WHO KNOWS THE ANSWER?

Basil Tomkins recently received a batch of new identities from member D Houtris, one of which was only identified by the initials and address of the firm. The stamp was postmarked London 21st May 1935 and the envelope had the return address J.M.&S Ld, 222, Upper Thames Street, London, E.C.4.

Can anyone help Basil with the full name of this Company?

IPSWICH FIRM'S PHILATELIC LINKS

By Mike J. Burrows

When Ipswich corn merchant A.K. Cowell set up his second son, Samuel Harrison Cowell, in business as, amongst other things, a printer, one wonders if he thought his son would be as successful as he turned out.

One of the first known imprints from this press is dated 1819, about a year after its inauguration. Besides being a printer, S.H. Cowell was also a tea, coffee and wine merchant. One of his price lists shows that he was selling strong Gun Powder Tea at 13/- a pound.

At the introduction of lithography or anastatic printing he saw to it that artists were encouraged in this form of expression. To help them he made up special kits for their use. When the Anastatic Drawing Society was formed they found a welcome sponsor in S.H. Cowell. This enabled them to have an annual volume of selected works by members published.

The coming of the railway into Suffolk put plenty of work on to the presses. Examples of the age are the collectors items, such as the Eastern Union Railway timetables.

At the Ipswich premises of the printers, the first production model of a machine capable of printing two colours at one pass was installed. This machine which ran at the then very high speed of 900 sheets per hour had been patented by a Mr Newsom in 1875.

In the same year W.S. Cowell had taken over command. Although it was many years before this was reflected in the company title. Electricity was first used to power the presses in 1887, the generator supplying enough power to enable other firms in the immediate vicinity to be supplied as well. This was some time before the Ipswich Corporation got around to providing companies with the same service.

When it became necessary, the Colne Valley and Halstead Railway Company approached Cowells to produce their railway letter fee stamps. These were made available in time for February 1891. The lithographed stamp was an adaption of the more general design used by other railway companies. Only one printing was made in sheets of twelve, four rows of three. Incidentally, Ewen in his catalogue gives the print as 1000. Whether this means stamps or sheets is not clear to me. Twelve thousand stamps seem rather a lot and yet 84 sheets does not seem enough.

The then well known firm of world-wide stamp dealers, Whitfield King & Company, went to Cowells, their local printers, to produce their famous "Universal Standard Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of the World" (What a mouthful, no wonder it got abbreviated to 'WK' catalogue.) The first edition of this 300 odd paged, well illustrated catalogue, rolled off the press in early 1899. If you look through old stamp magazines you will no doubt be surprised how important this tome once was to collectors. The reviews show that the 'WK' was more popular than today's famous range of catalogues.

By the 1930's the Printing Company had developed to include a paper bag factory, a large retail store and a wine and spirit merchants.

A large printing works was opened after the war in 1948 on a nearby site. This enabled the company to become more ambitious in the field of multicolour litho work.

There is no doubt that their professionalism and expertise cumulated in that fantastic volume, known locally as "The Book of the Century", more familiar to philatelists as "The Royal Philatelic Collection". Taking over five years to bring the experiments to fruition, the book became available in November 1952.

To give some idea of the work involved, Editor Clarence Winchester, with the then Keeper of the Royal Philatelic Collection Sir John Wilson, and the craftsmen of Cowells, were only satisfied with the reproduction of a certain pair of pages of stamps after 50 printings. These pages contained what was, at the time, the highest number of colours used for an illustration in the U.K.

In the book there are two collotype portraits. These were produced by Waterlow & Sons Limited, the one time postage stamp printers. These and the binding were the only parts of the production not carried out by Cowells.

Nowadays the Printers, the Furniture Store and the Wine Merchants still exist, albeit under different ownerships.

On a personal note, my own example of an anastatic press is a Waterlow & Sons production, and dates from about 1870. It was rescued from the stable block of an old established firm of solicitors located in Norfolk, about ten years ago.

One perfin is attributed to W.S. Cowell Limited,

675.1 WSC 13,10,8 4½mm,

This perfin is known from February 1901, the same year that the Company was incorporated as a private limited company known as W.S. Cowell Limited.

What is also of interest is the perfin,
343.1 SHC 10,12,8 4½mm

This is known with postmarks of Ipswich dated between 1896 and 1898, and may have been the predecessor of the identified item.

In response to an earlier article about the highest face value stamp known bearing a perfin, (see 0552) a revenue stamp of Rhodesia and postage stamps of Natal and Germany are cited.

0554 Responses to articles

Fisher Jr., G.A.

Perf. Bull., July/Aug. 1976, 29, (7), 8

In response to an earlier article, (see 0552) it is pointed out that the Japanese perfin design consisting of a horizontal line above a capital T is actually a security perforation which is intended to weaken the paper of the seals so that the seal is broken if the registered envelope, on which the seals are used, is tampered with.

0555 Responses to articles

Adachi, S., Maeda, H. & Groleau, G.

Perf. Bull., Sept. 1976, 29, (8), 6

The Japanese perfin design consisting of a horizontal line above a capital T which was illustrated earlier (see 0552) is a security perforation through registered envelope seals, intended to ensure that the seals are damaged if the envelope is tampered with.

- 0559 Chris Carr's Chat
Carr, C.
S.E.P.S. Bull., May/June 1972, (139), 3
A suggested price list of British perfins given in a previous article, was based on the catalogue value of the stamp on which the perfin was found rather than on the scarcity of the perfin. The logic of this system is explained and the obvious exception, bulk Q.E. II perfins, is considered.

- 0561 Our Calcutta letter
Corfield, W.
Gibbons Stamp Wkly. 22nd. Apr. 1905, 1, (16), 256-257
From the first use of postage stamps in India, writing over the stamps on cover was permitted to prevent the theft of the stamp from the cover and its subsequent resale. When the use of separate revenue stamps was dropped and postage stamps served both postal and revenue purposes, permission for such manuscript endorsements
was revoked.
- 0562 News from Mysore
Wetherell, E.W.
Gibbons Stamp Wkly., 20th May 1905, 1, (20), 321
Until April 1905, Indian stamps could be pen-marked before use to prevent messengers who take letters to the post from stealing the stamps. Subsequently, manuscript endorsements were prohibited as combined postage and revenue stamps were under consideration and pen-marking is a normal means of cancelling stamps used fiscally.

Maxa, V.
Perf. Bull., Jan. 1976, 29, (1), 3-7
Before the revolution, there were both official and private perfins in Russia. The so-called official perfins were in fact perforated cancellations intended to prevent the cleaning and re-use of high value stamps. A complete list of all known Russian perfins (both official and private) is given, which includes perfins found on the stamps of Russian Levant and Finland (when a Russian Grand Duchy).

R.H.C.
Gibbons Stamp Wkly., 17th Aug. 1907, 6, (7), 111
The Natal official stamp was originally used by various government departments but towards the end of its life only the Natal Government Railways used it. After the official stamp ceased to be used the Natal Government Railways used regular postage stamps perforated N.G.R.

Gibbons Stamp Wkly., 4th Mar. 1905, 1, (9), 147-148
Australian stamps perforated CS are for departmental use by government servants and are on a par with commercial firms perforations to prevent theft. Gibbons' view is that very few philatelists collect them and even as departmentals, they are of doubtful value.

S.E.P.S. Bull., Mar./Apr. 1972, (138), 2-3
All stamps which have been perfinned with the Security Endorsement and Perfin Society's perfin SEP/. /S are listed and the number perforated on each stamp is given. Only the stamps of Great Britain and U.S.A. have been perforated. Note. The date in the title should have been 14.2.71 (correction in: S.E.P.S. Bull., May/June 1972, (139), 3.
- 0568 Official stamps: postage stamps perforated O.H.M.S. for government use Patrick, D. & Patrick, H.
Canada's postage stamps, McClelland & Stewart Ltd., Toronto, 1964, 137-142
A Canadian Treasury Board Minute of May 10th, 1938 specified that government departments were to be furnished with postage stamps perforated O.H.M.S. This order was put into effect on July 1st, 1939. Prior to this date, certain government departments, notably the Department of Finance had perforated their own postage stamps. At first, the Post Office Department borrowed one of those early 5-hole OHMS machines, but subsequently obtained its own 4-hole machine. The use of perforated stamps ceased upon the introduction of the overprinted officials in 1949.

PERFINS AUCTION - WINTER 1980

This, the third auction of the year, clears the backlog of lots received by the Auctioneer, and he is therefore in a position to accept material again.

The last auction produced some interesting results with the top price of £28 going for a collection of Canadian Official perfins and associated literature. There was little or no interest in modern G.B. perfins but very keen competition in the earlier material, especially when on cover (one bidder would have paid £12 for a 1d red on cover). This seems to be a major trend and one which will be interesting to follow over the next few auctions.

This auction is the biggest to date with 194 lots and its make-up varies markedly from our normal ones. There are many high value stamps and much early G.B. material on offer, but only one lot of foreign.

Closing date for bids is Friday 21st November 1980 and overseas members should submit bids by airmail.
