

#Hope

It's easy to judge, it's easy to blame,
To point fingers and tarnish a name
Easy to write a comment or two,
Without thinking the consequences through

It's easy to judge, from a distant place,
Yet understanding requires a different pace.
Pointing things out and shouting out loud,
Saying things that make no one proud,

In pixels and bytes, humanity obscured,
Empathy forgotten, compassion unheard.
Behind the façade of a digital face,
Hate festers, leaving a bitter trace.

For in this vast web where connections lie,
It's easy to forget, a real person on the other side.
Behind blue screens and a stupid username,
Being an online bully isn't the route to fame,

Why is it more important to tear others down ,
Rather than build them up and not let them drown
Break the cycle of hate, and stop the online pain.
Is it that difficult to be kind again?

Lets be the ones to start a digital revolution,
Don't our children deserve a safe resolution?
In shadows of pixels where darkness may grope,
Online words wound, let's bring back #hope.
