FRIDAY, DECEMBER 12
TRAVEL TALK

10:00-12:00 at Camano Center, 606 Arrowhead Road, Camano Island. Do you enjoy sharing your travel experiences or hearing from others of their travel adventures? This month Michele Rushworth will present on her travels to India. In her words: My trip to India in the spring of 2019 was nothing short of incredible. I felt like I had traveled to another planet, in some ways, and gone back a thousand years in time. Traditions, clothing, lifestyles, food and beliefs that were nothing like what I experience here, which is exactly why I went there. Camano Center members free; non-members $5.

Take the Challenge

WE CHALLENGE YOU

This is a new feature page where we challenge the community (and ourselves) to strengthen our community bonds by participating or donating or volunteering or contributing to a local cause. Each edition will be a new challenge with a new benefactor.

Join us in making our Community a better place and making us all better people.

THE CRAB CRACKER CHALLENGE...

The Caring Place has kicked off their round up fundraiser at Haggen in Stanwood. The Caring Place offers new & very gently used clothing and other essential items, to people in need, free. The Caring Place is a Free Clothing ministry that has blessed the lives of hundreds of area families over the past 15 years. Since reopening after a COVID hiatus, the number of people served continues to increase. Even so, God somehow ensures that there is enough and utilizes that small little cottage on the western edge of the Our Saviour's parking lot to its absolute max. Donations of lightly used or new clothing items are received on Monday and Wednesday afternoons, 1-4PM. Clients are served by this entirely volunteer-run ministry on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 1-4PM. Questions or information requests...360-913-1351.

OUR CHALLENGE TO YOU: Drop by Haggen one of those days and donate. They have scanner cards, so donations may be made at the registers. They cannot take money at their table outside. Note: If each person in the Stanwood and Camano area donated just one dollar, the funds would total more than $26,000.

GLITTERING POPPSICLE STICK CHRISTMAS TREES

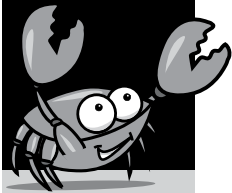

Here's what you'll need: Colored popsicle sticks; Foam sticker stars; Sticker rhinestones; Twine; Glue gun; Utility knife

I bought the rhinestones and the popsicle sticks from the dollar store. I splurged a little on the sparkly foam sticker stars and bought them at the craft store. But if you're feeling frugal you can just cut stars out of yellow sparkly paper

You're going to want 5 different sizes of popsicle stick pieces cut to 1", 1.5", 2", 2.5", and 3" lengths.

To cut the popsicle sticks, use a utility knife (I used my craft knife. I can't find the exact one on Amazon, but it's similar to these ones) and score the popsicle sticks on both the front and back. I say "score" but really I mean give it a good cut into the wood as hard as you can a couple times. You probably won't make it all the way through, but that's okay. You have to make sure you score it on both sides of the popsicle stick or it won't snap evenly. Then after you've done that, it just breaks apart really easily when you bend it. I was surprised how clean of a break it was. No jagged edges or anything. Using a scrap piece of popsicle stick, maybe about 1/2" long, add a generous glob of hot glue and sandwich a small piece of twine between the purple popsicle stick "trunk" and the small scrap. You can see the scrap piece better in the next photo. Using a scrap piece of popsicle stick, maybe about 1/2" long, add a generous glob of hot glue and sandwich a small piece of twine between the purple popsicle stick "trunk" and the small scrap. You can see the scrap piece better in the next photo. Now the moment you've been waiting for. Go crazy with those glittery sticker rhinestones and decorate your popsicle stick Christmas tree! I used sparkly foam sticker stars for the stars on the trees, but since the star was bigger than the top of the tree I decided to glue it to the top rather than peeling off the sticker backing. I didn't want to have a big area of stickiness that wasn't attached to anything.

KATIE TRENT

A glass artist who grew up in Bellingham, Katie left to attend college after high school and landed in Minnesota. She is thrilled to be back in the PNW after 40+ years in the Midwest. Katie has been playing around with glass for more than 25 years. What started as a hobby ignited by a community education class turned into an on-going artistic exploration of this colorful medium. Katie shares that "Glass is such an interesting art form and I love all the aspects I have explored. I really enjoy making custom stained-glass windows for people and have created dozens of commissioned pieces." Katie also uses her scrap glass to create mosaics. The process is tedious, but she gains great satisfaction from rendering an image with little bits of glass and tile. Several years ago, Katie bought a kiln and started dabbling with fused glass – making bowls, plates, platters and 3-D sculptures. She has taken classes and searched for videos on line to learn new ideas and has found that every new technique presents another interesting challenge. Shortly after moving to Mount Vernon in 2024, Katie started looking for arts groups to help her meet other artists and make friends in the area. In Minnesota, she was part of an arts consortium and was active with art shows, teaching and serving on their board. She discovered the Camano Arts Association and has enjoyed being involved with that group as a volunteer and board member. This fall, she decided to take on the role of tour director for the 2026 Camano Island Studio Tour. This endeavor helped fill the void created when she retired from working as a physical therapist at Stanwood Camano Physical Therapy. Katie teaches classes through The Jansen Art Center in Lynden and at MoonWater Arts in Anacortes. Class topics include beginning stained glass, mosaics, beginning fused glass, heart pendants, Christmas ornaments and paint-pour projects with glass enamel. Katie has a studio in her home near Big Lake and looks forward to teaching more classes there. www.trentartglass.com

MABANA FLAMES

Over 50 years ago a spark was ignited on Camano Island. That spark was the idea that women in our island community could support Camano Island Fire & Rescue and improve emergency services. After all, when our Fire Department flourishes, we are all better protected. It's that simple. That idea led to the establishment of the Flames (Women's?) Fire Auxiliary and even after all those years have passed, the Flames are still going strong. A lot has changed on Camano since the department had only volunteer fire fighters, and the Flames purchased and donated the land where the Mabana Fire Station still is operational. The Flames purchased the first "jaws of life" on Camano. It is a history to be proud of. Our modern Fire Department and well-trained first responders are the professionals you rely on in any emergency. But that doesn't mean there still isn't much to do. The Flames support the Camano Island Fire in ways too numerous to list here. They are also keenly aware that there is a human side to every disaster and sometimes people in our community need a little help. The Flames meet the first Thursdays of the month (no meeting in Jan, July, or Aug) beginning at 10:00 am. The business meeting kicks things off, where committees report the status of on-going projects, new projects are presented for consideration, and lively discussions are held. The Fire Department Chief attends our meetings to give the Flames the most up-to-date information on a dynamic department. Then, lunch is ready! Each member volunteers to hostess a lunch with 3 other volunteers. The social/lunch time is a highlight! Laughter is shared, recipes are exchanged, new friends are made, and long-standing friendships are deepened. Please join us at a Flames meeting. You'll be warmly welcomed. A CHRISTMAS CAROL

Even down here at the tail end of civilization, us South Enders have been hearing talk lately about Income Inequality. Cap'n Billy down at the Marina claims it's nothing less, this talk, than an assault on the Rich. "The Losers," he declares, knocking the ash from his briar on the pier pilings, "they want to pull the successful down to their level. Take their money and give it to the freeloaders on welfare." He beats his pipe the way he'd like to beat some sense into Jimmy the Geek who made the mistake of arguing with Billy.

"All I'm saying, Bill, is these folks didn't get all the money cause they worked 1000 times harder --- they got tax breaks. I work for Boeing but Boeing got billions to stay in the state. I call that corporate welfare. Workers are getting their wages cut while the stockholders and the executives, hell Bill, they're getting fat."

Cap'n Billy is getting Hot. "I worked hard for my pay, dammit. I don't need you pencil pushers telling me I ought to give part of it back so some lazy do-nothing can sit home and watch TV all day when the government gives him his Handout. What's your gripe, anyway, Jim, you're doing okay? You one of those bleeding heart socialists?"

And so it went. Jim and I walked the gangplank up to the Pilot House for a cold one, admittedly a little early, but sometimes you just got to cool off. Loretta was bartending, took our order and when she parked two pints in front of us, asked if we'd care to give to the Food Bank where she volunteers two days a week. "I'll give two beers," I said, quite the comic, but Jim took out his wallet all serious like and fished out a twenty.

"Thanks for doing this, Loretta," he said. So of course I felt like the Grinch. I gave her a ten. "Expensive beers," I joked. Jimmy shook his head. "We're lucky dogs," he said, taking a long slow sip. The bar's Christmas lights twinkled off his glasses.

We clinked pints. "Here's to the winners," I toasted, ever the jokester. Jimmy grinned, just as Cap'n Billy pushed through the door.

"Loretta," Jimmy cried, "get the Cap'n a beer! It's on us." Bill waved him off, but Loretta poured him one anyway. "Merry Christmas, Bill," Jimmy said. "Merry Christmas, boys," Bill said back. "Merry Christmas one and all!" Loretta warbled. We all four sat for awhile, listening to the corny Jingle Bells Loretta had on the radio over the bar. Maybe it wasn't the ghost of Christmas Future, but down here on the South End, it would have to do.

Community Information

The tradition of hanging stockings comes from a Dutch legend. A poor man had three daughters for whom he could not afford to provide a dowry. St. Nicholas dropped a bag of gold down his chimney and gold coins fell out and into the stockings drying by the fireplace. The daughters now had dowries and could be married, avoiding a life on the streets.

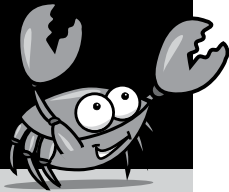

CHRONIC PAIN? WHAT ARE YOUR OPTIONS?

Pain is a warning system in the body. There are two types of pain: acute pain and chronic pain. We need acute pain to survive. If we step on a nail or burn our skin, we need to know that something is wrong so we can seek proper medical attention. When this happens, a signal is sent up the spine through the nervous system and into the brain where it is then evaluated by different parts of the brain. These different parts of the brain include the motor cortex (what you are doing in that moment) and the sensory cortex (what part of the body the signal is coming from). "Chronic pain" is the result of our brain interpreting signals through our nervous system commonly long after the actual tissue damage has healed. Triggers of these signals can include one or all of the following: functional systems (bladder, bowel, or uterus/prostate), structural systems (muscles and ligaments in spasm, nerves firing, tingling, burning, itching of surface tissues), all of which add up in our memories, emotions, and thoughts. When the trigger is a memory, emotion, or thought (conscious or unconscious), it lights up the neuro-matrix connected to our sensory cortex. This phenomenon is similar to "phantom limb syndrome" where the individual experiences pain in a part of the body that is no longer there. Focused training redirecting the mind can help our brains avoid these particular triggers and signals as much as possible. Mindfulness-based stress reduction and diaphragmatic breathing techniques are proven tools to help guide us through this process. Our Body's "Fight or Flight" Response. Fear triggers our brain to produce chemicals that make it more difficult for us to relax. In fact, mere emotions and thoughts (both conscious and unconscious) can trigger this chemical reaction placing us in the "fight or flight" response. When the body goes into this mode, it is an evolutionary protective response, as if there was a dangerous lion in the room. This "fight or flight" response causes muscle spasm (to give you strength to fight or run away), increased heart rate, dilated pupils, shallow breathing, and other autonomic nervous system responses, such as dry mouth, slower immune response, and inhibited digestion. The brain then seeks more feedback from the body to know more about what's happening, increasing the sensitivity in the nervous system. Our brain "turns the volume up" on our nervous system. Regretfully, this means that our physical sensations increase and consequently we feel more pain. In other words, when it comes to pain, the more we fear it, the more we feel it. Emotions & Pain Our emotions affect how we feel and interpret physical sensations. Our beliefs, emotions, and thoughts all affect how we feel pain. Research is establishing that depression, anxiety, and guilt can all make it more difficult for us to cope with pain. Fear and worry can especially increase the amount of pain we feel. When we are afraid, our muscles tense, the heart begins to race, and we may begin to tell ourselves things like, "I can't relax, this really hurts, I can't handle this." Then, the next thing you know, we can't relax and every sensation actually does become more painful. A positive, less fearful emotional state, like being confident and relaxed, can help coping with pain easier. Z's GENTLE Seated Yoga classes for Chronic Pain begin in Sept. Space limited. EMOTIONS, TECHNIQUES & NARRATIVES STANDOUT IN WINNERS OF NWWWS 85TH ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL OPEN EXHIBITION

Every other year, Northwest West Watercolor Society (NWWWS) has an in-gallery show. This year, the 85th Annual International Open Exhibition is hosted by Yuan Ru Art Center, 12737 Bel-Red Road, #100, Bellevue, Washington 98005, now to December 1, 2025. Juror Frank Eber has chosen 80 outstanding watermedia paintings from around the world to adorn Yuan Ru's walls. Eber feels that a good reason for entering a show is for artists to share genuine feelings. As he commented on the 15 awards he presented at the Artist's Reception on November 8th, 2025, the winners' emotions came through in their technical expertise in watermedia. "A painting also tells a story or narrative," he said that day. When you walk into Yuan Ru Art Center, the first painting you see is "Winter" by Z L Feng. One art goer mentioned getting a chill. That emotion also helped Eber to award First Place of $2,000.00 cash to Feng saying, "The technical parts and design are all there. This is someone who is worthy of being called a master painter." Second Place of $1,300.00 cash went to Kate Aubrey for "First Fiddle." Eber commented, "You can feel his enigmatic look staring right at you." "This amazing painting has great composition," Eber said of (Camano Islander) Jack Dorsey's "Clouds Rolling In" as he presented Third Place of $800.00. Great paintings tell stories and evoke emotions through the artist's skills. "I encourage everyone to see the 85th Exhibition on the walls of Yuan Ru Art Center. It is well worth it." For those who are outside the Seattle area, you can still see the show at www.nwwws.org.

PARENT ALLIED COLLECTIVE

New Support Group for Families of Neurodivergent Preschoolers. We understand there is a real need for a support group for families of neurodivergent preschoolers / early elementary aged children in our community, and we're excited to begin shaping a space that supports and uplifts families. We are currently in the early stages of forming the group and are gauging interest to determine what would be most helpful. Our hope is to create a warm, welcoming environment where caregivers can connect, share experiences, and access meaningful resources. We anticipate meeting once a month in the evenings at Stanwood Cooperative Preschool, with final plans guided by the needs of participating families. Please note: This will be an adults-only group. We want to ensure caregivers have a calm, focused space to talk openly and receive support, so children will not be able to attend. We say this with care, knowing that childcare can be a barrier, and we will share local childcare resources if helpful. What we envision offering: A supportive community of caregivers navigating similar experiences; Resource sharing (sensory supports, communication tools, local services, books, therapists, activities, etc.); Occasional guest speakers or themed discussions; Follow-up materials or resource lists after meetings. To help us plan, we'd love to know a bit more about your needs and preferences. Please follow the link to fill out a short google form so we can better focus the needs of the group. We truly appreciate your input and are looking forward to building this much-needed community resource together. Please feel free to share this opportunity with other families who may benefit. <https://forms.gle/pZ0J1KntyS2g2qi8>.

MARK YOUR CALENDARS: NO DISCOVER PASS REQUIRED ON THESE 2026 DAYS

Washington public land agencies have designated the 12 days of 2026 when no Discover Pass is required to park at Washington state parks, or on land managed by the Washington State Department of Natural Resources and the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife. The 2026 free days are: Jan. 1 – New Year's Day and First Day Hikes; Jan. 19 – Martin Luther King Jr. Day; March 9 – Billy Frank Jr.'s Birthday; March 19 – State Parks 113th Birthday; April 22 – Earth Day; June 6-7 – Free Fishing Weekend; June 19 – Juneteenth; Aug. 9 – Smokey Bear's Birthday; Sept. 26 – National Public Lands Day; Oct. 10 – World Mental Health Day; Nov. 11 – Veterans Day. Each date commemorates a special day of the year, starting with New Year's Day on Jan. 1, when more than 40 state parks will host annual First Day Hikes. Try before you buy a full year of adventure. Discover Pass free days make it easier to check out state parks and state-managed lands. You might have so much fun during your visit, you're ready to say yes to a full year of adventure. The annual Discover Pass is $45 and provides unlimited day-use parking for everyone in the passholder's vehicle. The pass is valid for an entire year from the month it is purchased and can be transferred between two vehicles. And Discover Pass funds go a long way for your public lands. They provide critical funding for State Parks, DNR and WDFW. The Discover Pass supports recreation and conservation opportunities, keeps bathrooms cleaned and trails maintained, cares for the health of forests and helps protect our seashores for generations to come. Learn more about the Discover Pass and purchase yours here: <https://discoverpass.wa.gov>.

Some leave food out for Santa Claus' reindeer as Norse children did, leaving hay and treats for Odin's eight-legged horse Sleipnir hoping they would stop by during their hunting adventures. Dutch children adopted this same tradition, leaving food in their wooden shoes for St. Nicholas' horse.

WINTER WILDLIFE WATCH

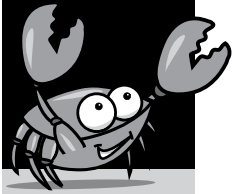

Critters to see at our parks in the dark months. Our parks aren't just fun places to camp and recreate – they're where many Washington wildlife call home! Some animals go underground at this time of year, and some of us wish we could hibernate too. But here we are in November, awake — whether we like it or not. So, we might as well get to a park and explore, right?! You may not expect to see wildlife in state parks right about now, but you'd be surprised. We asked our field staff what animals they've seen in the off-season and thought we'd share their pro tips: Coastal parks like Leadbetter Point and Bottle Beach host thousands of migrating birds in spring and fall. The tidal flats offer an all-you-can-eat buffet of fish and shellfish – a critical refuel on their long flights. Dosewallips famously welcomes a herd of Roosevelt elk each winter; they come down from the Olympic mountains to forage for food. Moran is home year-round to piebald deer. While this color variant of Columbian black-tailed deer is fairly rare, it is relatively common in the deer on Orcas Island. A Larabee game camera recently caught a bobcat and cubs on a popular trail! Deception Pass staff spotted beaver and river otters. Riverside staff say a group of mule deer come to the park in winter to find food, mating opportunities and shelter from the wind. A staffer snapped a perfect bear print in the snow at Mount Spokane. Yakima Sportsman has a resident porcupine. (Remember to keep yourself and your dog at a distance – owl!) A staff member and her daughter recently followed a coyote track laid over a raccoon track in the snow at Fort Flagler. If you see these or any other wildlife in our parks, please remember to keep a respectful distance, move slowly and quietly, do not try to feed them and keep your dog on a leash. Remember: If you see these or any other wildlife in our parks, please view them from a respectful distance, move slowly and quietly, do not feed them and always keep your dog on a leash.

INTUITIVE TAROT WITH TIFFANY

December 12th – December 18th : Knight of Wands Reversed. Take special care regarding your knees, shins, calves, and feet, as they may be particularly susceptible to injury this week. And after much back and forth, with slow paces of progress, the speed December is picking up can feel disconcerting. Fiery action is with you while wrapping up what's been lingering since mid-October, as you aim to feel caught up and aligned for the start of Capricorn Season. This week's card encourages you to remember that you-are-ready and are well seated for that which you are galloping towards. Do your very best not to dig your heels in or pray for a slower trot after spurring for movement much of the year. Carry with you what comes to mind, and worry not what never makes it into your saddle bags. What was left behind was not forgotten, but by design.

December 19th – December 25th : Queen of Wands Reversed. When there is much to be done in the empire, a queen, a Capricorn may think it frivolous and impractical to show presence at festivities or grant an audience without a measurable results purpose, but a lion(ess) understands that joy for joy's sake is just as much for those that love you as it is for your capacity to hold more of your desires. And if it helps your duty-focused sensibilities this week, there is a certain inherent responsibility to endure the celebratory nature of obtaining each layer and piece of each dream. If you do not celebrate the seemingly insignificant, you're robbing yourself of ever reaching the sense of satisfaction you've been striving toward, regardless of what more you'll accomplish. Sit with your memories and write out a list of all you've achieved this year. Even this is purposeful action.

STRAWBERRY CROISSANT FRENCH TOAST CASSEROLE

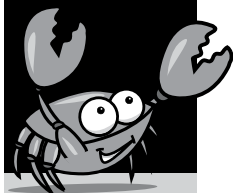

Our decadent overnight breakfast casserole is bursting with fresh strawberries, sweetened cream cheese, and flaky croissants in a creamy vanilla custard! Perfect for Christmas Morning!

INGREDIENTS: 10 med. croissants; 1 (8 oz.) pkg. cream cheese, room temperature; 2 T. confectioners' sugar, plus more for dusting; 6 lg. eggs; 2 c. half and half; 1 tsp. vanilla extract; 1/4 c. plus 1 T. brown sugar; 1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon; 1/4 tsp. salt; 2 c. strawberries cut into 3/4 to 1-inch pieces; 1/4 c. cold salted butter, thinly sliced; Maple syrup for serving DIRECTIONS: 1. Butter a 9x13-inch casserole dish; set aside. Cut each croissant into 3 pieces; set aside. 2. In a medium sized bowl, beat the cream cheese with an electric hand mixer until soft and fluffy about 2 minutes. Add the confectioners' sugar beat until combined; set aside. 3. In a large bowl, whisk together eggs. Add the half and half, vanilla, brown sugar, cinnamon, and salt, whisk until combined. Dip half the croissants into the egg/milk mixture until fully coated. 4. Arrange the croissants into prepared casserole dish, dollop with cream cheese, and scatter with 3/4 of the strawberries over the top. 5. Dip the remaining croissant pieces in the egg/milk mixture and arrange over the strawberries. 6. Pour remaining milk and egg mixture over the entire casserole, gently pressing to absorb the liquid. 7. Sprinkle the remaining strawberries over the top of the casserole. Cover the dish with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight. 8. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Remove the casserole from the refrigerator and discard the plastic wrap. 9. Dot thinly sliced butter over the croissants and bake 40-50 minutes, or until the casserole is golden and crisp. If the tops of the croissants begin to brown too quickly, loosely cover with foil. 10. Let stand at room temperature for 10 minutes. Dust with confectioners' sugar, cut into squares, and drizzle with maple syrup if desired.

THE SECRET RULES OF CHESS

When my girls were seven and eight years old, respectively, I taught them the ancient game of chess (something for which they have never forgiven me). Eventually, their games improved to the point that, over their vehement protests, I enrolled them in a chess tournament at a local elementary school.

The event went on forever, beginning at 8am on a Saturday and ending sometime after I lost consciousness from ennui. Every child played five rounds that day. After one match was over – which in my kids' cases was usually about nine minutes – contestants were sent back to the cafeteria.

In these long breaks, parents ensured their prodigies devoted every minute to sharpening their skills, practicing feverishly until the next round arrived. I was so bored that after a couple hours, I broke down and challenged some of these youngsters to a game. I don't want to brag, but there was this one third grader, Jason Kim, who needed 21 moves before he checkmated me. That was my best performance. Most games were over shortly after I located my horse.

These prepubescent grandmasters were extremely sharp. After a string of five quick defeats, I knew it was time to shake things up a bit. I decided to give these miniature Bobby Fischers a lesson by employing my own Secret Rules of Chess. My next opponent was a nine-year-old named Raza. After a conservative opening, Raza, boldly advanced his bishop into an attack position against my exposed queen.

I contemplated my options, and then, in a maneuver I'm fairly certain Raza did not see coming, I nudged my queen backwards off the board and brought her back onto Raza's end of the board, putting his king in check. Raza jumped up and exclaimed, "You can't do that!"; to which I calmly replied, "Apparently you're not familiar with the chess move called the Queen's Revolt."

He was, of course, more than a little confused, in part because the Queen's Revolt doesn't exist. That's when I began to weave a tale of how this tactic was first used by the Duke of Hapsburg against the Viscount of Mordovia in 1542. In game after game, I continued to keep my young foes completely off balance with one surprising technique after another:

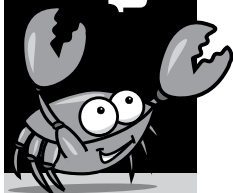

The Bad Bishop's Deceit: My bishop gets to progress diagonally in two directions on the same turn – and can leap over pawns.

The Peasant's Uprising: This can only be done one time per game – and only by the black chess pieces (because I was playing black). I can select one pawn to become a queen for four consecutive moves.

The Knight's Alphabet: Here, my knight can do the usual L-shaped trot, followed by a W-shape, then a Z.

Storming the Castle: One of my favorites. I jettison both of my rooks in unison the length of the board thereby taking out both of my adversary's rooks and any other playing piece in their path. This is a particularly powerful stratagem but one which should only be attempted if your opponent is very young and incredibly gullible.

My opponents had no clue how to defeat me. I even trounced the seven-year-old Kevin Wong, when just before he was about to checkmate me, I resorted to King Arthur's Evasion: I simply advanced my king the entire length of the board, jumping over several of Kevin's pieces, and took out his rook. Kevin protested until I patiently explained that this stratagem was first used by King Henry VIII to defeat Napoleon when they met for the World Chess championship in Reykjavik, at the height of the Irish Potato Famine.

Several parents, who if you ask me, were wired way too tightly, filed a petition to have me permanently banned from any future chess tournaments. I guess some people just have no appreciation for the finer nuances of this ancient game.
