

Spring News Letter

Hello my flowery friends and Happy Spring.

How are you all? I do hope the last few weeks haven't been too testing and that you are all looking forward to some beautiful spring sunshine. (wishful thinking)

I'm not going to lie I've found the winter months exhausting, lets just say I did a little happy dance when the girls returned to school. I'm now playing catch up with everything, housework, admin and most importantly seed sowing!

My autumn sown flowers are doing well and I'm super proud of this years sweet peas. They look strong and healthy and I'm hoping for bumper crops. Now home schooling has finished (fingers crossed) my energies can be put to good use at my neglected allotment. I've made some good progress and already its looking like a promising year.

What's been happening?

So what's been happening these past couple of months?

Generally January is a quieter month for florists and growers alike. Its the perfect time to take a breath and plan for the year and that was my intension, home schooling however scuppered by plans of Netflix marathons!

It's then gets going with Valentines and Mothers Day. I don't usually get involved with the peak periods but this year I offered some beautiful bouquets and vases of British blooms which proved really popular.

Flower School program

I usually plan my flower school program in advance for the who year. Obviously with the uncertainty of the past 12 months I'm having to play it by ear so to speak. This means that dates have had to be gigged and changed along the way.
