

The Lost Kitten

One rainy afternoon, Aina was walking home from school when she heard a soft meowing sound. She stopped and looked around. Under a big tree, she saw a tiny, shivering kitten with wet fur.

“Oh no, you’re all alone!” Aina said gently. She carefully picked up the kitten and wrapped it in her scarf. The kitten purred softly, feeling warm and safe.

Aina brought the kitten home and gave it some milk. She asked her mother, “Can we keep it?”

Her mother smiled. “We should find its owner first,” she said.

Aina made a small poster with a picture of the kitten and put it up around the neighborhood. The next day, a boy named Amir came to their house.

“That’s my kitten, Whiskers! He ran away during the storm,” Amir said excitedly.

Aina felt a little sad to say goodbye, but she knew the kitten belonged to Amir. “Take good care of him,” she said with a smile.

Amir nodded. “Thank you for saving Whiskers!”

From that day on, Aina and Amir became good friends. And whenever Aina saw Whiskers, he always purred happily, as if saying thank you.

This story teaches kindness, responsibility, and friendship in a simple and engaging way.
