How to get help from your township trustee

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT

Martin County Journal Publisher

One of the main jobs of township government is to provide assistance to the poor, in emergency situations. That assistance can include help with clothing, food, cleaning and hygiene items, medical assistance, housing, utilities, funeral expenses, and transportation to seek or maintain employment. Townships receive tax dollars each year to provide assistance to the public. And monies not handed out in that fund for the year, roll over to the next year. All six townships had $236,722 in their township assistance accounts at the end of 2016.

Someone in need of assistance must apply at the township trustee's office where they live, have an emergency need, and be willing to help themselves as much as possible. A state approved township assistance application should be provided to each applicant.

According to Indiana code, a town-ship trustee cannot give aid to an individual who receives food stamps or other government assistance. If a trustee believes that the applicant or any member of their household qualifies for food stamps, Social Security or other government benefits, they cannot provide aid. If the applicant has applied for other assistance and been denied in the last 180 days, they have to provide proof in order to receive assistance.

In the case of emergency assistance, a township trustee must promptly act when receiving an application for assistance. In non-emergency situations, the trustee must act on a completed application within 72 hours after receiving it, excluding weekends and legal holidays. If an application is denied, the trustee has to include a statement listing the specific reasons the assistance was denied. Applicants denied can then go to the county commissioners to appeal the decision. The trustee is required to provide the applicants information on how to appeal the decision to the commissioners, which must be done within 15 days of the denial.

Township trustees gather a plethora of information from applicants including their name, income, assets, wasted resources, relatives capable of providing assistance, past or present employment, pending claims or causes of action, and medical conditions in relation to employment. They must also get consent from any other adult member of the household to check with government benefits offices to see if the applicant or any member of the family is receiving or has filed for assistance, including unemployment benefits.

Trustees can also require able-bodied applicants to seek employment. They can withhold approving assistance until satisfied that the applicant is actively seeking a job. The township trustee is required to help the applicant in seeking the employment.

According to Indiana code, each township is required to have a published phone number in the name of the township. See the side bar for contact information for each township in Martin County. To apply for assistance, contact the trustee of the township in which you live

County council approves additional money requests

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Council met Monday night, March 6. Council Member Warren Albright was not present for the meeting.

The council approved the following additional money requests:

-$4,635 from the general fund for a copy machine for the recorder's office. Recorder Rhonda Sanders said she is donating her old copy machine to the surveyor's office.

-$159 from the general fund for the salaries at the coroner's office. Auditor January Roush said that she made a mistake in the salary ordinance and did not include the three percent raises for the coroner's office employees for this year.

-$3,368 from the general fund to pay off the compensation time for the courthouse custodian. Roush said that over the years, the custodian has built up the hours and they want to pay all the hours off to get him back to zero.

-$7,230 from the general fund for the salaries of the jail staff. Roush said this was also a mistake on her part for not adding the employees' three percent raises for this year.

-$24,000 from CEDIT (County Economic Development Income Tax) to pay for a road asset management plan, to be done by HWC Engineering. Roush and Highway Superintendent Leo Padgett said the plan is required to apply for the Community Crossings Grant. The plan will include the condition of all county roads.

A request from the auditor's office for additional funds of $14,500 was rescinded. Roush said that the money was originally requested to pay for new payroll software. She said the commissioners approved her spending the money for the upgrade but Commissioner Paul George voted against it saying he felt it was too much money. Roush said this bothered her so she looked into the software a little more and decided that she doesn't want it af-

She also removed $1,500 to pay to have a county website made. She and Courtney Hughett are going to do it instead, at no cost to the county.

Auditor Roush provided the council with an update on the renovations being done to the commissioners' meeting room and the bathroom. The ceiling tiles, carpeting, wall paper, trim and furniture are all being replaced. Roush said she had a budget of $9,500 for the project and has spent a little more than $9,000 at this point. Roush said she has been able to save quite a bit of money by shopping clearance items at home improvement stores.

Two sisters, one blonde and one brunette, inherit the family ranch. Unfortunately, after just a few years, they are in financial trouble. In order to keep the bank from repossessing the ranch, they need to purchase a bull from the stockyard in a far town so that they can breed their own stock.

They only have $600 left. Upon leaving, the brunette tells her sister, "When I get there, if I decide to buy the bull, I'll contact you to drive out after me and haul it home."

The brunette arrives at the stockyard, inspects the bull, and decides she wants to buy it. The man tells her that he will sell it for $599, no less.

After paying him, she drives to the nearest town to send her sister a telegram to tell her the news. She walks into the telegraph office and says, "I want to send a telegram to my sister telling her that I've bought a bull for our ranch. I need her to hitch the trailer to our pickup truck and drive out here so we can haul it home."

The telegraph operator explains that he'll be glad to help her, then adds, "It's just 99 cents a word."

Well, after paying for the bull, the brunette only has $1 left. She realizes that she'll only be able to send her sister one word.

After a few minutes of thinking, she nods and says, "I want you to send her one word: comfortable."

The operator shakes his head. "How is she ever going to know that you want her to hitch the trailer to your pickup truck and drive out here to haul that bull back to your ranch if you send her just the word 'comfortable'?"

The brunette explains, "My sister's blonde. The word's big. She'll read it very slowly ... com-for-da-bull."

"...compassion ... does not assume its true proportions until it embraces not only man but every living being." -Albert Schweitzer

-- REVERENCE FOR LIFE --

Albert Schweitzer, one of the most renowned theologians, philosophers and philanthropists of the last century, made that statement in his 1952 Nobel Peace Prize speech for his philosophy of "reverence for life." He was instrumental in raising national awareness of the treatment of animals, and subsequently of humane societies in our country.

-- HUMANE SOCIETY --

A humane society is a group that aims to stop human or animal suffering, although the term is now used mostly for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Our own Martin County Humane Society (MCHS) embodies this goal and reverence for life at the animal shelter in Loogootee. They take in cats and dogs to care and nurture them until they are adopted into a needy home.

-- ANIMAL SHELTER --

The MCHS Animal Shelter houses, on the average, 50 dogs and cats. Since they are a no-kill shelter, space is usually only available when a pet is adopted. To help with the space issue, the MCCF challenged the humane society to raise $1,250 for their Shelter Improvement Project. And the challenge included a match of $2 for $1 raised once they get the goal. They were successful and the MCCF recently awarded them the matching $2,500 grant. This project is adding and improving housing spaces as well as an updated quarantine area to better protect the other animals.

-- A PET GIVES BACK --

The animal shelter helps to improve our quality of life and our county by helping to control the population of stray cats and dogs. The shelter could also have that companion you've been waiting for. These pets not only give unconditional love, but they have also been shown to be psychologically, emotionally and physically beneficial to you. Caring for a pet can provide a sense of purpose and fulfillment and lessen the feeling of loneliness.

-- WHY ADOPT --

The animal shelter has a large variety of colors and sizes of cats and dogs. They have been able to go from 91 pets adopted in 2013, up to 273 in 2016. What a service! And for a nominal adoption fee, your pet will come to you with several types of vaccinations and treatments, spay/neuter, heartworm testing (for dogs over 7 months old), a bag of food, and a goodie bag. This fee is a deal for you since it does not nearly cover all the costs; the rest is covered by donations from caring citizens in our county.

-- WE ALL CAN HELP --

The MCCF is pleased to be able to help the Martin County Humane Society continue to improve and provide a valuable service for our community. You can help too. Just call them at 812-295-5900. Their website www. humanesocietyofmartincounty.org also has a lot of good information and how you can donate money or items they need.

-- MORE INFORMATION --

For more information about the MCCF, please contact the Executive Director, Curt Johnson, at 812-295-1022 or mccf@cfpartner.org.

You are also welcome to visit our website at www.cfpartner.org/mccf. htm, follow us on Twitter at www.twitter.com/MartinCountyCF, and "like" the MCCF Facebook page at www.facebook.com/mccommunityfoundation.

Last week's storms made for a lot of clean-up work in the gardens. At Sandhill Gardens, most of the clean-up was simply picking up the sticks that had fallen from the trees, but I have talked with many who had trees down and other damage to buildings.

For those with minimal damage, clean-up is simple. Using good, sharp pruners, cut any damaged limbs back to the limb collar. There is no need to paint anything on the cut. Most tree experts agree that a clean cut will allow the tree or shrub to compartmentalize the damage and heal quickly without any sealing. If there is any sign of disease, disinfect the saws and pruners between cuts to keep from spreading the disease. This may be done by either dipping the blades in a ten percent bleach solution or rubbing alcohol or by putting the disinfectant in a spray bottle and spraying the blades between cuts.

The complete loss of a large tree can mean a major change for a garden. Clean-up is only the beginning. After the debris has been cut and removed, one must decide on what to do about the stump. There are stump grinders who will remove the stump for a fee. That is certainly the quickest way to get rid of the stump. Another option is to drill holes into the stump and apply chemicals that are available to accelerate the decomposition of the stump. Although this will speed the decomposition, it will still take several months to completely remove the stump.

Depending on the way the tree fell, one may have the option of leaving the trunk standing, cutting back the limbs to form a snag. One may girdle the trunk by cutting a ring around the base of the trunk. This will prevent sprouts from forming on the snag. Over time, the snag will become a home for a lot of wildlife.

Another option is to use the trunk as a sculpture. Find someone who is experienced in chainsaw carving and have him or her carve the trunk into a work of art. Treating the carving with a preservative will mean the sculpture will be around for many years.

Still another option is just to disguise the stump. One may cut it as close to the ground as possible and then surround the stump with stones, castle blocks or some other material to form a raised bed. Fill the bed with soil and plant some annuals that do not require a deep root system.

Regardless of the way you choose to remove the stump, it is virtually impossible to remove all of the remains of the tree. The roots will likely remain for many years and may send up some sprouts. These sprouts are not likely to mature into good trees and should be removed as soon as possible. As the roots begin to decay, you may notice mushrooms growing in the area, feeding upon the decaying roots. If you do not like the look of the mushrooms in your yard, just knock them down. They will return, but will disappear when the roots have completely decayed.

The loss of a large tree will also affect the surrounding gardens. Where once hostas and other shade-loving plants thrived, now they may be burned and become unsightly. Since even planting a new tree in the area will not immediately give the amount of shade of the mature specimen, you may need to move the shade plants as soon as the foliage begins to appear. On the bright side, this may give you the opportunity to try some new sun-loving plants and to create a new look for the gardens. Get a nursery catalogue or plant book and begin planning your new sunny garden. You may find that you like the change in your garden.

Grazing Bites

By Victor Shelton NRCS State Agronomist/Grazing Specialist

Yes, it appears that we are trying to having an early spring, but I refuse to count those chicks before they hatch! Abnormally warm weather in February and early March is not that uncommon here in Indiana, unfortunately neither are late March and early April snows. On average across the state, the accumulated growing degree days are higher than normal so far this year.

Now, it is REALLY early still, but I know how some think about ANY new green growth in the pastures. Let's think this through together. Grazing too early in the spring (technically it's not spring yet) does nothing but remove the solar panel the plants need to start building sugars and growing new roots. The forages really need to be able to fully leaf out or canopy and get a good start before animals start removing that new growth otherwise production will be reduced.

I know sometimes the hay is not the best quality. Better to supplement poor hay and keep feeding it, if available, then to start grazing too early. Now I say that somewhat tongue in cheek because sometimes you want to set the stand back a bit to remove competition. Such would be the case where you have frost seeded clover into the field. This would be a factor only if it was not grazed down tighter at the end of the previous grazing season or as dormant stockpiled forage. If it was grazed down close before, especially if grazed down before going dormant last fall, then you don't want to graze it close again, just utilize it in the normal rotation.

Fields that were grazed down tight last fall or over winter as stockpiled forage will not have adequate amount of standing dry matter, i.e., fiber available, and would not be the best fields to start grazing early anyway. Those fields will lack sufficient fiber to go with all the washy high water, high protein forage that will come on with first growth. All ruminant livestock need to balance the carbon nitrogen ratio in their rumen to maintain that mat. If they don't they will not perform the way we want them to, i.e., less weight gain, less milk production. It just goes through them faster than they can effectively utilize it...and you know what that means. I've said it many times...don't stand too close behind those cows!

If you look at the manure consistency during that time period, it is probably very thin, almost watery, not that pudding consistency that is ideal for the rumen. Fields that do not have adequate dry matter to go along with that lush new growth will need to be supplemented to keep the animals in balance. This is a good time to put out some low-quality hay, baled corn stalks or even straw because if they need it, they will eat it.

I would hope you have been able to keep at least one or two fields with some stockpiled forage for early spring use. Stockpiled forages left from the previous season mixed with that new growth grass makes for a nicely balanced sward for grazing in the spring and a really nice place to calve, including minimal mud and good quality balanced forage to eat. If you have never tried it, you will wonder why you haven't.

This is one normally one of my favorite times of the year to build fence. We often get nice breaks in the weather, not too hot or cold and soil conditions are usually very good for pounding posts. If you are in the early stages of doing some divisions and want to keep some flexibility, then utilize longer linear fences dividing bigger areas into longer narrower fields which can be easily subdivided down with temporary fence into whatever size is needed or cut for hay, if needed.

Now is a good time to get those soil tests done. Of course, if you haven't taken any for a while, then it is even a better time. The plugs will pull pretty easy right now and you should have plenty of time to get them sent in and get results back in time to apply any needed nutrients before the real growing season.

It is extremely difficult to maintain a stand of quality forages that will produce quality, nutritious feed without adequate soil fertility levels. Everyone has tried it, but you soon see that by "getting by" with lower levels of nutrients, especially phosphorus and potassium, you are doing just that, "getting by," but with lower yields, lower quality forages, and lower carrying capacities. Just like an annual field crop, your forage crop needs to be fertilized and managed. Once the field is to moderate or better levels of fertility it is easy to maintain it at that level if it is only used for grazing. Any mechanical removal takes away nutrients that will need to be replaced. Graze as much as you can and hay as little as you can, especially land that is hard to get fertilizer equipment on.

Nothing affects availability of nutrients more than calcium. It is one element that I'm not sure you really could ever over apply, and certainly one of the best first dollars spent! Calcium and its relationship or ratio with magnesium, have a major impact on the forage's ability to extract nutrients from the soil and certainly the acidity or alkalinity of the soil which can certainly dictate what will or can grow there. I would shoot for at least a 4:1 ratio of calcium to magnesium, or 5:1 if a dairy. If you are really short on calcium and start fixing that problem then you might find out that other important elements start becoming more readily available. I've seen available phosphorus almost double after lime was applied or especially high cal lime. If total phosphorus is a lot higher than available phosphorus results on a basic soil test, then calcium is normally not adequate.

Now, if you are planning to take an early cutting of hay off a field, then putting most or all of your fertilizer on in early spring is not too bad an idea; especially any nitrogen. If the application is on pasture, then you may want to rethink it just a little. There is no use adding fuel to the fire by adding a lot of nitrogen to that spring growth spurt. You are much better off to wait and do at least a split application. Apply half of it in mid-June toward the end of the spring growth and the other half in early fall to help that great fall-growth period. The June application will help you keep things going through the summer better...especially with some timely rains...if that is possible.

Keep on grazing!

On March 5, Alan Cook traveled to the Tri-State Spelling Bee contest in Evansville to compete against 115 other school spelling bee champions from the Tri-State region. Alan emerged as one of 33 finalists after a written test consisting of 15 spelling words and 15 vocabulary words. The 33 finalists then competed in an oral bee. Alan managed to stay in the competition right to the end—a grueling 36 rounds stretching out to 3.5 hours—finishing in 3rd place. (Alan had previously placed 9th in the 2015 Spelling Bee and 6th in 2016.) He is in the 8th grade at Shoals Jr-Sr High School and is the son of Edward and Angela Cook, of Shoals.
