EMMA GRABER Emma Graber awarded 2014 Lilly Scholarship through Foundation

Emma Graber, daughter of Elmer Graber and Brenda Smith, has been named the Martin County Community Foundation's 2014 Lilly Endowment Community Scholar. Emma will receive a full-tuition scholarship to a four-year Indiana public or private college or university, along with an annual $900 stipend for required books.

Emma, a Loogootee Jr/Sr High School senior, plans to pursue a pre-physician assistant degree at Butler University, University of Evansville or Purdue University.

"I want to express my gratitude to the Martin County Community Foundation for selecting me as this year's Lilly Scholar. I am truly thrilled and humbled to learn I have received this honor. Thank you to the selection committee for awarding me this scholarship. Thank you to my family, friends, teachers, and classmates for their continued support. I hope that one day I will be able to help other students achieve their goals just as all of you have helped me," said Graber.

Nine students applied for the scholarship. The selection committee, made up of volunteer community residents, narrowed the field to the final six. Two names (one recipient and one alternate) were submitted to the Independent Colleges of Indiana (ICI) for final selection of the recipients. ICI is a non-profit corporation that represents 31 regionally accredited degree granting, non-profit, private colleges and universities in the state. Every year, Lilly Endowment reviews all aspects of the scholarship program, trying to find ways to maximize the effectiveness of the program while maintaining responsible stewardship of the Endowment resources. Lilly Endowment offered one scholarship to the community of Martin County. The Lilly Endowment Community Scholarships are the result of a statewide Lilly Endowment initiative to help Hoosier students reach higher levels of education. There were 143 scholarships awarded statewide.

LHS students present Willy Wonka

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT Martin County Journal Publisher

After weeks of prep and late nights of practice, Loogootee Jr.-Sr. High School students will present Roald Dahl's Willy Wonka this weekend in the school's auditorium.

The first performance will be Friday night, April 4 at 7 p.m. and the second will be held Saturday night, April 5 also at 7 p.m. Cost for student tickets is $5 and $8 for adults if purchased in advance in the high school office. All tickets at the door will be $10. The same cast will perform both evenings.

According to Wikipedia, Roald Dahl's Willy Wonka is a musical play that combines elements of both Roald Dahl's book "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" and of the 1971 movie "Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory" with newly-created material. The play has several versions: the original version which premiered in 2004, the Junior version, the Kids version, and the Theatre for Young Audiences version, which is the one LHS students will be performing. All are owned by Music Theatre International, the company that owns the Willy Wonka license.

Willy Wonka will be played both nights by freshman Matty Jones. Dylan Jones, eighth grader, will be taking on the role of Charlie Bucket. The other children touring the chocolate factory with Charlie will be (See 'LHS' continued on page 2)

Brooke Gregory approached the Martin County Commissioners at their meeting Tuesday night, April 1 about getting a road opened to property she owns that is landlocked. She said she has been working on getting this done for 15 years and has gone through six sets of commissioners in that time period to no avail.

She explained that the area was originally all one piece of property and when it got divided, no easements were included for access to her portion. The property has a log cabin and a lake and is 30 acres.

Gregory said she felt that since she pays taxes on that property she should be allowed to have a county road to get to it. She said she has probably paid $40,000 in taxes on property she doesn't have access to and she just needs someone from the county to go be and she would pay to have the road done, up to county standards. She mentioned that there was an unimproved Country Road 85 that could be worked from. She said it's a quarter of a mile distance to her land. "They've done a lot more than that for a lot of less taxpaying people," she said. "I don't that it is against the law for it to be land-locked.

Commissioner Paul George said he was under the assumption that Gregory had another way into the property. Gregory said she did not but her uncle has allowed her (See 'RESIDENT' continued on page 2)

County's jobless rate 11th lowest last month

Martin County's unemployment rate increased from 5.4 percent in January to 5.8 jc percent in February according to the Indiana Department of Workforce Development report released last week. The county is tied with three other counties in the state (Johnson, Switzerland, and Tippecanoe) for having the 11th lowest jobless rate for February.

In February, Martin County had 5,239 residents able to work with 304 of them without jobs. In January, there were 5,125 citizens in the workforce and 278 of them were unemployed. In February of last year, the county's jobless rate was 6.2 percent with 5,140 residents able to work and 321 of them without jobs.

Daviess County's unemployment rate also rose in February to 5 percent, up from 4.8 percent in January. The county had the third lowest jobless rate in the state last month.

In February, Daviess County had 14,980 residents in the workforce and 756 of them were jobless. In January, the county had (See 'RATE' continued on page 2) access through his land a few times. She said she doesn't want the road to be a thoroughfare, she just wants it for access to her property. Commissioner Kevin Boyd said that if it is a county road, she can't keep people from travelling on it. She said that it will be a dead end road ending at a chicken coop or her pond but said she is fine with it being accessible by others, she just wants it done.

County Attorney Dave Lett said he would have to pull the file and relook at the issue before giving any information since it has been several years since the land was divided. The commissioners told Gregory to come back to the next meeting in two weeks.

Josh Hughett, humane society president, presented the commissioners with the society's quarterly activity. The report stated that the shelter has taken in 31 dogs and 10 cats in the first three months of the year. Six of the dogs were claimed by their owners, the remaining animals were either surrendered or taken in as strays and never claimed. From January through March the society has adopted out 31 dogs and 10 cats. $1,800.95 has been spent on vet bills, $1,675.29 has been spent on dog and cat food, and $1,581.88 has been spent on utilities. The humane society has received 232 phone calls, emails or facebook/Petfinder messages in the first three months regarding animal abuse or neglect, strays, surrender requests, lost/found pets, or inquiries on adoptable animals. The report also noted that all animals that come through the shelter now receive all suggested vaccinations, including rabies, and are spayed/neutered, with the exception of young puppies and kittens.

He also noted that this year's dinner and auction will be held on April 12 at Loogootee High School and funds raised at that event go toward several months of the shelter's expenses, so it is very important.

Auditor January Roush reported that of the six properties left over from last year's tax sale, three sold at the recent commissioners' sale at the courthouse totaling $873. She added that if all the property taxes on those properties were brought current, it would total $9,000 for the county.

At the end of the meeting Commissioner Dan Gregory wanted to remind the public that farming will be starting up again soon and drivers should be cautious on the roadways for farming equipment.

Steiner to seek re-election for prosecutor

Martin County Prosecutor Mike Steiner respect and dignity. By doing so I am able has announced his intention to seek re-election for his fourth term. "The last 11 years undue drama or expense. We can almost alhave been the best 11 years of my professional life. I have had the opportunity and honor to serve the people of Martin County. I owe a debt of gratitude that I may never be able to repay," said Steiner. He continued, "I love what I do because I really believe I have made a difference in people's lives. That is why I hope to serve another term." Steiner also is a member of the Board of Directors of the Indiana Prosecuting Attorney's Council and currently is President of the Association of Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys.

14,859 residents able to work with 709 of them unemployed. In February of 2013. Daviess County had an unemployment rate of 6.2 percent with 14,747 residents in the workforce and 921 of them without jobs.

Dubois County also saw an increase in their unemployment rate from January to February, moving from 4.6 percent to 4.9 percent. The county was in second place in the state for lowest jobless rate.

In February, Dubois County had 21,569 residents able to work and 1,060 of them were without jobs. In January, there were 21.589 citizens in the workforce with 992 of them unemployed. In February of last year, the county had a jobless rate of 6.1 percent with 21,053 residents able to work and 1,293 of them without jobs.

Orange County's unemployment rate went from 7.4 percent in January to 7.8 percent in February. The county was in a five-way tie with Delaware, Franklin, Fulton, and Henry for the 25th highest jobless rate of the 92 Indiana counties.

In February, Orange County had 10,212 residents able to work and 792 of them were without jobs. In January, there were 10,093 citizens in the workforce with 749 of them without jobs. In February of last year, the county had a jobless rate of 9.8 percent with 10,132 residents able to work and 995 of them unemployed.

Lawrence County's jobless rate jumped a whole percentage point in February to 10 percent, up from 9 percent the month before. The county had the second highest jobless rate in the state last month.

In February, Lawrence had 21,450 residents in the workforce with 2,141 of them without jobs. In January, there were 21,135 residents able to work and 1,908 of them were unemployed. In February of 2013, the county's unemployment rate was 11.4 percent with 21,262 residents in the workforce and 2,416 of them unemployed.

The top ten counties in the state with the highest jobless rate for February were: Ver-million at 11.1 percent, Lawrence at 10 percent, LaPorte at 9.4 percent, Crawford and Jasper at 9.3 percent, Newton at 9.2 percent, Fayette and Starke at 9.1 percent, and Lake and Owen at 9 percent.

The top ten counties in the state with the lowest unemployment rate for February were: Hamilton at 4.6 percent, Dubois at 4.9 percent, Daviess at 5 percent, Bartholomew at 5.2 percent, LaGrange, Kosciusko, Jackson and Hendricks at 5.4 percent; Knox at 5.5 percent, and Boone at 5.7 percent.

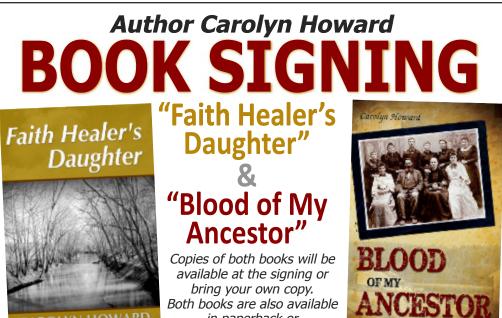

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate in The Hoosier State continued its significant downward trend in February. The rate stood at 6.1 percent, down from an initially reported 6.4 percent in January. The number of unemployed Hoosiers was less than 200,000 for the first time since August of 2008. The unemployment rate has been on a downward slide so far in 2014 while the labor force has expanded by nearly 14,000. Indiana's rate was more than one-half of a percentage point below the national rate for the first time in a decade.

Indiana also added 5,400 private sector jobs in February. The Hoosier State has grown more than 214,000 private sector jobs since July 2009, the low point of employment in the state.

"Indiana has had a strong start to 2014 despite the harsh winter," said Scott B. Sanders, Commissioner of the Indiana Department of Workforce Development. "Our unemployment rate is now the lowest it has been since August 2008 and our labor force has expanded by nearly 14,000 in two months."

Employment by Sector

Sectors showing gains in February included: Leisure and Hospitality (2,200), Construction (2,000), Trade, Transportation & Utilities (1,400) and Manufacturing (800). Sectors showing decline in February included: Private Educational & Health Services (-800), Professional & Business Services (-600) and Financial Activities (-300). Total non-farm employment increased in February (9,100).

Steiner believes he has the confidence and support of law enforcement and thinks that is critical to effective service. "Our police officers are incredibly dedicated despite some pretty severe limitations. We don't have the number of officers or the equipment available that other communities do but manage to do well with what we have. I have developed a good relationship with these officers. They know they can call me any time of the day or night and I will do everything I can to help them," stated Steiner.

There are many areas involved in running the prosecutor's office. These include criminal cases, child support issues, victim assistance, and budgetary issues. "I think the single most important function of the prosecutor is dealing with people. I treat everyone, regardless of their situation, with ecutor should do nothing more than put people in jail. "I take very little pleasure in locking people up. It is part of the job but there should be no joy in doing it. I get the most satisfaction from truly helping people. We deal mostly with people who have addiction or mental health issues. When I can help someone with those problems begin to lead a productive life, I find true joy. That makes all the frustration and late hours worth it," said Steiner.

Steiner lives with his wife, Shelli, in Shoals. They have four daughters, Charli, Jenae, Mindi, and Mackenzie. He is chairman of the Martin County Safe Schools Commission, is on the Sheriff's Merit Board, serves on the Martin County Community Corrections Advisory Board, and is active with the Shoals American Legion as a member of the Sons of the American Legion. He has also coached Cal Ripken baseball and high school baseball for Shoals High School. If elected he will make two promises. "I will do what I have tried to do for eleven years: I will show up for work every day and I will give you my best effort. I would appreciate your support and vote," concluded Steiner.

ABOUT THE BOOKS

Faith Healer's Daughter

Liza Stanfield and Albey Quackenbush were normal kids growing up in the 1840s on Lost River in southern Indiana. They lived with their parents on the farm, worked hard and loved life.

John Ritter was studying hard to become a medical doctor with the goal of making his world a better place.

Enter Dr. William Bowles. Dr. Bowles would do anything to become powerful, including body snatching for his own medical research and stealing the wife of a wealthy Louisianan planter away from her husband. How do the ambitions of Dr. Bowles lead to a homicide that could've ruined Albey and Liza's lives? And what does John Ritter eventually do to take this powerful man down?

Lost River Saga tells the story of these four people, their lives, and how their lives intertwined. Faith Healer's Daughter is the first installment in that series, based on a true story from events that occurred in southern Indiana in the 1840s.

Blood of My Ancester

Goldsberry Hollow was a rural community in Martin County, Indiana that was first settled in the 1800s by the Goldsberry family. When Alanson Lyon moved his family into the hollow in 1864, it made the Goldsberry family unhappy, because Alanson was a wealthy man who built a large home and set up a large farm.

When Alanson died, his son, Joel, became the owner of the farm. About the same time, John Goldsberry's daughter, Malinda, became pregnant, but she wasn't married. To keep her father from beating her to death, Joel took Malinda and her daughter into his home, hiring her as his housekeeper. Joel fell in love with Malinda and eventually married her.

Malinda also had an older sister who lived in the hollow whose name was Margaret. When Margaret's husband died just a few months after Malinda did, the Goldsberrys naturally assumed Joel would marry Malinda's sister. When Joel didn't marry Margaret but married Adaline Cannon instead, a family feud broke out, resulting in Adaline's murder.

IDENTIFIED WITH ASD

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that 1 in 68 children (or 14.7 per 1,000 eight-year-olds) in multiple communities in the United States has been identified with autism spectrum disorder (ASD). This new estimate is roughly 30 percent higher than previous estimates reported in 2012 of 1 in 88 children (11.3 per 1,000 eight year olds) being identified with an autism spectrum disorder. The number of children identified with ASD ranged from 1 in 175 children in Alabama to 1 in 45 children in New Jersey.

The surveillance summary report, "Prevalence of Autism Spectrum Disorder among Children Aged 8 Years - Autism and Developmental Disabilities Monitoring Network, 11 Sites, United States, 2010," was published last Thursday in the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. Researchers reviewed records from community sources that educate, diagnose, treat and/or provide services to children with developmental disabilities. The criteria used to diagnose ASDs and the methods used to collect data have not changed.

The data continue to show that ASD is althan girls: 1 in 42 boys versus

1 in 189 girls. White children NUMBER OF CHILDREN abilities. are more likely to be identified as having ASD than are black or Hispanic children.

Levels of intellectual ability vary greatly among children with autism, ranging from severe intellectual challenges to average or above average intellectual ability. The study found that almost half of children identified with ASD have average or above average intellectual ability (an IQ above 85) compared to a third of children a decade ago.

"Community leaders, health professionals, edsible and connected to the services they need," said Coleen Boyle, Ph.D., M.S. hyg., most five times more common among boys director of CDC's National Center on Birth Defects and Developmental Dis-

> The report also shows most children with ASD are diagnosed after age 4, even though ASD can be diagnosed as early as age 2. Healthy People 2020, the nation's 10-year health objectives, strives to increase the proportion of young children with an autism spectrum disorder (ASD) and other developmental delays who are screened, evaluated, and enrolled in early intervention services in a timely manner.

"The most important thing for parents to do is to act early when there is a concern about a child's development," said Marshalyn Yeargin-Allabout how your child plays, learns, speaks, acts, or moves, take action. Don't wait."

If you suspect that your child may have ASD: Talk to your child's doctor about your concerns. At the same time, call your local early intervention program or school system for a free evaluation.

It's never too late to get help for your child. CDC's "Learn the Signs. Act Early." program has joined with others across the federal government to promote developmental and behavioral screening through the Birth to 5: Watch Me Thrive campaign, which was launched last Thursday. The program will help families look for and celebrate milestones; promote universal screenings; identify delays as early as possible; and improve the support available to help children succeed in school and thrive alongside their peers.

"More needs to be done to identify children with autism sooner," said Boyle. "Early

Pence calls for new direction of energy efficiency in Indiana

340 to become law without his signature, Governor Pence issued the following statement.

"Low-cost energy is an essential element of Indiana's economic development and prosperity. The simple fact is that higher energy costs will cost Indiana jobs. By reducing our need for electricity, we reduce our need to build expensive power plants at a cost to Hoosier ratepayers. For this reason, I believe that energy efficiency is an important part of our 'all of the above' energy strategy

"As such, I was disappointed that the General Assembly chose to eliminate the energy efficiency program established by the previous administration without offering a viable alternative. For that reason, I have declined to sign this bill and acknowledge that this bill will become law without my signature.

"I could not sign this bill because it does away with a worthwhile energy efficiency

In announcing his intention to allow SEA program. I could not veto this bill because doing so would increase the cost of utilities for Hoosier ratepayers and make Indiana less competitive by denying relief to large electricity consumers, including our state's manufacturing base.

> "To ensure that Indiana's energy policy continues to include sound efficiency programs that lower electricity usage and support economic growth, I am calling on the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission to immediately begin to develop recommendations for a new energy efficiency program that would include an opt-out for large electricity consumers.

> "In addition, I have informed leaders of the General Assembly of my actions and my intention to bring energy efficiency legislation during the 2015 legislative session. I look forward to working with legislators to develop a new energy efficiency program for our state that will encourage conservation and promote a strong Indiana economy."

The Messmer Report By District 63 State Representative Mark Messmer

Updating Indiana's criminal code

Whether it is major or minor, you can hardly turn on the news lately without seeing some mention of crime. While crime may be an inevitable part of the world we live in, it is important that we do everything we can to make Indiana a safer place for Hoosier families, and sometimes that means revaluating our criminal code.

Before the 2013 legislative session, there had not been a comprehensive overview of our criminal code since 1977. Legislators began working on this effort years ago and have spent thousands of hours looking into our criminal code. Last year, we voted to change criminal penalties from four felony levels (A-D) to six felony levels (1-6), providing sentencing ranges and advisories for each level.

As part of our continued efforts to increase proportionality and certainty in sentencing as well as uniformity in criminal code, we made a variety of technical changes and updates to the court sentencing process again this session. House Enrolled Act (HEA) 1006 was the result of work put in by the Criminal Code Evaluation Committee, a sentencing policy study committee that has been researching and reviewing this issue since 2009.

One important issue that HEA 1006 addresses is habitual offenders. Courts will now be required to sentence a person found to be a habitual offender to an additional fixed term of imprisonment that is between six to 20 years, for a person convicted of murder or a Level 1 through 4 felony, and two to six years for a person convicted of a Level 5 or 6 felony. This takes a tough stance on those who continue to commit the same crime regardless of its severity.

HEA 1006 also enhances penalties one such as meth and Vicodin. For example, if a

Indiana to select outstanding high school seniors for Mr. and Miss Math/Science Awards

Governor Mike Pence will recognize two outstanding high school seniors this spring for their exemplary performance in math and science. One male and one female student will be selected for the Indiana Mr. and Miss Math/Science honor, and each will receive a $2,000 Indiana CollegeChoice 529 Direct Savings Plan scholarship contribution for their achievements.

While Indiana has thousands of high-performing math and science students, the Indiana Mr. and Miss Math/Science awards will be presented to the most outstanding students. Academic performance in science, math, engineering and technology (STEM) classes will be considered, in addition to extracurricular activities, work/research projects, leadership roles and community service.

person commits an offense within 250 feet of school property, a public park, a family housing complex or a child care facility, their penalty would be greater than someone who commits this crime alone, in their home.

In an effort to support county treatment programs and eliminate the need for additional prisons, it is important that we seek out innovative alternatives for incarceration that include a web-based, mobile friendly platform. For example, Corrisoft's AIR program provides the ability to constantly monitor offenders on parole, probation or home detention. The cost per offender under this technology averages around $18 a day, while Indiana currently spends approximately $52.20 per inmate per day.

As a result of this new law, the Department of Corrections (DOC) will estimate the amount of operational cost savings due to reductions in the number of individuals who are incarcerated. If there are any savings the DOC may, with the approval of the Budget Agency, make additional grants to counties for their community corrections programs and transfer funds to the Judicial Conference of Indiana to provide additional financial aid to court probation services.

Finding the proper balance between punitive and rehabilitative justice is not a simple or easy process, but it is one that I believe we have given due diligence to. In the end, we had achieved the support of the Indiana Sheriffs Association, the DOC, the Indiana Drug Enforcement Agency and many others. While I believe these are some of the highlights of this new law, I confess that this only scratches the surface. Military officers can now notarize documents for deploying soldiers

Secretary of State Connie Lawson applauds the signing of House Enrolled Act 1041 by Governor Mike Pence, giving National Guard officers authority to notarize documents for soldiers preparing for deployment. Over the past year, Indiana National Guard members preparing to serve overseas have had difficulty getting deployment documents notarized. Previously, National Guard officers were able to authenticate these documents for Guard soldiers, but last year the Department of Defense informed the Indiana National Guard that this was no longer allowed unless there was a change in state law.

"When the National Guard told me about the difficulty soldiers were experiencing trying to get documents notarized before deployment, I immediately went to work to simplify the process," said Secretary Lawson. "I realized that if we could give military members notary powers for National Guard related documents that our service men and women wouldn't have to jump extra hoops. When I told state Representative Doug Gutwein about the issue, he agreed to carry the bill, and I thank him for all of his hard work

"It is my hope that this new law will ease some of the burden for our service members as they prepare to leave their home and family behind to serve our country. I commend Governor Pence, Representative Gutwein, and Senator Allen Paul for their support in this effort."

The change in the law will be effective July 1, 2014. It will allow the Adjutant General or a designee to notarize service-related documents for active and reserve members of the Indiana National Guard.

Secretary Lawson is responsible for approving the application of anyone wishing to be a notary public in the State of Indiana. For more information on how to become a notary public, please visit https://myweb.in.gov/SOS/notaryapp/.

Legislation concerning career and technical education diplomas signed into law

Legislation co-authored by State Repre- has decided to take a more in-depth look sentative Mark Messmer (R-Jasper) regard- into how we can make the program even ing career and technical education diplomas better." was signed into law by Governor Pence

The subcommittee will include a member of each work council and representatives of high school career and technical education programs, the Department of Education, community colleges, the Commission for Higher Education and industry leaders. "Ultimately, after studying this issue in further detail, I would like to see Indiana create a CTE diploma," said Rep. Messmer. "Not all students are designed for jobs that require a four-year degree. A CTE diploma would provide for the more specific needs of Indiana students, giving them options to more adequately prepare for the career path of their choice."

House Enrolled Act (HEA) 1213 requires the Indiana Career Council to appoint a subcommittee to review the current Core 40 diploma course offerings, make recommendations to the State Board of Education concerning changing course requirements and make recommendations concerning career and technical education (CTE) offerings.

"As Co-Chairman of the Interim Study Committee on Economic Development, I heard testimony over the summer of the advantages of CTE," said Rep. Messmer. "Students who take CTE classes are less likely to require remediation at the postsecondary level. This is a great program with proven results, and I am happy that Indiana HEA 1213 will go into effect on July 1, 2014.

Governor signs into law first state pre-K funding

At DayStar Childcare Ministry in Indianapolis last week, Governor Mike Pence signed into law Indiana's first state funding for pre-K, HEA 1004.

"When it comes to helping our Hoosier kids reach their full potential, early education can make the difference between a lifetime of success and a lifetime of trying to catch up," said Governor Pence. "Today is an historic moment in our state as we begin a new chapter of Indiana education to help young Hoosiers succeed in school, in the workforce, and in life."

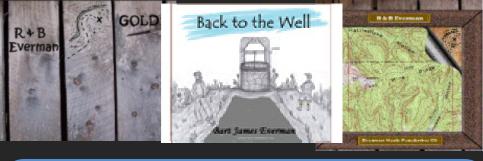

HEA 1004 provides funding for the Indiana Family and Social Services Administration to administer a five-county, voluntary Early Education Pilot Program that will help approximately 1,500 Hoosier children from low-income families attend the public or private pre-kindergarten of their choice. Prior to this legislation, Indiana was the only state in the Midwest and one of nine states in the nation not providing state funds for pre-kindergarten.

"The impact of math and science continue to transform our world every day and we want to recognize the very best math and science students in our state to honor them for their hard work," said Governor Pence.

The nominations will be reviewed by a panel of STEM experts, including teachers, college and university instructors, and staff from the Department of Education and Center for Education and Career Innovation.

Winners will be named in May, and will each receive a $2,000 academic scholarship contribution from the Indiana College-Choice 529 Direct Savings Plan, which may be added to the student's existing 529 Plan, or to initiate a new plan for the winners. The Indiana CollegeChoice 529 Direct Savings Plan is administered by the Indiana Education Savings Authority.

Donation

-Photo provided

Madelyn Gaines, daughter of Tony and Amy Holt of Shoals, recently wanted to give back to her community. Maddy, as she is known by to her friends and family, decided to donate stuffed animals to a few chosen police officers in Martin County. She chose Andy Burkhardt, of the Martin County Sheriff's Department, and Kelly Rayhill and Jason Hennette, of the Loogootee Police Department. All three officers along with Loogootee Mayor Noel Harty were very appreciative. Shown, from left to right, are Andy Burkhardt, Maddy Gaines, Noel Harty and Kelly Rayhill.

In the Garden By Ralph Purkhiser Purdue University Master Gardener

Spring has sprung. Finally, the daffodils have turned Sandhill Gardens into a sea of cheerful yellow blooms. The daffodil is a symbol of hope. After a tough winter, they give us hope of renewal.

Last week, we looked at ways that people with disabilities can enjoy a garden. This week, we will explore ways that people with disabilities can actively participate in the wonderful hobby of gardening. With some accommodations, almost anyone can be a gardener.

As we get older, most of us will develop some degree of disability. Arthritis often causes many changes in lifestyles. In the past, I have touted the use of gardening in raised beds. Perhaps the greatest advantage to raised beds is accessibility. While most of my raised vegetable beds at Sandhill Gardens are less than a foot high, they are high enough to make it possible to reach everything while seated on a gardening cart. However, higher beds may be used to bring the beds into reach for persons who cannot bend down or for gardeners in wheelchairs.

For wheelchair access, a bed needs to be about two feet off the surrounding ground. Of course, the surrounding area needs to be paved or at least solid enough and level enough for maneuvering a chair. However, this height does not necessarily mean that one needs soil two feet deep. There are commercial raised beds that resemble boxes about a foot deep sitting on tables. The tables may be any height necessary to be accessible for the person gardening there. The internet offers many examples of such beds that can be built for a fraction of the cost of the commercial models.

Specialized tools also help to make gardening easier for many people with disabilities. Such tools are called "ergonomic tools" and many styles are available. Gardening tools are very personal, and what works for one person may not for another. For that reason, I would urge anyone with a disability to purchase ergonomic tools at a local retailer where one may try out the tools. Many ergonomic tools are shaped to allow greater ease in digging or cutting. Hoes and rakes may have handles that are curved, to allow them to be used from a seated position. Pruners may ratchet to allow cutting in increments instead of having to squeeze hard enough to sever a branch with one continuous cut.

While some garden designers are rigid in keeping to design principals, I have always said that the garden should be what pleases the gardener. When it comes to gardens for people with disabilities, this is even truer. For instance, as mentioned last week, a person with a visual disability may still appreciate the textures of various plants and the scent of plants. It is also probably best that thorny plants be avoided. My point is that what one chooses to grow should be what is appropriate for a person's disabilities.

Whatever one's disability, personalizing a garden can mean continued participation in a wonderful pastime. Indoors or outside, vegetable or ornamental, the garden should reflect the gardener. Disability does not mean inability.

Purdue educator: EAB can survive harsh winter in most places

BY KEITH ROBINSON Purdue University News Service

This winter was a brutal one, for sure, but the emerald ash borer still has plenty of life left in it.

Although the Midwest experienced abnormally cold temperatures this winter, it is unlikely that populations of the highly destructive beetle were significantly affected by it, said Adam Witte, exotic forest pest educator in the Purdue University Department of Entomology.

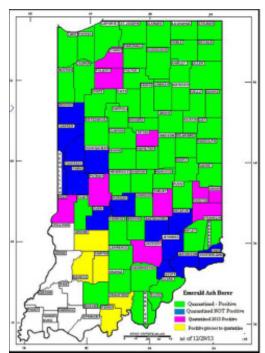

"Headlines have been circulating suggesting that EAB may have met its match," Witte said. "But the EAB, as well as most insects in colder climates, is effective at surviving cold temperatures."

EAB larvae overwintering within ash trees die when temperatures reach minus-28 degrees Fahrenheit below the bark, Witte said. U.S. Forest Service scientists predicting areas in North America where temperatures were cold enough to kill EAB larvae conclude that only parts of Minnesota and North Dakota historically have reached temperatures that low.

Witte said the EAB survives the cold partly because it produces a substance that prevents water in its cells from crystallizing and causing damage, much like antifreeze. Also, insulation provided by the tree bark helps larvae withstand cold temperatures.

Although some parts of the U.S. might have fewer EAB adults emerging in the spring as a result of the cold temperatures, Witte said they probably won't notice. Because of the EAB's high reproductive rate, it likely will be only a matter of time before populations rebound to previous levels.

Despite the cold weather, experts are advising ash tree owners to continue with EAB management plans. One effective means of saving ash trees and reducing costs is to partner with interested neighbors to hire a company to treat trees in their neighborhood. Witte said the collaborative approach likely will reduce transportation and consultation costs for the company, which could lower costs for the property owners. In Indiana, the EAB has been detected in 69 of its 92 counties. But 79 counties have quarantines against transporting firewood across county lines, with five additional counties in southwest Indiana in the process of establishing the restriction as a result of recent detection of the beetle. Fifteen counties with no detection of it have quarantines because they are surrounded by counties that have the EAB.

This map shows the presence of the emerald ash borer in Indiana and counties with quarantines that prohibit transporting firewood across county lines. Green: counties with EAB present and quarantine; blue: counties with quarantine but no presence of EAB detected; pink: counties with EAB detected in 2013 and quarantine in place; yellow: counties with EAB detected and in process of quarantine. (Indiana Department of Natural Resources Division of Entomology graphic/Philip T. Marshall)

Eight counties in southwest Indiana are the only counties in the state where both the EAB has not yet been detected and no quarantines are in place.

For more information on EAB, treatment options, and the organization Neighbors Against Bad Bugs, visit http://extension.entm.purdue.edu/eab/play out live before the public in a new DNR webcam that offers a peek into the lives of a barn owl pair raising chicks.

The webcam at wildlife.IN.gov/8183.htm is the first in Indiana to focus on barn owls, a state-endangered species with fewer than two dozen known nesting pairs in Indiana. The goal of the webcam is to promote public interest in birds and raise awareness about efforts to support the barn owl.

Barn owls have nested at the webcam location in rural southern Indiana for the past seven years. A pair has already begun roosting at the box this spring, but has yet to lay eggs. "The barn owl is an interesting and rare bird," says DNR non-game bird biologist John Castrale. "We hope people develop an appreciation for this seldom-seen species and learn more about the owls and their habits through the DNR barn owl web page."

Information on barn owls and how the pubhelp them lic can is at wildlife.IN.gov/3382.htm. Barn Owls are known for their distinctive heart-shaped face, dark eyes and white to golden-brown feathers. They were once common in the Midwest,

A show of companionship and survival will living in hollow trees and wooden barns and hunting havfields, idle grain fields, pastures and other grasslands for meadow voles. But many wooden barns are being torn down, and few modern farms offer the land a barn owl needs for hunting. DNR's Wildlife Diversity Program has been placing nest boxes for barn owls since 1984. The nest boxes, like the one the webcam owls use, give owls a safe place to raise their young. Barn owl breeding season typically begins in March and April, when a pair produces a clutch of three to 11 eggs. Usually the strongest three to four chicks will survive and leave the nest at 8 to 10 weeks old. The barn owl webcam can accommodate 20 viewers at a time.

> The barn owl is one of more than 750 animal species, including many rare and endangered animals, supported by the DNR's Wildlife Diversity Program. WDP depends on donations to the DNR Nongame Fund. You can donate by credit card on the DNR website, or you can give all or a portion of your state tax return to the fund by marking the appropriate box on your printed Indiana tax form or when you file electronically.
