Confessions of a Romance Writer Seven Things I Didn't Know Before I Became One

Are you a...

- ♦ ...writer who dreams of seeing your own work in print someday?
- ♦ ...reader with an idle curiosity about the fascinating world of romance writing?

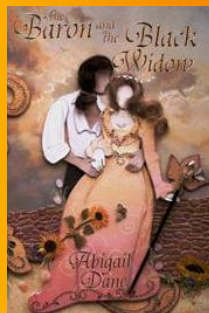

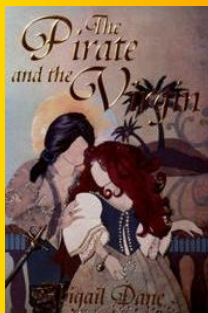

THIS SESSION IS FOR YOU!

The Journey. I taught undergraduate and post-graduate courses in business, academic, technical and creative writing for more than fifteen years. But after completing my first historical novel in 2015, I realized just how little I knew about getting a book from first draft to manuscript, from manuscript to publication, and from publication to reader.

I've had a crash course in romance writing and publishing since then. In "Confessions," I share what I've learned.

Program Description. Romance writing, a $1.6 billion-dollar a year industry, is driven almost exclusively by women. So why are the women who read and write romance novels so often reluctant to admit it? Why is the world's most popular literary genre also the least respected form of literature? Can those who don't read or write romance ever understand the art and skill required to do it and do it well?

This lively, visual, interactive program answers these and participant questions about the perils and joys of launching a romance writing career. Insights provided through discussion, readings, stories, examples, handouts, Q&A, and more.

DIY Book Trailers and Videos:

Easy, Fast, Fun and (almost) Free!

Learn how to create your own book trailers and promotional videos using free or almost free downloadable online programs, music and image resources.

Interactive Editing Playshop

Writing and editing are two different but equally critical skills for a writer. In this fun, interactive playshop, you'll learn fixes for common grammar woes, find remedies for your own writing gremlins and get expert style advice.

Jumpstart Your Intuition

What is intuition? Does everyone have it? Can it be taught/learned/induced? Learn the six types and four receptors, and discover ways to recognize, build, trust and act on your own intuition.

Success from the Inside Out

Ever ask Why? Wonder about your own higher purpose? Wish you understood more about how life really works? You may find the insights you seek in this gentle yet challenging program.

Intrepid Board Leadership for the Trepid Board Leader

Recruiting, training and managing a volunteer board is one of the most challenging yet rewarding roles you'll ever have to handle. Discover leadership secrets that can smooth your way to greater satisfaction and success.
