TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3 TSUNAMIS IN THE SALISH SEA

5pm at the Stanwood Library. Learn about the geologic evidence for past tsunamis in the Salish Sea, and how this evidence can help us prepare for future tsunamis. The tidal marsh at Discovery Bay, on the Strait of Juan de Fuca, has the longest record of tsunami deposits in Washington. This sequence of at least 10 local tsunamis over the last 3,000 years helps us to understand both the variety of tsunami sources and how often they occur. We will look at the latest tsunami hazard maps published by the Washington Geological Survey and discuss ways to be prepared for the next tsunami. Registration appreciated.

BYOA - Bring Your Own Army. The rules are miniature agnostic, use whatever models you have the fit the holiday theme. From Lego soldiers and armies of undead to murderous gingerbread men and gang-lord Santa, use your imagination! We will use Dragon Rampant rules (Fantasy), and be playing with 24 points. If you arrive early we can work out the particulars of your army. Best thing to do is bring what you have and we will work it out! Be creative and thematic! It will be December, so anything holiday related. Feel free to dress up yourself and get into the spirit of the season!

RANDY'S TREES TO TREASURES

"Hi Everyone, My name is Randy Pedersen and I am a hobbyist woodworker on Camano Island. Most of my projects started out as logs I have cut on my sawmill. On Friday 11/29 (Black Friday) I am going to open up my gift store (Randy's Trees to Treasures) again for just for 1 day between 9AM and 4 PM. I will have many hand-made items (including a 1930s sled I have rebuilt) along with rough lumber I have milled for sale. Come by and see what I have or just to see where I do my work and to talk about wood.

THE WOODSHOP AT THE OPEN GATE FARM

Keeping it simple...The Woodshop at The Open Gate Farm on Camano Island has been building beautiful, inexpensive caskets since 2020. Whether traditional, with hinges and metal parts and stains, or "green", with just pegs, hide glue, and local wood, our hand-crafted caskets have met the needs of dozens of families. Whether for sudden situations or pre-need, the simplicity of their designs respects the values we all cherish. The most popular option has been the bookshelf option. Use the casket for your books and when the need arises, take out the books and shelves and it's ready! Kids caskets are free. Having lost a young child of our own years ago, we understand the stresses on families when a child dies. From conception on, just ask, and it's available at no cost to the family. With all of them, the purchasers are welcome to come to the shop and help finish the casket. We're here on Camano, just a phone call away...425-330-0433. Call when it's convenient...whether a casket for some other project!

CHRISTMAS HOUSE

Christmas House is a 100% volunteer, non-profit organization in Everett, that provides an opportunity for qualifying, low-income, Snohomish County parents to select free holiday gifts for their children age infant-18. Christmas House was founded in 1981 by Roy Fraser in his garage. Roy had heard of children in Snohomish County who had not received anything for the prior Christmas and was determined to change that. He established the first annual Christmas House and stocked it primarily with used toys and handmade items, which they refurbished and gave away to families in need. They served more than 100 children the first year. Unfortunately, Roy did not live to see the second Christmas House, but his memory lives on. The general format of how Christmas House functions has not changed over the years, just the number of families and individual children who benefit from his dream over four decades ago. <https://christmas-house.org/>

CITY OF STANWOOD TAKES ADDITIONAL FLOOD CONTROL MEASURES

City Council has approved the construction of a deployable flood gate near the 532 Overpass on Marine Drive, a vital step in enhancing flood protection for downtown Stanwood. Construction will begin in early November, with completion anticipated by early 2025. The project involves building a concrete structure beneath Marine Drive that metal gates can be slid into when flooding happens to prevent water from breaching Stanwood. In previous years, staff and community volunteers have sandbagged this section of road, known as "Fort Freberg," which is time and labor intensive. Having a deployable flood gate, similar to those constructed in Mount Vernon, will make response times faster and more efficient. This work marks one of two project phases. The second phase will involve constructing a second set of flood gates along the railroad tracks. The city is working closely with BNSF on the second phase of this project. "My commitment to you as Mayor is to do all we can to prevent flooding," Mayor Roberts. "The flood gate project is another measure we are taking to keep our city safe." In 2021, the City of Stanwood constructed the flood berm that runs along Highway 532. The flood berm has already proven effective at preventing water from spilling over the highway as a result of flooding from the Stillaguamish River. The total project cost for the Marine Drive Flood Control Project is anticipated to be $432,606. The City of Stanwood also has plans to repair the failing dike that sits west of downtown Stanwood, just before the Stanwood Camano Bridge. The 100-year-old dike built by farmers in the late 1800s separates Stanwood from the Puget Sound. Staff have managed to raise over $8 million in grant funding to make the Dike Repair Project possible and are working in collaboration with the Stillaguamish Tribe of Indians, Snohomish County and other regional partners to see this crucial work through.

REVENGE OF THE TREES

I do my fair share of tree cutting, I'll admit to it. The trees I fall seem hopelessly defenseless maybe to the uninitiated newcomer to the woods and forests here on the not quite civilized South End, rooted as they are when the chainsaw revs up and the first cut for the back notch is made. But those fresh immigrants from the cities and suburbs they fled would be wrong, amigo. Trees have been here longer than us, longer than the indigenous Southendomish tribe who feared the spirits beyond the safety of their open beaches and shorelines, longer than the fauna that evolved from earlier flora. Their DNA is more complex, their lifespans are far greater and their size makes midgets of the largest of us.

Long after we've gone extinct or left or a greener pasture on another planet in another star system, trees will reclaim what we took. They're here for the long haul and they know how to play the long game. Even though I replant 10 times what I cut down for firewood, they know I'm not their friend. You might think only the alders would count me as a mortal enemy since I only cut them, but the firs and the cedars, the maples and hemlocks, they'll always side with their arboreal kin. I get it.

Last year a maple sheared off and smashed our wellhouse. This was after an old hemlock did the same and crushed my boathouse. An accident? you're probably thinking. Not me. They could have fallen 330 degrees away from these buildings, but no, they hit them dead on. Bad luck, you're figuring? Yesterday I came down the trail and toward the wellhouse I'd rebuilt. The same maple dropped another limb the size of a tree aimed right at the new building. At first I thought it had missed by 8 mere inches but after bucking up limbs and trunk, I noticed part of the wellhouse had been whacked hard enough to move it out of plumb, snap the corner post and send siding flying.

If I thought my trees had exacted enough revenge, I was badly mistaken. Evidently there's no truce and no peace plan. I may have to stop using firewood for heat ... but I suspect it's too late for that.

PEANUT BUTTER BEAR PAW COOKIES

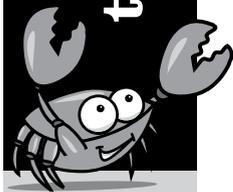

Soft and chewy peanut butter cookies topped with a fun chocolate paw print, Enjoy!

INGREDIENTS: 1/2 c. butter, softened; 1 c. creamy peanut butter; 1 c. granulated sugar, plus 1/4 c. for rolling the cookies in; 1/2 c. light brown sugar, packed; 2 lg. eggs; 1/2 tsp. vanilla extract; 2 c. all-purpose flour; 2 tsp. baking soda; 1/2 tsp. salt; 48 dark chocolate melting wafers (I use Ghirardelli); 144 dark chocolate chips (I use Ghirardelli)

DIRECTIONS: 1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Line rimmed baking sheets with parchment paper; set aside. 2. In a large bowl, beat together the butter, peanut butter, sugar, and brown sugar until smooth and creamy. Add in eggs and vanilla, beat until combined. 3. In a medium bowl, whisk together flour, baking soda, and salt. Add the flour mixture to the peanut butter mixture and beat until just combined. 4. Using a small cookie scoop, scoop tablespoonfuls of dough. Roll the dough into balls then roll in granulated sugar. Place 2-inches apart on the prepared baking sheets. 5. Bake for 7-9 minutes. The cookies should look puffy and soft but set. 6. Remove the cookies from the oven. Press a chocolate wafer into the lower center portion of each cookie, then add 3 chocolate chips to make the paw-shaped pattern. 7. Allow the cookies to completely cool on the pans. To speed things up, place the baking sheet with cookies in the refrigerator for 15-20 minutes to allow the chocolate to harden. 8. Once the cookies have completely set, you can stack them in between parchment or wax paper and store them in an air-tight container for 2-3 days on the counter, 1 week in the refrigerator, or 3 months in the freezer. Yields 48 cookies.

THE HEARTBREAK OF TIME BLINDNESS

It seems like every month, we learn about a new mental health dysfunction. For example, I'll bet you've never heard of Globophobia. This diagnosis, first issued in 2013, is the irrational fear of balloons. Then there's Alien Hand Syndrome (AHS), a rare medical condition in which the person loses total bodily control of one of their hands – something that attacks me whenever I play pickleball and invariably end up blowing the final point as I send the ball soaring wildly out of bounds.

And now there's another enigmatic medical condition known as Time Blindness. It's a peculiar phenomenon where the victim is crippled by a severe inability to gauge how much time has elapsed or estimate how long a task will take. As a result, Time Blinders as they are called tend to be chronically late ...for everything.

People who, like me, have mild to moderate ADD, are more prone to lose track of time because... where did I put my keys? I wonder when the next episode of Yellowstone will come out. Um... where was I? Oh right. Time Blindness. You may have a family member who suffers from this malady. Don't scoff. It's become a widespread mental health crisis. In fact, medical experts estimate 85% of people under the age of 30 who routinely watch TikTok videos on their phone experience this condition on an hourly basis. Don't believe me? Just ask their parents.

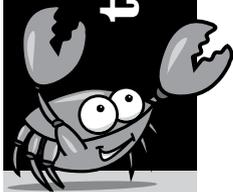

I have tremendous empathy for these punctually impaired individuals. Imagine how difficult their lives must be. They set off for the grocery store to get a couple items, telling their girlfriend, "I'll be home in 30 minutes with dessert" only to return two hours later, having purchased 40% of the bakery section's inventory of pies and cakes – not to mention bringing home an impressive collection of new gardening tools, thanks to an unplanned side trip to the ACE hardware store because they saw they were having a 15% off sale. It's as if their concept of time operates on a secret cosmic calendar that only they can decipher.

Victims of Time Blindness are late for everything – doctor's appointments, romantic rendezvous, even driving their spouse to the airport. When Time Blinders email their boss, "I'll have that report for you in an hour," the boss shouldn't stress out when six hours later, they receive another email with the subject line, "Almost done – just another couple of hours" It's not the employee's fault. They're time blind. They can no more tell the difference between one hour and five than they could distinguish between a tuba and a French horn.

Oh, sure. Some naysayers might argue that Time Blindness is just a fancy medical-sounding name for ordinary procrastination – an excuse for self-absorbed narcissists to be rudely late, only thinking about their own priorities and ignoring the impact their chronic tardiness has on everybody else. And to that I say, um, er... um, Hmm. I see where you're coming from, dear wife of mine.

It's important not to judge these people too harshly – unless they're your spouse, and this is the third time this week they kept you waiting twenty minutes while they tried to make up their mind about which earrings go with which outfit. In most cases, people struggling with this temporal distortion just lose track of time. They don't mean to be rude – except for my nephew Harold, who is never on time for anything. He's just a jerk.

Often the chronologically challenged become so engrossed in whatever it is they're focused on that time seems to stand still. Is it their fault that they accidentally got so distracted while binge-watching the final five episodes of Season Four of Succession that they totally forgot about your wedding? ... Oh, you say they were the Best Man? And they had the wedding rings? Oh my. Well, then I definitely wouldn't invite them to join you on your honeymoon.

Of course, my wife has zero sympathy for people who are perpetually late. She has her own suggestion for how to cure them: The next time you need to leave for the airport for a trip, and they're not ready: LEAVE WITHOUT THEM. Let them miss the flight.

I hear where she's coming from. But it's not that simple. It was an NFL playoff game. It went to Double Overtime. I couldn't just abandon my Seahawks. I'm sure in time, my wife will eventually understand.... Eventually.... Or not.
