FINDING THE TRUTH IN FICTION - WHAT MAKES A STORY GREAT?

6pm in the Camano Island Library Meeting Room. A great story needs several components, among them, a setting that draws the reader into the story, characters that are realistic and interesting, and a plot that keeps the reader involved and moves the story toward the conclusion. Join local authors MaryAnn Schradi, Darlene Dubay, and Naomi Wark as they share their insights on what makes a great story and how to get the most from what you read. Each author will speak about one aspect of writing that is required to create a great story. ## APPLE STAMPS

We've used halved apples to make a simple pumpkin-shaped stamp and a little herb leaf to make a stalk – perfect for homemade invitations to your Halloween or Bonfire Night party. Takes 15 mins.

You will need newspaper, apple, orange paint, plain white cards, plain white sticker label, black marker pen, scissors, small herb leaf, like sage or bay, glue, contrasting card

What to do: Lay down newspaper to protect the work surface. Slice an apple through the middle and dip in some orange paint. Ensure it is coated well – you may want to use a paintbrush to coat the apple. Print pumpkin shapes onto the cards and leave to dry. Draw eyes and mouths onto your white sticker label with a marker pen and cut out. Once the pumpkin prints are dry, peel the sticker backing off the eyes and mouths and stick them onto your pumpkins. Glue a leaf to the top of each pumpkin and cut a small triangle from contrasting card to stick to the corner of the invitation. Add a little message in pen at the bottom.

FLYING BIRD SILHOUETTES

Help keep birds safe by making some bird silhouettes for your windows!

WHAT YOU'LL NEED:

- Colored construction or copy paper
- Pen or pencil
- Scissors and tape
- Other art supplies like crayons or markers
- Copy of the bird silhouette PDF

HOW TO DO IT:

1. Did you know that even though birds generally have good vision they often have trouble seeing glass? If a bird flies into a glass window they can become seriously injured. You can help keep birds safe by attaching objects to windows, like a bird silhouette made out of paper!
2. To make a bird silhouette, print out a copy of the bird silhouette PDF. (If you don't want to print it out, you can refer to it for guidance.)
3. Fold a piece of colored construction or copy paper in half lengthwise. You can trace the bird silhouette or draw it by hand on the paper, making sure that the bottom of the silhouette lines up with the folded side of the paper.
4. Cut out and unfold! You now have a bird shape.
5. Get creative and decorate the silhouette. You can also experiment with different patterns or make your bird look like a species you'd find in your backyard!
6. There are a number of other ways you can help birds! Consider putting up a birdfeeder in your backyard (remember to only put birdseed in your feeder!) or put plants in your garden that attract wildlife.

WORKAPHOBIA

I hear folks say all the time how the country no longer makes anything, everything's outsourced, manufactured in China, then imported. Course, they're running up to Wal-Mart for all this cheap junk, save them a few bucks, half of it going back into gasoline on their SUV. Here on the self-sufficient South End, we still make stuff. Okay, mostly because we couldn't afford to buy that stuff new. But partly because there's still a vestige of pioneer pride. You make something yourself, you maybe understand how much work goes into it, you maybe understand the real worth of it, you maybe become a part of it and it becomes a part of you.

We got about 2 million artists down here who paint and sculpt and carve and you name it. They make stuff. That's what art is. Creation. If they could sell it, they'd be 'job creators'. Always that damn 'if'. I admit, half of artistic inspiration is job avoidance, or, in my case, about 100% is. Workaphobia, almost a crippling malady. I've had friends, who fancy themselves psychotherapists, suggest that if I spent half as much time employed as I do avoiding work, I'd be rich. Course I explain that then I'd have to do taxes or hire an accountant, set up wills, keep records. I'm just a little too busy for that kind of complexity.

The thing is, see, if you do your own car repair, fix your own leaky pipes, dig your own garden, catch your own food, prune your own fruit trees, cook your dinners, play your own musical instrument, sing your own songs ---- you don't have time to work some silly crappy job. No way. You'd fall behind, the chores would gang up, the shack would rot, the whole she-bang would come undone, entropy would rule, chaos would ensue. Down here, you do not have the luxury of a job! What you got, as consolation, is making your own life yours. Not buying it on credit, piece by piece, from a factory filled with people paid next to nothing in a country that makes stuff for all of us who don't have time to do it ourselves.

Paintings, Jewelry & Etched Art. "When we retired to Camano Island, I was inspired by the many wonderful artists here. The Pacific Northwest is so beautiful and the sunsets are incredible! For many years I have attended studio groups and workshops. My favorite medium is oil paint, because of the vibrant colors and textures that can be achieved. I also use acrylics and enjoy creating etched art. I have been involved in artistic endeavors most of my life, including creating coloring books for the National Wildlife Service, painted book covers and wine bottle labels, jewelry making, glass painting, fabric painting, cross stitch, and crochet, among others. Color has always been a big part of my work. Places I would like to visit are frequent subjects of my paintings. Animals also hold a large place in my heart. I love their character and expressions. This world has a tremendous amount of beauty, offering so much inspiration. So many ideas and so little time!" Her art will be displayed and for sale the entire month of October at Beach 1 Gallery, 1243 Beach Drive, Camano Island.

STANWOOD'S PROGRAM TO HONOR AND REMEMBER ITS VETERANS

Stanwood is one of the smallest communities in the state of Washington to participate in the national program of Wreaths Across America whose credo is Remember, Honor and Teach: remember fallen heroes, honor those who served and teach your children the value of preserving that freedom. For Stanwood's American Legion, the well-worn phrase—we will never forget—is more than a platitude but a promise to act upon that feeling. Those sentiments of respect will again be exhibited on December 17, 2022 when wreaths are placed on over 500 graves of veterans resting in Stanwood's Anderson Cemetery, located at 7630 Pioneer Highway. Please sponsor a wreath by sending $15 to the American Legion Post #92, P.O. Box 323, Stanwood, WA 98292. Five dollars of each sponsorship will go to support Operation Facelift, to make critical repairs to the Post building at 26921 88th Ave. NW in Stanwood. The program has sponsored 291 wreaths to date and all money must be collected by November 28, 2022. These wreaths pay homage to the sacrifice of our men and women in uniform. Wreath making and their meaning goes back a thousand years before Christ as a way of signifying the strength of life through the harsh winter. Today, the wreath's circle represents immortality—for their service and our duty to remember. We hope you and your family will be a part of this program. Sponsor a wreath online by going to the following web-site: <https://wreathscrossamerica.org/pages/171150/Overview/?relatedId=171149>, Or, for more information contact Mischa Plesha at post-92adjutant@gmail.com or phone 408-595-7634.

ALL FISHING CLOSES FOR STILLAGUAMISH RIVER AND TRIBUTARIES OCTOBER 1-NOVEMBER 15, 2022

With encounters of threatened Chinook salmon trending above expectations, the Stillaguamish River and tributaries will close to all fishing beginning Saturday, Oct. 1, fishery managers with the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) announced today. "The continued effort towards conservation and recovery of Stillaguamish Chinook is one of our highest priorities," said Edward Eleazer, WDFW Fish Program manager for the North Puget Sound region. "We want to ensure we're meeting our long-term conservation objectives for wild Chinook. This closure is necessary to ensure all our fisheries are staying within those objectives." Preliminary monitoring data indicate that the Stillaguamish River sport fisheries are close to their allowable Chinook encounter limit and are in danger of exceeding the allowable total if fishing continues. The Stillaguamish River closes to all fishing from Oct. 1 through Nov. 15, including sections from Marine Drive (south of Stanwood) to the forks; the North Fork from the mouth to North Fork Falls; and the South Fork from the mouth to Granite Falls Fishway. Tributaries closed include Boulder River from the mouth to Boulder Falls; Canyon Creek from the mouth to forks; Pilchuck Creek from the mouth to Pilchuck Falls; and Squire Creek, a tributary of the North Fork Stillaguamish River. WDFW expects the majority of Chinook to no longer be present in the system by Nov. 15, and sport fisheries will resume under the rules listed in the 2022-23 Washington Sport Fishing Rules pamphlet. Anglers should continue to check emergency regulations for new and changing seasons or sign up for email notifications at <https://wdfw.wa.gov/about/lists>. The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife works to preserve, protect, and perpetuate fish, wildlife and ecosystems while providing sustainable fish and wildlife recreational and commercial opportunities.

BEING A PEOPLE PLEASER CAN GET YOU INTO TROUBLE

There is something seriously wrong with me. No, I'm not talking about my moderate OCD. Or my phobia of snakes. No, I have an even deeper personality flaw: I'm a chronic people pleaser. Throughout my life, I've been hard-wired to want to please people and have sometimes gone to ridiculous lengths not to disappoint them. A few cases in point (all of these are true):

In college, I always gave my roommate the bed closest to the window. In grad school, I offered my apartment mate the nicer bedroom. Not because I was a great guy, but because I wanted them to like me.

Once when I was a sales manager my team had a record-breaking quarter. I took them out to celebrate. The reps only wanted one thing from me at the party: to watch me smoke a fat eight-inch cigar they'd bought just for the occasion. I don't smoke. I'd never smoked anything stronger than a candy cigarette before that moment. But they all were cheering me on, and well, I didn't want to disappoint. So, I puffed, gasped and choked my way through the entire cigar. It was torture. And they loved that I was a good sport. Then I excused myself to the bathroom so I could throw up.

A few years later, I was boarding a commercial jetliner on a business trip with co-workers. One of them urged me to walk into the cockpit, hold out my boarding pass and tell the pilot with a straight face, "I believe you're in my seat." So, I did exactly as he asked. Thankfully, I was not arrested. But that may explain why I'm now on the terrorist watch list.

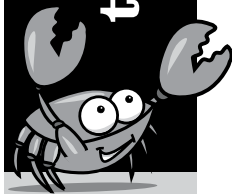

I'm telling you, I have a problem. Too often I won't be able to say NO if I think it will disappoint the other person. And sometimes this personality defect has gotten me into deeply unsettling situations. Like the time a friend and his wife joined my wife and me for a lovely summer evening in Victoria, BC. There I was minding my own business, sitting in an outdoor crowd of roughly 500 to watch a magician.

And then it happened. The street performer asked for a volunteer. My soon-to-be former friend grabbed my hand, thrust it into the air and shouted out, "Tim will do it!" I frantically tried to extract my limb from his iron grip, but it was too late. The magician had spotted his prey. "Tim, thank you for agreeing to assist", he shouted with a menacing grin. Then he turned to the throng and urged them to applaud me for bravely stepping forward for his dangerous grand finale. I have a hard enough time saying no to one person, so you can imagine how quickly I wilted when a boisterous horde of 500 started chanting "TIM, TIM, TIM".

So, I sheepishly walked up and stood beside the magician. He then announced that to do this trick, it was advisable that I take off my sneakers – for my safety. Of course, I complied, because, well, that's what people pleasers do.

He continued to describe what would ensue and then stopped to add, "Actually, this trick works best if you remove your shirt." Okay, this is getting a little personal, I thought. There they were, all 1,000 (by now the crowd was starting to multiply), building into a frenzy, goaded on by the magician who led them in a chant of "TAKE IT OFF! TAKE IT OFF!" I was powerless to resist the will of the mob. So, you guessed it – I took off my shirt.

View from the Bleachers

Finally, the magician began his amazing show-stopper finale. There was just one problem. "I can't complete this unless you take off your pants." If you think for one minute this compulsive people pleaser would be so spineless as to literally strip down to his underwear, well.... then you'd be right.

I was mortified. Terrified. Humiliated. For a moment, as I peeled off my last shed of dignity, I paused to reflect: "Did I remember to wear underwear today?" I felt like Adam in the Garden of Eden, covered by nothing but a fruit of the loom. All because of my morbid need to please.

The street performer then announced to make the trick work flawlessly, there was one last step required of me. You guessed it. "Tim, I need to you please take off your underwear!"

And that's where I am going to end this 100% true story. Did I once more crumble under the pressure? Did I serve 30 days for indecent exposure? Did I install a stripper pole in my living room? Is there a YouTube video? I'm not telling. Let's just say I'm not welcome in Victoria anymore.
