followed, lead the Liberatore insurgency against Augustus Caesar and Mark Antony.

Fascism is the oldest form of rule, probably predating language, it might even be the definition of human, it's patriarchy when survival is not a given. Humans are both hierarchical and egalitarian, the men hunted, traded and waged war while the wives and mothers gathered and ran the camp. Patriarchy is a misnomer, similar to the term 'mankind', it takes both halves to make the whole. It's not a coincidence that the best monarchs in western history have been women, women have always run the home front. Humans and wolves hunt the same animals, dogs are the wolves that wanted to be apart of the human tribe, we can't track or outrun prey, they can't throw or manipulate fire. The first force multiplier is still mans best friend.

Sun Tzu's the art of war is the original fascist text, Machiavelli, Nietzsche, also wrote well known fascist works. The Teutonic Order, Knights Templar and Samurai Warriors, in both fact and myth are fascist legend. All the Icelandic Saga's, King Arthur was a Welsh popper born at the height of civil war, he fulfilled his destiny when he reunified the isles under his round table council. Arthur was the reincarnation of Constantine who was the reincarnation of Aeneas, the Grand son of Zeus. Joan of Arch and William Wallace didn't quite make it to the throne room, Cromwell even had the luxury of a putting Charles I through a show trial before cutting off his head.

The most resonate stories in our culture are about rebellion and conquest, failure and redemption, Shakespeare isn't staged today bc of his comedy's, the greatest works all of English literature are all stories about destiny and fate, Moby Dick, Frankenstein, you name it. Catch-22 and Dr. Strangelove aren't actually anti-fascist, they're ironic. Anti-fascist's make the crappy movies and books.

Fascism was coined by Mussolini after the terms capitalism and socialism had been minted by Marx. Mussolini became a socialist while dodging the draft in world war 1, he was booted out of Italian Socialist party bc he was useless, so he coined the term fascist and rallied mafia button men to march on Rome. Mussolini's Italy was not fascist, it was a cronie capitalism. "Late stage capitalism" is just oligarchy under a morally bankrupt ruling class, it can follow anything and it does, everything becomes oligarchy in the end.

The Tribal Order

In truth there's only human order, every society from pastoral clan to industrial world empire is the same set of institutions, the only difference is how they're arranged in relation to each other, and the culture, myth, coercion, inclusion, that both top down and bottom up exists from there. All civilizations are the same people and institutions dealing with the same things, and they all do the same thing, they self legitimize, no matter how illegitimate they may be.

All ruling classes suppress information, spread disinformation, they all use ceremony, myth and tradition. The criticisms we have of fascism and dictators are what we've been under since Abraham Lincoln. No one sees the forest for the trees, even the experts miss major things, even the scholars don't know fascism, not actually.

We no longer have good education in this country, colleges are run by asset managers. It's not hard to see what's happened, but it still surprises me that historians don't appreciate the huge sections of European history that we've eliminated bc of Nazi Germany. Arianism was very real, Arius was a person. Surviving white people today are all descendants of the Goths or Franks, the Normans were Pagans vikings from Catholic France, the Anglo's and Saxons were Arians who had conquered the isles after their parents had overthrown Rome. Anthropology, genetics, biology and history have all had to sidestep factual topics for political reasons, we don't know the first thing about ourselves.

Donald Trump is not a fascist, Trump is a pussy who wants to be in hair and makeup and have his picture taken, the last thing he wants to do is heavy work. This government under Trump is visibly very similar to the crony capitalism that Mussolini had in Italy, but its no different then Reagan or even Herbert Hoovers white house, it's just blatantly incompetent and corrupt. Corruption is corrosion of the nation. Tolerance is weakness.

The left doesn't know that we already have Russian elections and the right doesn't know that we're going to end up with a Russian economy, we have to step in. Russian's are subhuman it's not politically correct, but the truth never is.

Late stage capitalism

Until we do something about it, or someone else conquers us we will remain in late stage capitalism, it's a feudal kingdom, it doesn't turn into fascism on its own. The height of autocratic rule is the nadir of decay. Tyranny is capitalism, it's the exploitation of labor and the domination of resources. True responsibility is doing more to help others, it's carrying more then just your own weight, it's a sacrifice. Capitalism is about externalizing net loss, every move of Trumps life has been a net negative, he acts like it's winners and losers, but Donald Trump has never succeeded a day in his life, he's a weakling.

The history of capitalism and fascism are intertwined, bc capitalism is a synthetic extracted from the fully realized whole. Capitalists throw out the baby and bottle the bathwater. The first coins were minted so troops didn't have to carry supplies and the knights Templar created the first banking system so the troops didn't even have to carry coin. Behind ever bill, every rent payment, even behind paying for groceries, all transactions in our system are underpinned not by law, not by ethics, morality or solidarity, but by law enforcement. Remember Napster? Capitalism can't be maintained by legitimacy bc it's not legitimate, it's anti-meritocratic. It's maintained by violence or the threat there of, peace is an illusion, our system is held together by state violence, it's not good or bad, but it certainly is true, we need to understand this.

State violence and information restriction, asymmetrical bargaining leverage, capitalism is imperialism of the home state, all the fortune 500 companies, all the firms incorporated in Delaware, what would be different if they had been started in Europe or China or Japan and were traded on one of their stock exchanges? They don't even pay taxes in the US, they're stateless entities, Corporations don't have their own military or police forces by design, wherever capital goes, state resources mobilize for them. We pay for the police that protect them from us, we are the police that serve them and not us.

Marketing and PR are continued world war 2 propaganda that have been co-opted by corporate interests. Marketing is military science turned on the home state, Edward Bernays had Joseph Goebbels so outclassed that we think Goebbels matters. The Nazi's didn't do anything scientific, they became a one party state by having people cast their ballots at gun point. We have the real propaganda ministers the science of propaganda has advanced, significantly, we pay for the the phones that track and spy on us.

In 200 years, they're not going to look back and criticize fascism, or even the Nazi's, they're going to criticize capitalism, they're so close yet so different, Capitalists have always wanted to be fascists, but they're too weak and too stupid.

Capitalism has all the same competitiveness, desire to dominate and defeat, ruthlessness but notice how capitalists are more crass and cruel than fascists. They pull the plug to wring more margin as they part out important companies, and they have no loyalty. Capitalists are anti-nationalists.

The Chicago boys dreamed in Aryan, but the only blood they spilled soaked into their panties. Elon Musk pretends he's an apartheid Neo-Nazi, but he's a sped student on ketamine. He's not a rocket scientist or engineer, he got his start by getting the rights to GPS when the US Navy declassified it. Our military R&D divisions invented everything that makes a smartphone tick, the internet was a DOD and UC collaboration. Our institutions are what made us great, capitalists don't like great nations, they like oligarchy, which is a global ideology based on patronage. Capitalism is fascism for pussies, it pulls the bean counters and the book keepers out of the backroom and puts them front and center.

Capitalism is for the weaklings. Trump, Vance, Musk, Thiel, these guys are not hawks and eagles, they're parasites, they operate inside the host they're dependent on, starve it of its resources. They're worms and crabs, being in the government is how they survive, don't pay attention to what they say, they've always had tight ties to government. Trump ran for president just to get out of the gutter, and now he's in, like a 30 foot tape worm.

Democratic backsliding

Democracy isn't actually backsliding around that world. First, the idea that democracies don't go to war is simply not true, it's like republicans being good for the economy, there has never been evidence to support that claim, someone just said it and it's never been considered. Democracies constantly were at war from our revolution through world war 2 and the only success the CIA has ever had is toppling third world democracies. The distinction is that we don't go to war with countries who have favorable trade policies towards us, usually if not exclusively at the expense of their own people. We never did anything for democracy, we installed capitalism world wide, with the stated logic being that capitalism would make democracy. It's hard to imagine that having been done in good faith, but it doesn't matter, our foreign policy makers were either corrupt or stupid, now they're both.

Our colleges today are run by boards of business managers in charge of the endowment. They're not schools first, they're hardly schools at all any more, they used to be, the United States used to have great universities, and I should say that Yale has lectures that it puts on youtube that are good, Joanne Freeman and Ian Shapiro especially. Mark Blythe at Brown is also good, Yale and Brown haven't gone full psychopath but the rest of the ivy league is rotting on the vine.

Capitalism has ruined the sciences and it's ruined our colleges. Everything is fabricated, the only way people even graduate the ivy leagues is grade inflation, it's not bc the subjects can't be understood, but the legacy students are dunce caps. Patronage precedes grade inflation, precedes fake data. We've swapped out the humanities for business school, do people really not know what that is? Fascism doesn't rewrite history, we do.

Neoliberalism

Neoliberalism has failed and it was always going to, neoliberalism was a reboot of liberalism, which when it crashed and burned in 1929, was seen as gone for good. They just had to give it one generation, the baby boomers are the most failed generation in history, they are not their parents, and they are not us.

What did work was the new deal era. The new deal had all sorts of problems, like the supreme court, the republican party, war profiteering capitalists, but despite all that, our economy still worked, our politics worked, outside of the Tory class we were a coordinated if not united nation, and we responded to extreme threats. Today we're just watching as we're killed slowly. Europe has been watching Russia since 2014, Romney got made fun of bc in his debates with Barack Obama he identified Russia as our biggest geopolitical threat. News is superficial bc superficial is all that's needed to sell. Romney was right, everyone else has been wrong, Chamberlain was right everyone else was wrong.

Hitler in "Mein Kampf" said exactly what he was going to do, and they were still surprised. Russia has said what it's going to do, they are going to attack Poland, and the Baltic's. I have to admit I would like to see Russia invade Poland bc I think Poland is going to break Russia off hard, but it would end up similar to Ukraine without Western support, Russia has unlimited worthless people to send to the front lines and oil money, which plays into the weakness of capitalism. Our wealth is controlled by a global over class that hates the home states.

Russia is a war oligarchy, untermensch makes great cannon fodder and capitalists are stupid enough to go for quarterly bonuses over all else. Europe is going to fund it's own invasion and its not going to end better for us, these oceans aren't impossible to cross, the lack of internet regulation and governance makes us a vulnerable society. Oligarch's have no loyalty to the home state, Adam Smith knew it, Plato knew it, we need to know it. Oligarch's are enemies of the people and the nation.

Pearl Harbor

Because we were a former European colony we focus more on the European theater of WW2, but it's the Pacific theater that brought us into that war. Japan was the only Asian country not colonized by Europe, and they weren't having it, they built up an industrial powered war machine in 60 years, still to this day the second strongest military the world has ever seen.

There is a widely held belief that Japan attacked us at Pearl Harbor destined to lose, but that is not true. It was Japan not Germany, who could have defeated us in that war. It's so hard to face probably no one can really appreciate it, but World War 2 could have ended with us being invaded by an imperial genocidal force.

Our navy then wasn't like now, we had 5 carriers total, and as it turned out the Pacific theater was history's first carrier war. Pearl Harbor was a plan to knock out two US carriers. Pearl Harbor was planned to be our Midway. There's no one alive today who knows exactly what happened, but Chester Nimitz was quietly probably the greatest military commander we've ever had and he wasn't alone. Japan read the situation, but we keyed off them, locked horns and sunk half their fleet in the next one.

We miss it today, but make no mistake about it, Japan was not in error. It might have even been a razor thin victory, sometimes chess matches are decided on an early move, Pearl Harbor and Midway decided that war. There was a 50/50 chance that World War 2 ended with a Japanese invasion of California, World War 2 was that serious, we used to be that serious, we used to be a fascist state.

Fascism is not undemocratic

Just as capitalism doesn't make democracy, fascism isn't undemocratic, not necessarily. People confuse universal suffrage for democracy, suffrage is just the inclusion in the democratic process, but democracy can take place between as little as two people, it's not ideal because the more people, the more information to work with, but it only needs two people. Democracy is just joint decision making, it's people discussing, studying, learning, debating and building understanding, it's collective consciousnesses, it's group subjective understanding. The more people the better, but you can't have people who degrade the value of information.

You don't win or lose debates, it's a collaboration of relevant considerations. At the heart of democracy is deferring to expertise, adjusting and learning, there's quacks in every field, but there are experts out there too, let's tar and feather the quacks and listen to the experts, let's get more informed, smarter, deeper, better.

We're so hung up on being right, winning a debate isn't the goal, it's actually good when you see that you're wrong because in that moment you cease to be wrong. Sometimes you can get to a point where reasonable people might disagree, but most of our problems aren't that. Most of our problems are the left and right both being wrong, understanding transcends ideology, the truth is the goal, it takes debate, discussion and study. The truth takes democracy.

The reason for the famous Winston Churchill quotes is not bc he was insightful, it's just bc he spoke English and Charles DeGualle was a fascist which capitalists are afraid of. Democracy isn't the best of a bunch of bad options, it is the best form of understanding imaginable. Done right, it is access to the entire body of knowledge shared between the collective, the right person with the right info at the right time, its a mosaic of expertise and collective conscious, democracy is collective genius.

Most people don't handle subjective evaluation well, and bc there's such rampant stupidity, it's hard for there to be constructive discussion and argument, but we have to do it, we are the generation who's going to lead the beginning of the next 250 years. We have to drop the full hostility to experts and institutions and we have to drop the things that don't matter, and don't work. We have to deal in reality, there's no sunk cost if we act now.

Policy is not for righting past wrongs, it's not for leveling the playing field. Fastest car enters the race, best driver drives the car, best crew works on the car, Division of labor, is the solution for a nation divided. Democracy is about adjusting to new information, in real time, dynamic. If we want democracy we have to put in the work, they'll come against it heavy, so we get heavier. Democracy is never ending scholarship and work in the field, leadership is never ending search for truth.

We don't have democracy bc were capitalist run and the only thing capitalists like less then capitalism is democracy, capitalists are anti-truth. Liberalism is simply not true, liberalism is corporatism, it's mercantilism, it's a sloppy shit show of homo's and con artists.

Hitler

Most people don't know this but Hitler was never elected. He lost multiple elections topping out at 18%. The way Hitler came to power is that the 84 year old president Von Hindenburg appointed him chancellor in a coalition government. Hindenburg falls ill, Hitler consolidates some power, then he dies and Hitler dismantles the democracy to form the Nazi state. Hitler didn't come to power on the will of the German people, he was a hated dictator from the start. Even when they were blowing out France and terrorizing the Atlantic with the U-boats, he only had 50% support. Trump has 50% support now, and he's been elected twice.

There were 10-12 attempts on Hitlers life every year. Serious real attempts, on the head of state, during war time. People with the highest security clearances in Nazi Germany, even his own high command generals tried to kill him. Erwin Rommel was a part of a peaceful plot against Hitler. Manstein was stationed in France, got a call from the staff generals in Berlin, they wanted his advice on how to handle the two front war, his response was "make peace you idiots" and then he hung up. These were Nazi field commanders.

Hitler was never a popular leader within Nazi Germany, he wasn't charismatic or likable that is propaganda. Bearnaise developed the most sophisticated propaganda ever and now it's been furthered into PR and Marketing. It's why we think everything we do about world war 2, that's why we think everything since world war 2. We are brainwashed, blind, deaf and dumb, marketing is war hazing and indoctrination. You want a dystopian novel that we're living? Welcome to " A Clockwork Orange."

The German people and even many blood and soil members of the Nazi party were dead set on killing Hitler, but nothing got through, Hitler got burned over once a month but never killed. It probably to some people did look like Grace, or at least luck, but it was neither, it was lack of will. Even Germany didn't actually have it in their heart of hearts, in the end there was only one man in all of Nazi Germany decisive enough to kill Hitler.

The problem was that everyone was trying to set explosives and then get away clean, but being more equal means stronger than evil. There's two ways to do things, the baseline is you don't, but if you do, then you see it all the way through. You pull the pin on that sucker, leave it in your pocket and go hug your fuhrer. If you fail you're getting put up against the wall anyway, do something with your life, kill somebody.

There were many ways for Hitler to not hold the power in Nazi Germany, more violence or more democracy either one but it's got to be full haul. Without Hitler there's no Goebbels, there's no Goering there's no Himmler. No SS, No Holocaust, No World War 2. Instead what Germany is, is everything the world hasn't had for last 80 years.

Germany in the 1920's had the greatest mathematicians, scientists and engineers in the world, they had the schools they taught at, Germany industrialized without losing their artisan craftsmanship, everything could have been like BMW and Mercedes, computers, microwaves, lawn mowers, everything. A new 3 class today would be $12K and all cars would be clean diesels or hybrids. The world in 2025 really could have had nuclear power plants the same size as a few transformers, you'd be able to put one on the back of a flatbed and run anywhere.

Germany was unified as German speaking peoples, including Jews who had served on the front lines of world war 1 with everyone else. They had a world class court system, government accountability, their policy setters were a democratically elected parliament and a foreign affairs office staffed by a dozen genius Prussian warlords. The only thing wrong with Nazi Germany was Adolf Hitler himself.

Fascism is the solution to liberalism. If Hitler hadn't dismantled Germany's democracy, then removing him wouldn't have been predicated on violence, but once you've declared yourself emperor for life, that's a self imposed death sentence. No one is above the nation, that Nazi's became capitalists and lost to the more Nationalist United States. Once democracy is no longer the real seat of government, then the rule of law is out, it is obligation to revolution.

Violence is an answer, nationalism is an ideology, fascism takes democracy, and democracy takes fascism.

Baby Boomers

No one is blaming the baby boomer parents, half the men die in world war 1, the next generation it happens again, of course they wanted things to be different for their children, but with the world decimated and everyone helpless to us, and two big oceans and two small countries on our borders, there was nothing the baby boomers could do other than be the weakest, softest and stupidest generation in world history, and they didn't waste any time. The 60's became the 80's with Nixon and

Reagan, winning blowout elections. Nixon was forced to resign bc he cheated in an election he couldn't possibly have lost and Ronald Reagan's brain was literally rotting when he was in office.

After Vietnam the draft dodgers, including Trump, got pardoned while the guys who served their government got thrown to the wolves. No one who answers conscription should ever be ignored by politicians, society can not stand for that, government doesn't get to move on from its blunders like that and how were people not calling for heads when Ford pardoned Nixon? President is a job in service of the nation, like every other. No one is above the nation, and buddy/buddy ball licking is derelict of duty, patronage destroys empires, we litigate against our decadence.

Donald Trump is really nothing new, the wheels were already coming off in the mid 60's, and the hippies didn't care, they were complicit in the system that they pretended to protest. We still are now. If Musk was seriously after Trump he would use his money to carve MAGA out of the republican party. It's all depoliticizing soap opera bullshit, it's flunkies and fools feuding, they might even believe themselves but it's still not true, they're bloody pussy's on the rag. Late stage capitalism doesn't turn into fascism, late stage capitalism is global oligarchy. It's a lethargic death.

None violent protest is complacency with getting blown out. It's getting pepper sprayed, beat up, arrested and charged with a crime to make no point. Pull your skirt down and make some demands. They pepper spray, you respond with the AK. Return fire, escalate, escalation is the lifeblood of revolution.

Conscientious objection can be a totally valid form of protest, but the draft dodgers during Vietnam weren't forcing government accountability, they weren't thinking about anything meaningful at all, they were just pussy's. Conscientious objection is an active, provocative thing. The baby boomers never stood for anything, they never did anything, meant anything, produced anything, to this day they've never done anything. Weak and stupid are synonymous, and the baby boomers are dipshits of history. People calling for peace against this administration, might as well just lie down face in mass grave. Fascism is the answer. We already have the moral and legitimacy high ground.

We are not the baby boom generation, one generation does not undo 2500 years of being. We are the grandsons and great grandsons of the fiercest civilization this world has ever known. World war 2 isn't about Germany and Japan, that was us.

Blitzkrieg was just Germany overwhelming and overrunning disorganized, panicked defenses. They were met as liberators as they moved east, and they blew France out in a month. World war 2 in Europe didn't start until we got there.

D-Day

We were the army that leveled Europe, the Nazi's were the first actual defense of the European continent. World War 2 was the Nazi's defending against our invasion, we were the terminator force that crossed that channel and took those beaches, not the Nazis. We were the savage mother fuckers who in our rage and vengeance, mobilized our entire society, fired up the war economy and laid waste across the globe in a two front war. The only time our economy has ever worked was in world war 2, we pulled ourselves up off the mat like we'd never been down, it was a war economy, but what made it work is it was government lead projects. The ideal economy has good government initiated projects and private enterprise, market systems are not ideologies, they're tools.

The Nazi's were the dug in defense, bunkers, barb wire, land mines, 50 cal belt fed machine guns, and not a prayer in the world. We cleaned up the entire continent with Germany, we turned Europe into scorched earth, we burnt every last stitch the ground as we pushed the Nazi's back into the ruins of Berlin. 1500 years after the Germanic Arian goths toppled Catholic Rome, fundamentalist Christian Americans returned across the Atlantic and crushed Aryan Nazi Europe. We were everything Nazi Germany could only dream of being in that war, and that wasn't even the main event of that war.

Asia's war tradition predates Europe's by almost 8000 years, so it is fitting that the heavy weight title fight of human history was in the pacific, that's why Japan attacked us they knew exactly what it was. It was the mandate of heaven against destiny manifest, they wanted war with us and they entered us into world war 2 by bombing our island, and they got war with us, we gave them all they could ever handle, we ended world war 2 by bombing theirs. That's how the fuck America used to make war, I would argue right or wrong, that's just who we really are.

I don't care if you give it some PG name for the PR whatever you call it, the bottom line is the same, fascism is the ideological soul for America, we won't regret returning to it.

Section V - America 2.0

“and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.”

Declaration of Independence
July 4, 1776

17 – The Nation State of The United States

“You have sat too long here for any good that you have done, now the good grace of God, go before you”

Oliver Cromwell
Address to Rump Parliament

Donald Trump even got his peace prize, yet he still goes unfulfilled and that's no surprise, anyone who actually deserves an award like that isn't even thinking about it. Anyone who deserves a Nobel peace prize wouldn't even know if they had been nominated. The world is returning to normalcy, and the world is forever in conflict. No one serious is going to have time to leave the front lines any time soon, peace achieved today just means a different timezone tomorrow. Trump is like a fish he's entertained by shiny things, war and peace are one and the same, they really are, all work is heavy work, and Trump can't do any of it. Joe Biden for all his failure is notable for a life in politics, the goal isn't the life of a former president, it's to be at the helm navigating the storm, life happens at the pit.

Trump doesn't understand that and the thing is that would be ok if he was good at the admin work, but he's not, our whole constitution is null and void. His oath of office is invalid, he's an enemy of the state, not bc he insighted an insurrection, but bc he failed it. Trump couldn't lead his own coup, this is the United States, we don't have time to waste, tar and feather his stupid ass and leave him in a dumpster.

We are living in his denial, this is pussy shit, we can't be giving him serious positions hoping he does something eventually. We can't tolerate less than American, he's a bitch and a failure, look at this term, prices aren't coming down, inflation's up, grocery prices are through the roof. Trump is bombing civilians, and mobilizing troops in our cities. Donald Trump is the ultimate fake tough, wannabe strong man, he's stupid as fuck, corrupt and a total fraud politician, Trump is the dunce cap king, and hes a US president.

Oh what? No one told him what we do to do with presidents around here?

We whack presidents, that's just what we do in this county. It's the most deadly job in the world, 17% of presidents have died while in office. Trump signed his own death warrant, we execute executives who can't cut it, strong men get strong treatment. We're rolling back to Virginia dynasty republicanism, we're the sons of the founders, we were born into a pax period, we were destined to see it end, and then do it again. Revolution lives in the hearts and minds of all Americans, it has to, we see it every day. That's what this all is, American Violence is the way of the patriots, vertical violence, lets bring state violence to the state.

The civil war was a hostile takeover and we can't reasonably be expected to take this, overthrowing this regime is implicit in the founding documents, and explicit in who our founders were. We are the grandsons of liberty, Our founders can't do it anymore, and our posterity can't do it yet, the whole world is counting on us, and isn't violently overthrowing the government just American? We storm continents, we wage war, and we whack presidents. Apple pie, baseball, the only thing more American than revolution is killing presidents, let's all share in our most hallowed tradition.

There are no rules except framing a new constitution on the other side. The executive office, the judiciary and both chambers of the legislator have failed. Both parties, have failed. The whole thing has rotted and corroded and it's here, tyranny or revolution are our only options, and that's no option at all...The tea party, the original tea party, was the protest of a tax on the importation of tea, a tariff. This country was founded by overthrowing an incompetent king and stuffy parliament over tyranny and tariffs.

Our founders were wealthy aristocracy and they could have chosen to stay wealthy aristocracy, but they didn't. They risked wealth, life and limb, and Washington, at the height of his popularity and power, gave it away. He believed in what they were doing, they all did. We should too. "You can burn them, you can maim them, you can kill them, but you can not make people take a government they will not have." The revolution never ended, it continues every day, hearts and minds over through governments, iron will crushes empires, will to power is the power to rule.

The Greater Great War

Our capitalist over class has been a problem since 1860, the constitution was ruined, the south was colonized, and now the north has been colonized by Tory creep. After the labor wars, the capitalist ruling class intentionally caused shocks to stress the system and get a central bank and then we had the great depression.

WW2 was the grand finale on the first movement of civilization. All of human history was on full display for world war 2, it was everything humans are at once, and we won, we were never not going to, but it was still a choice to commit to that war. We could have lost if we did nothing or did something less than what we did. Japan attacked us and Germany declared war on us, and we brought them full scale war, but it wasn't this country that we entered that war for, it couldn't have been.

Capitalism had failed for what looked like the last time, the US was an impoverished wasteland families kicked out of homes, vicious labor wars, crashed markets, crashed economies, shelves empty, buildings boarded shut, no jobs, no hope, no nothing.

Overseas things were worse, fascism and communism were in vogue across the globe. The empires were over, Japan had blasted the colonies out of Asia and the Nazi's had taken Europe in nine months, there was no neutrality from Portugal to Minsk answered to the 3rd Reich and the two greatest empires the world had ever known were down to a single island. There was only one thing we could have possibly entered that war to for, and that's the answer right there, that's the answer to the whole thing, I don't even think the people of Hiroshima and Nagasaki died in vein, this country was founded and defended on the belief that democracy is worth fighting for, and they were right.

Well that's my narrative, I think it's democracy that we are.

Appendix 1 - Domestic Policy

I've been laying out ideas for a new constitution throughout. It's fine and even good to disagree, conditioned on you having a better policy solution. It can't be that you don't like it, and there is no better way than what works, the policies we can make and enforce to accomplish the job are the only answer.

There's been a lot of studies over the last couple hundred years. We have to remember our constitution is just a first draft, it's supposed to be updated, and we've gotten a lot of good information over the last 250 years, all our problems have policy solutions, the pieces are out there, we have to put them together into a single legal document, and we have to kick the Tories to the curb for good this time.

Our founders tarred and feathered Tories, and moderating voices, we were founded by a Patriot consensus. There has to be consensus that we work from, we can't litigate and debate everything, we have to govern ourselves, certain things have to just be. Our founding patriot consensus, with adjustments and updates.

The key to domestic policy is we want big government where it works, small government where it works, markets have to be maintained with fierce, governmental intervention. The lifeblood of the economy is small business, our federal government is the tool to bring large corporations to heel.

New congressional design:

One chamber, two parties, Majority/Opposition, everything done in house, bills signed into law by the Prime minister and I like the idea of the minority leader signing too (in a deadlock just the PM is necessary sign laws). The parties are not enemies trying to blockade each other, they're both heading in the direction that's best for the Patriot nation while making sure all constituencies have been considered, the greater good is the greatness of that nation.

The executive arm, like all branches, agencies and departments of government, is not equal to the law makers. Congress is the most equal, we need to staff it accordingly. The executive arm is like the sheriff's department it has no law making influence, and it should be split into foreign policy and domestic as well as state security and a bureaucratic politburo, elected from the congress. The president works with who they're given.

States rights

States rights is really a major key to everything, states rights of course means state and local government, it's not no government, and it's not creating a rentier frontier, it's local people deciding their local governments. "Democracy" is what we are, "Republicanism" is how we structure ourselves.

Domestic Business

Business incorporate in the state they operate, if they exist in more than one state, they are no longer small business and do not fall under the exclusive umbrella of state governments, they then become the jurisdiction of the federal government. Our government is going to break these bitches and turn them out for the good of the nation.

Immigration policy is federal, border policy is state. States do have to enforce certain basic parameters but they are allowed to do it how they see fit, the federal government is a resource available to help if requested. If California wants to have a humane border policy, that's their business, but birthright citizenship and the benefits and rights of being American are not going to be extended to illegals or their children. We are not a nation of immigrants we are a warrior class imperial state.

New US Capital

We're no longer 13 east coast states, I think the capital should be moved to the center of the country, make an economic hub out of what's currently unoccupied federal land in South Dakota or Nebraska. DC is on the water, it naturally will be productive, Washington DC should become part of Maryland.

Small Banks

Small banks are not big banks, totally different animals, and they need less regulations, and more protections under the law. Germany when it's economy was booming had these small public banks that lent to local business, that's a design we should look at, it's all a means to the same end. Small banks, for productive lending, loan officers on the ground, seeing the business for themselves, low fixed rates for the small business.

Taxes

Ideally there will be minimal taxes from income or even small capital gains, I'm not honestly sure how realistic that is, but the key to taxes is they come from the top first, second and third. Our government just isn't making an effort, there's no where to hid money that it can't be tracked. We get our tax money, government is us we are the government, corporations are not us, they're going to get in line. Don't believe their bs, they don't create jobs, they don't invest, they extract. We're going to get these co's acting properer).

ICE should work for the IRS, they need a collections arm, why beat up beaners, when you can kneecap the pricks behind all the problems?

Our official IRS mission statement: "Oh the place got hit by lightning? Fuck you, pay me." We get our money, our corporations work for our nation, its not socialism it's imperialism and it's not handouts, we're taking it and investing it into the American nation. Fuck you pay me suit.

Lobbying

Lobbying is out, that was an error we can easily correct. If something is in the public interest then that's what the 1st amendment is for, we make that information public and let democracy work. Private lobby groups are by definition undemocratic.

Appendix 2 – Foreign Policy

This is what it's all about right here, Foreign Affairs is really what government is for, if it wasn't for intercontinental corporations the state governments would be able to run all domestic affairs themselves (assuming they don't violate basic American rights, guaranteed to all citizens, but citizens only). Federal government should just be available to the states for things like boarder patrol or disaster relief.

Unfortunately in a globalized interconnected world, the states just aren't resourced enough so we have to pool and scale up. We live in the age of big government, so we have big government where it works, small government where it works, and where big government works best is for being the biggest and baddest nation in global affairs.

The US government defends the American people. We don't take the safety and security of our people lightly, we do take the safety and security of your people lightly.

State Dept.

Right off the top we decouple foreign policy from domestic politics, diplomats should be locked in 6 years at a time. Currently, every 2 years we vote opposition into power and gridlock or 180 ourselves, it makes us a nightmare partner and pigeon intelligence target for our enemies, and believe you me we are infiltrated, we gotta clean house, but the solution starts with long term and sustainable diplomatic arraignments

Foreign affairs is military and democratically accountable elected policy makers. Diplomats are policy makers with agency and latitude, auftragstaktik. They are not selected by the executive branch of the Federal government.

I'm not sure the best way to select them, but we have good people, statecraft is a skill that can be taught, we

Foreign Policy

The policy is simple, diplomacy is the finesses with which it is applied.

We don't take the safety and security of our citizen and soldiers lightly, we do take the safety and security of your soldiers and citizens lightly, proceed accordingly. There is no international order or law or courts that we will be bothered to recognize. There is diplomacy and trade and there's military.

Doors open, we prefer win/win trade and foreign relationships to conflict, our goal is longstanding positive alliances. We ally with our allies, we don't intervene or mettle in the domestic politics of our allies, we support our allies, and we do good business by our allies.

It doesn't matter if it shows up in the bottom line, being a good trade and coalition partner is good business, we do good business, we want win/win deals, we want our trade partners to leave a deal happy.

Statesmen run the state department, diplomacy first, our corporations are just tools in service of the nation.

If there is conflict, we do not shy away from war, war is what we do best.

Wars are fought to be won. Fair warning, this is the deterrence, this is all the deterrence anyone will get. We are done wasting money, we win wars by staying sharp every chance we get, we desire the opportunity to unleash a bunch of coked up 18 year old's with fully automatic weapons on your civilization. We never gave a fuck and now we give a fuck less.

We have no desire or reason to bully neutral countries, we are neutral towards neutrality, we ally with our allies and we crush our enemies. We pound pussy's and we drop bombs.
