Propane bitumen boilers are the product of years of experience in the manufacture of bitumen boilers. The construction and fitting of the equipment represents the latest technology; the robust design takes into consideration the rigours of building sites; the heating system - without internal heating tubes - guarantees, because of the large heating areas, a high melting capacity using only small amounts of gas.

Economic viability is achieved both by a high degree of firing efficiency and by double casing insulation. Both the energy-saving heating technique and the cleanliness of combustion have been confirmed by a State approved testing institution in W. Germany.

GRÜN bitumen boilers are designed on the basis of a modular construction system and can easily be reduced to the main component parts without any tools, as a result of which exchanges of parts within boilers of the same size can be made without any problems, this often solves transportation difficulties.

The construction is rigid and wholly suitable for building site use, the steelplate is strong and of excellent quality thus extending the life of the equipment - a wind-shielded vortex beam and row burners ensure a uniform spread of heat on to the boiler base.

The standard model includes hand-operated burners. The absence of heating tubes prevents cleaning problems.

Equipment of 30 gallon capacity or above can be fitted with a dial thermometer if required; equipment with more than 50 gallon effective contents can be designed, on request, for thermostatic regulation of the burner by an automatic control, the design of which is based on tried and tested component parts. The control is effected via an adjustable valve which regulates the gas discharge rate.
