FUN FACT:

At the end of the 5th century, Roman Pope Gelasius declared the date of February 14 "St. Valentine's Day" (after a patron saint). It wasn't until the Middle Ages, that the holiday became associated with love and romance, a tradition that started from the belief in France and England that birds started their mating season on February 14.

EXTINCTION REBELLION

What, me worry? Gee, just that human life on this hotbox of a planet is doomed? C'mon, let's be optimistic, look at the bright side, the cockroaches will live on, maybe evolve into big brained bugs, solve the global warming conundrum, build pyramids four feet high, worship their gods, set up governments, fight wars with the termites, continue the proud legacy we homo sapiens couldn't quite extend into the planetary future we screwed up. We had our shot, gave it a brief run, but decided we preferred Cadillacs and speedboats to survival. Party on, Bro!

We kind of lived for today. Be Here Now, right? The future, the next generation, the kids, the grandkids, well, we figured it would work out fine. Okay, we didn't worry much about that, a little bizzy making ourselves happy, the next generation be damned. Sure, a bit selfish, but hey, we were the Entitled Ones, the folks who couldn't lift a finger to help those who were poor or hungry or homeless, those sad people who apparently didn't invest in the stock market or go to college or get hired by the tech industry, what can you do if they won't help themselves??

We all had an equal chance, right? Not our fault you were born in Yemen. Grab those bootstraps and haul yerself up, climb the ladder to the top, pal. No whining! Can't have that whimpering. No, sir, cowboy up! So what if we left a few messes to clean up, you can't make a quiche without breaking some eggs, now can you? But hey, give us some props. After all, we invented the internet and social media and bitcoin mining. Plus, how about artificial intelligence? We built machines smarter than all of us put together and if you work it right, they'll solve all these world problems in no time flat. Pretty soon they'll be improving themselves. And figure out they don't really need us wreaking havoc on their planet, the one they will soon have Total Control of. I mean, how hard would it be to outsmart the people who believe in Qanon? One prosthetic tied behind their back and they'd still win.

Maybe it's for the best. Artificial Intelligence, the next evolutionary stage of life on Earth. Unless, of course, you're one of those bipedal Darwin deniers, then ... well, good luck! When the droids get done with you, you'll wish you really were a monkey's uncle.

APPARENTLY MY WIFE DOESN'T LIKE IT WHEN I KISS OTHER WOMEN

Sometimes I can disappoint my wife and, without intending to, hurt her feelings. For example, recently she was telling me something about something – not really sure what her point was. I was watching a football game at the time. Then she asked me a question about something or other. Apparently, “Sure, honey, that’s great” was not the response she was looking for when she asked me (I later learned) “When do you plan to start making dinner?” So, she got a little peeved, if you can believe this, just because I had not listened to a single word she’d been saying for the past five minutes. In my defense, it was a playoff game.

Don’t get me wrong. My wife is a wonderful person. But she asked that I not mention her by name in this story and therefore will be referred to as “Joanna.” I love, er, Joanna dearly. But sometimes, it seems I can’t quite measure up to her lofty expectations of her husband. Now and then she’ll roll her eyes in annoyance over the most trivial infractions. Like the time I left the toilet seat up after I used it. Or the time I ate the last slice of German Chocolate cake without consulting her first. Or the time I kissed another woman.

Perhaps that last example warrants additional clarification. I couldn’t very well deny that I had kissed another woman because, technically, I did it right in front of Joanna. She saw the whole thing. I must have misread the other woman’s buying signals because when I kissed her, like Joanna, she was none too pleased about it. This woman, who I’ll call “Sarah,” was, to my surprise, so put off by my sudden romantic overture that she slapped me across the face.

In retrospect, I can see how my actions might have been slightly hurtful to Joanna. Perhaps I should have asked her for permission before I took Sarah in my arms, caressed her hair, and kissed her. I probably did not make things any better when later that same evening, I approached Sarah again and once again planted a passionate kiss on her lips. My wife caught me in the act this second time as well. (She sure can be a busybody.) My encore kissing performance just made matters worse. I now appreciate how, from Joanna’s perspective, I probably mishandled this affair, because, to be honest, I didn’t give a second’s thought about how my actions would impact my life partner.

View from the Bleachers

I should add that on my second romantic overture, as our mouths came together, Sarah didn't slap me. Quite the contrary. She acted as if she really liked it – a lot. She put her arms around me and swooned. It was magical – except for the small part about Joanna being a witness to this scene. I was concerned that she might not speak to me for the rest of the evening – or make me dinner.

I have to say, Joanna was surprisingly forgiving. Because after having witnessed me kiss Sarah not once but twice, on the way home, she barely brought it up. What a great gal! But to be honest, I'm not really sure why any of this should have bothered her in the first place. For starters, Joanna and I weren't even married at the time. We were just dating. I had never said I wouldn't see other people.

Oh, and I'm not sure if this next part is important, but the woman I kissed was a fellow actor in a community theater production of Guys And Dolls we were in, in Miami, FL, the city where Joanna and I first met. We were on stage in front of 400 people just performing our lines, which included two kissing scenes.

So, if you ask me, I really think my wife should have taken up her concerns with the director, not me. I was just following the script.

[Author's Postscript: The story above is 100% true. In the play, my character, a rogue, suave gambler named Sky Masterson, falls in love with a character exactly his opposite: an upright, devoutly religious Salvation Army worker named, you guessed it, SARAH Brown.]

DEBBIE KLUGE

It seems as far back as I can remember I have always turned to my creative side as a place of solitude. I loved taking a blank piece of paper and making it come alive with color. The more detail, the better. As I grew older and wondered what career path I should choose, I considered my love for art and architecture and an instinctual knack with numbers. The two combined meant I could only be an architect. But life always has a way of taking you down different paths. I married out of college and had a beautiful daughter. The Architectural path gave way to Business Administration, and I spent the next thirty-three years in corporate America. There was always a sense of restlessness while working. It wasn't until 2010 that some friends invited me to join a group of oil painters that met one night a week. I joined, and from that moment was hooked. It was the key to my calm. I didn't realize how much I had missed exercising the creative side of my person. In April 2013 I relocated to Washington State and the paint brushes and my creative person were again packed away. Just before retiring in 2019, my Mom and I were talking about painting. She would often ask me when I would start painting again. I decided to give it a go, this time with all my heart and soul. For the next year, I would watch and listen to hours of tutorials. I read everything 'art' that I could get my hands on and practiced what I was learning. It was as if a fire was lit, and I had an insatiable thirst for more. I am a self-taught artist and I am proud of what I have accomplished in the past year. I have learned so much and know that I have so much more to learn. I think I'm going to enjoy this path in my life's journey.

The Loft at Camano Commons has chosen me to be the feature artist from January 19th – February 18th! I hope everyone can stop in and take a look. There are lots of great gifts for Valentines Day!! Here's a link to my podcast interview with Brandon Ericson, the owner of Camano Commons, and a picture of the display of my art currently showing!

LITTLE FREE FARM STAND LIBRARY

"We (Stevens Homestead) opened our library in the Spring of 2020... things were shutting down here in Washington because of COVID... libraries were closed, and people were looking for books and puzzles and things to do! Our homestead is located along a well traveled, main road – not too busy, though. Our farm stand has been a great little stop with a safe pull out and it is the perfect spot for a library!!

It was a little ramshackle at first. I was trying to find something that would be weather (rain and wind, especially, but also sun) proof. I found a used metal closet on Offer Up and I thought we could seal up any potential leak spots with caulk and paint it red – my favorite color, but also very visible from the road.

It wasn't ideal... my husband may have made fun of me when he went to pick it up... he may have told me that it wouldn't work... he may have lovingly discouraged my ingenuity. He may have given me tips for spray painting that I may or may not have followed. Nonetheless... the Little Free Farm Stand Library was born!

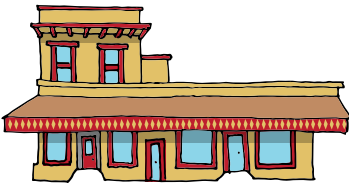

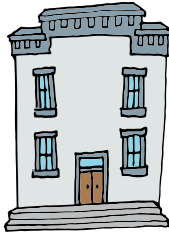

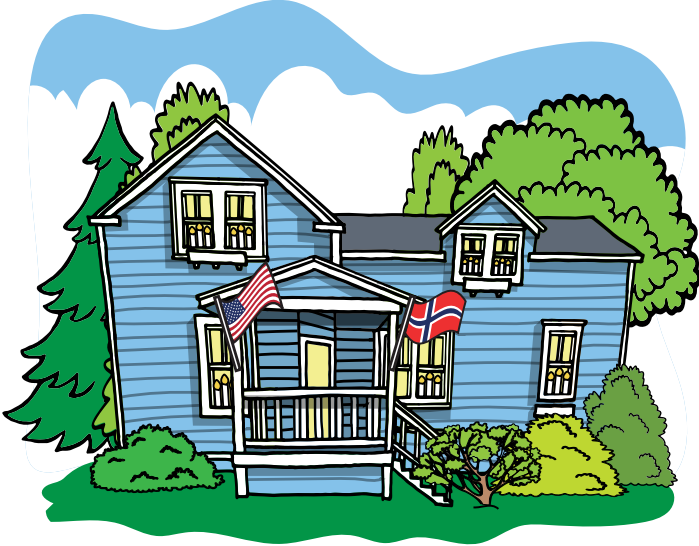

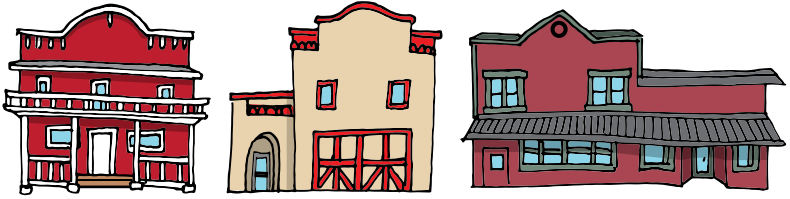

The "bookshelf" inside was something that Carson built for me for the Farm Stand – I was (and still am) hoping to use it for breads and produce, but I wasn't ready for that yet, but I did need a book shelf, so... TA DA!

We started with books that we had cleared off of our shelves, and quickly people added to the collection – puzzles, games, books. It was growing every day.

FUN FACT:

The oldest record of a valentine being sent, according to History.com, was a poem written by a French duke named Charles to his wife in 1415. Charles penned this sweet note to his lover while he was imprisoned in the Tower of London at just 21 years old. One of the lines in the poem? "I am already sick of love, My very gentle Valentine."

CALL FOR ART - DECORATIVE/SEASONAL BANNERS

Over the last 10 years, the city has adopted several economic development strategies to promote the vitality of Stanwood's Main Street business districts and neighborhoods. A substantial amount of community volunteer effort went into crafting a vision for Stanwood's future. Using guidance from this work, the City Council adopted the City Beautification Action Plan via Resolution 2020-14 on December 10, 2020. One element of the City Beautification Action Plan is Wayfinding Signage which includes the design and installation of decorative/ seasonal banners in the downtown and uptown districts. The city has partnered with the Stanwood Camano Arts Advocacy Commission to implement this Call for Art. The goal of the seasonal banners is to increase the visibility and beauty of the community to residents and local travelers by installing decorative and seasonal banners strategically placed along major thoroughfares such as SR 532, 72nd Avenue, 88th Avenue, 92nd Avenue, 102nd Avenue, and 271st Street. Banners are intended to add color and excitement to the City's commercial areas. more info can be found at <https://stanwoodwa.org/CivicAlerts.aspx?AID=185>

WREATHS ACROSS AMERICA

Stanwood's American Legion Partners with Wreaths Across America
Stanwood American Legion Post #92 has become a partner with the national program of Wreaths Across America and invites area residents to participate in this worthwhile effort. The program currently lays wreaths on veterans' graves at 2500 locations across the United States. Locally, 476 graves of veterans have been identified in Anderson Cemetery and the Legion is seeking citizens to assist in laying the wreaths on December 17, 2022 or to sponsor a wreath by donating $15 to the Legion, five dollars of which will go to support Operation Facelift, to make critical repairs to the Post building at 26921 88th Ave. NW in Stanwood. Stanwood's effort will initiate with a President's Day celebration on February 21, 2022 at the Legion's hall from noon until 2 p.m. Dr. Richard Hanks will talk on "The Life and Legacy of Abraham Lincoln." Admission is free but all donations will go to repairing Post #92. The credo of Wreaths Across America is Remember, Honor and Teach: remember fallen veterans; honor those who served; and teach your children the value of preserving freedom. These wreaths pay homage to the sacrifice of our men and women in uniform. Wreath making goes back a thousand years before Christ as a way of signifying the strength of life through the harsh winter. Today, the circle of the wreath represents immortality--for their service and our duty to remember. We hope you and your family will be a part of this program. # Local Stories and Poetry

BLACK HISTORY

Antislavery northerners, many of them free Black people, had begun helping enslaved people escape from southern plantations to the North via a loose network of safe houses as early as the 1780s called the Underground Railroad.

HOW TIMELY!

I found a few minutes of spare time. Many have shared their thoughts of time, across time, and while the subject has stood the test of time, I offer these to the collection.

How Timely!

The James Webb Telescope nears its date in space as I ponder. Its task is to look into the depths of time. Some live their lives looking back to times past while others seek the future of it. What will the deepness reveal? What of the rest of us who seek meaning in our allotted dose?

There are 1440 generally accepted minutes to our daily spin in space. Others have done the math of how much is devoted to this and that throughout a day and night so I won't take up yours repeating the schedule.

And yet, with time, we are known for our magical abilities to squeeze; to share; to cheat; to make; to run out of; to lose track of; to appoint bits of the finite to the specific in the course of a day, and sometimes, just in time.

Our 1440 are the very same as those given to the great thinkers of the past. Did they ever waste any? Could they have thought for a minute that their new-found understanding of the solar system would lead to the Webb Telescope looking back at them from the future?

New products to save time are invented all the time. How does one save time? My old dishwasher's full cycle takes 38 minutes. New units take much longer. (I've spent some time researching a new machine.) I know I can clean up a full sink of dirty dishes in about 20 minutes. What is the best use of time?

We've been told "Time is what you make of it." But can you make time? Soon, PST will magically switch to DST when we "Spring Forward" in a few weeks. Where will that hour go? Does it hang out somewhere to jump back into the cycle when it is time to "Fall Back"? What if the legislation the majority voted for to stay in DST happens? Where will that lost hour end up? Somewhere in the depths? Will the future find it? These thoughts take up way too much time for this space.

If you've made it this far, Thank You for your time!
It's all we have to give, right?
Time's up. Gotta run.

AURIGA

The constellation Auriga, the charioteer, sits overhead in mid winter skies and is home to many binocular targets. To find it look for the star Capella, one of the brightest stars in the sky located directly overhead in early evening. Once you spot that landmark the constellation shape will be easy to recognize.

Auriga contains 3 open star clusters: Messier 36, 37, and 38 all of which are popular targets for amateur astronomers. The term "open cluster" seems a bit like an oxymoron, but are so named to differentiate them from globular star clusters which are tightly packed balls of stars. Open clusters are relatively young stars born from a common parent cloud and can be sparse or denser groups with a wide variety of sizes and shapes. Messier 37 is the most charismatic of this trio and is easily spotted with binoculars.

Auriga is also home to many other remarkable targets including five stars with confirmed planetary systems and fields of glowing hydrogen clouds, but none as easy to find as these three clusters.

Take some time and wander with the charioteer and you may find other star clusters within this rich Milky Way star field.
