ANOTHER GLC DIE?

an example of GLC (now shown us Roy Everett has provisionally is significantly numbered G310a) which different from the usual very common G310. The latter must be amongst the most common perfin, but the former could be much less well known.

common setting may come in two varieties, large and small The It is usual to separate otherwise hole. not identical of different hole size. but in this there patterns case appears difference as well with small he a date the hole variation. the large Sterling issues and also on Decimal appearing on These are shown above as II and III. The new die issues. identified with (which has not yet been the Greater London I and it will Council) is shown above as be seen that it is the 'G' is much closer quite different that the 'L'. in to The width Measurements are 12½ and 15 mm.

Can anyone throw any light on these GLC dies - look at your holdings again for the type I and report postmarks/identities to the Editor.
