Sheriff recommends buying lot next to the jail

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

Sheriff Travis Roush talked to the Martin County Council at their meeting Monday night, April 5 about purchasing the lot next to the jail. Sheriff Roush said he has been in contact with the property owner and the commissioners and has a price for the property. The commissioners are on board with purchasing the lot. The property is one third of an acre on the southeast side of the jail. Roush said the lot is half the size of the property the jail sits on. He said he feels it is an opportunity for the county in the future.

Sheriff Roush said the county could start a work release program and could also get away from the prosecutor's office paying rent in their current building.

The council members verbally expressed interest in moving forward but would not release the asking price of the property. They suggested the sheriff move forward with the purchase.

Sheriff Roush reported there are currently 82 inmates in the jail with 31 of them from Vigo County. He also told the council they are currently evaluating the deputy vehicles for potential trade in.

Council Member Randy Winger brought up an issue with maintenance on the generator at the community building. He said the council decided to eliminate the $6,000 request at last year's budget hearing to provide maintenance to the generator once a week. He said the council felt that was excessive. Since that time, they have not made a decision on who will maintain the generator and how often. Council Member Winger said the jail pays $3,200 a year to have their generator maintained twice a year by M&M Electric. He suggested someone contact M&M to get a contract together. Winger said it is important to make sure the generator is working because if there is a natural disaster in the county, the community building is the county's to use.

Auditor Abel requested another member of the council join the committee that will be interviewing candidates for a financial advisor for the county, as has been discussed since last year. Currently Council Members Barb McFeaters and Sherri Bowling have already agreed to be on the committee. Council Member Adam Greene said he is willing to join.

The council approved the following additional appropriations:

-$17,200 from the cumulative bridge/contract services fund to pay for work done to help the erosion around Brooks Bridge.

-$187,802 to pay for the first round of the 2020 Community Crossings grant work. The funds are coming from the grant, not from county funds.

-$400,000 from the Motor Vehicle Highway Restricted fund to pay the

Shoals man arrested in Spencer County

On April 3, Master Trooper Trey Lytton, Indiana State Police Jasper Post All Crimes Policing Team (ACP) member, and Deputy Zach Polster, Spencer County Sheriff Department, conducted a criminal interdiction patrol in northern Spencer County.

Deputy Polster stopped a white 1999 Pontiac passenger car in Dale, which officers had received information that the driver, Dennis Sipes II, 39, of Shoals, was a habitual traffic violator with a lifetime suspension. Master Trooper Lytton assisted Deputy Polster with the traffic stop. During the traffic stop, Deputy Polster located methamphetamine on Sipes. Master Trooper Lytton and Deputy Polster became suspicious that Sipes may be involved in drug activity at that Baymont hotel in Dale.

Deputy Polster then transported Sipes to the Spencer County Jail.

Master Trooper Lytton and Senior Trooper Patrick Stinson, ACP Team members, and Trooper Jake Lauer, went to the Baymont hotel and located Kaci M. Newport, 27, of Washington, and her juvenile daughter.

While speaking to Newport, Master Trooper Lytton determined that Newport and her juvenile daughter had been staying with Sipes at the hotel. While speaking to Newport, troopers discovered

Commissioners approve buying mower, property

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT

The Martin County Commissioners met Tuesday, April 6. Highway Superintendent Scott Seals presented a list of proposed detour routes from the state for repair work on Highway 150. Seals said there are four projects planned that will roughly take two months each. The commissioners spent a bit of time discussing the routes proposed, which included Butler Bridge and Mill Road, and were not happy with any of them. It was noted the state will provide funds for repairs to one route. The commissioners decided to table a decision.

The commissioners voted to move forward with purchasing a mower for the highway department. Interest rates from two banks are required prior to financing equipment. Commissioner George requested the highway superintendent get interest rates from German American and Old National.

Highway Superintendent Seals said they are doing a lot of ditching and culverts.

Commissioners go back to Strawn Insurance
The Martin County Commissioners held a special meeting Tuesday, March 30 to hear from potential county insurance agents. Commissioners present were Paul George, Cody Roush and Aaron Summers. Also attending were Auditor Bobbie Abel, Rex Strawn, Strawn Insurance & Real Estate; Elaine Slaubaugh, Strawn Insurance & Real Estate; and Dave Welch, German American.

Rex Strawn, of Strawn Insurance & Real Estate and Dave Welch, with German American Insurance, presented what services each can provide for Martin County.

A motion to approve Rex Strawn, Strawn Insurance & Real Estate, to be the agent of record representing Martin County was made by Commissioner Cody Roush and seconded by Commissioner Aaron Summers. Commissioner Paul George opposed however the motion passed 2-1.

With no further business, the meeting was adjourned at 6:11 p.m.

vert work on Chicken Farm Road and requested that drivers slow down and obey signs. They are having issues with drivers not paying attention.

Commissioner Paul George asked County Attorney Dave Lett what was required to move forward with purchasing property next to the jail. Lett said that two appraisals are required, and the amount paid cannot exceed the average of both appraisals. He said he would get the process started. No purchase price was given.

Auditor Bobbie Abel asked the commissioners what they wanted to do about the maintenance on the generator at the community building on the fairgrounds, as was addressed at the county council meeting the night before. Commissioner Cody Roush said that he thought it was decided to have the highway department mechanic check the generator once a month. Commissioner George said he forgot they had discussed that. He asked that Auditor Abel call the highway superintendent and remind him that this was their decision.

Auditor Abel reminded the commissioners that a plan had to be developed for the $1.9 million in funds coming in from the American Recovery Act. She provided plans from other counties for reference. The commissioners said they would probably copy one of those plans. Auditor Abel said it can be amended if need be. Economic Development Director Angie Risacher said she would be happy to be the point of contact for the funds as it pertains to groups and organizations around the county.

Barb Hager, from the audience, requested the commissioners follow through with Council Member Adam Greene's request at last night's county council meeting to get an itemized bill,

Making A Difference

-- WANT TO HELP? --
So maybe you have been thinking about how you can help your community? How you can do your part, no matter how big or how small? You've probably heard that giving of your time, your talent, and your treasure are ways that you can do just that. The amount of each that you give is purely dependent upon you as an individual, unique in your own way.

If giving of your treasure, no matter how big or how small, is something that you want to pursue, the MCCF has some great giving options. Last week I explained endowments. We can help you help others with several types of these endowment funds. Choose the one that's right for you.

-- UNRESTRICTED FUNDS --
The first type of endowment funds are the unrestricted funds. These are perhaps the most impactful of the types of funds. You can use your gift to meet ever-changing community needs, including future needs that often cannot be anticipated at the time your gift is made. We evaluate all aspects of community well-being, such as education, health and human services, civic and historical affairs, the arts and culture, recreational activities, and more. The flexibility of your unrestricted gift enables our local board and staff to respond to the community's most pressing needs, today and tomorrow. The MCCF Impact Grant Cycle is when community organizations can present their current needs to the MCCF.

-- FIELD OF INTEREST FUNDS --
You can also target your gift to address needs in an important area of community life, such as the arts, economic development, or at-risk youth. You identify your personal interest area when making your gift; our board awards grants to community agencies and programs that are making a difference in the area you select.

-- DESIGNATED FUNDS --
With designated funds, you can direct your gift to a specific agency or purpose. You can provide ongoing funding for a youth organization, a church, a social service agency, or an arts group. Virtually any nonprofit charitable organization may be supported by such a fund. You identify the recipient you wish to benefit through your gift; our staff manages the annual distribution of the funds.

-- DONOR ADVISED FUNDS --
If you want ongoing involvement in the use of your gift, a donor advised fund is for you. You work with our professional grant-making staff, identifying ways to use dollars from your fund to address the issues and needs you care about most. Your recommendations are submitted to the Board of Directors for approval; we then distribute the grant dollars.

-- SCHOLARSHIP FUNDS --
And lastly, but certainly not the least, the scholarship funds enable you to designate your gift to benefit students seeking opportunities to better themselves through education. You may define guidelines for candidacy, the advisory committee, the school, and/or the award itself. We ensure that scholarships are awarded accordingly.

-- ESTABLISH A FUND --
Any of these funds can be established in your name, or in the name of your family, your organization, or anyone you wish to honor. There are minimum amounts for funds, whether for a specific "named fund" of a person(s) or for a more generic fund title. All grants distributed from your fund, today and in the future, are then awarded to charities and/or the purpose identified with the fund. It's a great way to always be involved with, and be remembered, for your community investment, no matter how big or how small.

-- GIVE TO A FUND --
You can also give to any of the already established funds managed by the MCCF. There are a wide variety of organizations, fields of interest, scholarships, and, of course, the very flexible unrestricted funds. Any amount can be donated to funds that already exist. Your gift can be what is just right for you. And these gifts can also be made in memory or honor of a loved one.

-- MORE INFORMATION --
For more information about giving to available funds or how to establish a fund, please contact the MCCF Director, Curt Johnson, at 812-295-1022 or mccf@cfpartner.org.

-$55,000 to cover legal fees associated with a personnel issue with the community corrections department. No invoices have been received to date however Auditor Bobbie Abel said the amount requested is an estimate of accumulated fees. Council Member Randy Winger said he thought the county would have received a bill by now. Council Member Adam Greene asked if a bill could be requested for work done so far. Auditor Abel replied that this would be something the commissioners would have to negotiate with the lawyer. Abel noted that the amount requested in the additional appropriation is just an estimate, the fees could be more or less than the $55,000. "I don't think we have any choice, we have to pay it," said Council Member Sherri Bowling. She added that she would like to see a breakdown of charges once it is received. Auditor Abel said she would present it when it is received.

Auditor Abel said she would email the lawyer tomorrow with the request.

Southern Indiana diabetes education service merits ADA recognition

The American Diabetes Association Education Recognition Certificate for a quality diabetes self-management education and support (DSMES) service was recently awarded to the Southern Indiana service on March 9, 2021: Walker Wellness & Diabetes Education, LLC. ADA believes that this service offers high-quality education that is an essential component of effective diabetes treatment.

The Association's Education Recognition Certificate assures that educational services meet the National Standards for Diabetes Self-Management Education and Support. The DSMES Standards were developed and tested under the auspices of the National Diabetes Advisory Board in 1983 and were revised by the diabetes community in 1994, 2000, 2007, 2012, and 2017.

DSMES services apply for recognition voluntarily. Services that achieve recognition status have a staff of knowledgeable health professionals who can provide participants with comprehensive information about diabetes management. "The process gives professionals national standards by which to measure the quality of services they provide," comments Emily Walker, RN, CDCES/ Owner/Quality Coordinator. "And, of course, it assures the consumer that he or she will likely receive high-quality service." Education Recognition status is verified by an official certificate from ADA and awarded for four years.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) 2017 National Diabetes Statistic Report there are 30.3 million people or 9.4 percent of the population in the United States who have diabetes. While an estimated 23.1 million have been diagnosed, unfortunately, 7.2 million people are not aware that they have this disease. Each day more than 3,900 people are diagnosed with diabetes. Many will first learn that they have diabetes when they are treated for one of its life-threatening complications – heart disease, stroke, kidney disease, blindness, nerve disease, and amputation. About 1.5 million new cases of diabetes were diagnosed in people aged 18 years or older in 2015. Diabetes continues to be the seventh leading cause of death in the US in 2015 as it contributed to 252,806 deaths.

The American Diabetes Association is the nation's leading non-profit health organization supporting diabetes research, advocacy and information for health professionals, people with diabetes and the public. Founded in 1940, the Association continues to support people affected by diabetes nationwide.

Grazing Bites

By Victor Shelton
NRCS State Agronomist/Grazing Specialist

Yes, it's getting to be that time of year — new spring green growth! The cows start complaining about eating hay and bellowing when they hear my voice or even just see me. It's not that the hay is any less delectable, it's just not what they know is available across the fence. It's about like a kid walking by a candy store; the focus is on the treat.

I've listened to several pretty intense arguments over the years on the topic of when to start grazing in the spring. Some spoiled cows are never denied their micro-greens and sadly, the pastures usually show it. I've heard some say, "the cows know best." They do have excellent biological feedback from their stomachs that tells them there is usually more energy and protein in that lush new forage. This is even more true with small ruminants such as sheep and goats who can and will sometimes select specific plant parts because of differences in energy or nutrients that are needed at the time. Perhaps this is the ruminant animals "gut" instinct.

Unfortunately, just like eating too much candy from the candy store, ruminants eating too much lush green cotton candy growth early in the year can have its consequences. If you don't believe me, let them graze that short new growth for two or three days and then run them through the cattle chute to work them. You won't want to be the person tailing them in the chute. Like I've said before, don't stand too close behind those cows! One cough or skuttle from the cow in front of you and you might be covered.

What the cows try to initially ignore is the same thing your doctor may tell you: you need fiber. If that particular pasture was grazed down tight last fall and little or no residual was left behind, there is little or no fiber present. This young lush forage is rapidly fermentable in the rumen and may not meet two critical forage roles: maintaining the rumen forage mat and stimulating cud chewing. The rumen/fiber mat is essentially a mass of long-fiber plant matter that slows down and buffers the rumination and digestive processes of any other feeds that are consumed. It keeps the microbe balance, pH and digestive speed of the rumen stable throughout the day.

I can hear my wife saying, "cut to the chase." Okay, it is somewhat situational. Ideally, continue feeding hay until the forages have grown more and start containing more lignin. Lignin is a major component of the plant cell wall and give plants structure. Those fields grazed short last fall will lack sufficient fiber to go with all the washy high-water, high-protein forage that will come on with first growth. All ruminant livestock need to balance the carbon-nitrogen ratio in their rumen to maintain that mat. If they don't, then they will not perform the way you want them to and have less gain and milk production. The plants just go through their system faster than they can effectively utilize it.

If stop grazing heights were maintained with the last grazing prior to winter, then that dry forage left behind can help to balance out the lush forage. At a minimum, everyone should leave at least one field, ideally the one they plan to use first in the spring, with a fair amount of residual over winter and, in this case, more is better (four to six inches). That field can also provide a great alternative for calving over a muddy lot.

If you watch the cows after early turnout, they will graze exclusively on the lush new forage for two to three days and if sufficient fiber is not present, they will quickly start hitting fence rows and eating about any dry material they can find and will actually eat straw too if available, something they would normally rarely do.

Another alternative is to feed some hay along with the new growth. The cows will then eat enough dry hay to help balance out the fiber needs to maintain that rumen mat. This is certainly better for the cow, but not particularly ideal for the forage. Grazing too early can be costly by reducing total forage production for the entire grazing season. Grazing too early in the spring does nothing but remove the solar panel the plants need to start building sugars and growing new roots. The forages really need to be able to fully leaf out or canopy and get a good start before animals start removing that new growth, otherwise production will be reduced. Forages should be at least eight to ten inches tall, ideally more. If the cows-to-pasture acres ratio is low, then starting to graze a bit early might help to keep growth under control later, but in most cases, the cows-to-pasture acres is higher than it should be and therefore, detrimental to overall production.

If I have plenty of hay, then I'd continue feeding hay. Strategically, saving the better hay for early spring and feeding less quality hay earlier is usually a good thing and that usually is also true nutritional-wise for spring calving cows too.

That biological feedback mentioned earlier doesn't always work quick enough when it come to poisonous weeds — for some, it doesn't take very much. I am already seeing a fair amount of poison hemlock in some fields and especially along roadsides and low areas. Poison hemlock looks a lot like cow or wild parsnips but has purplish colored streaks and spots on the smooth stem. This plant is poison to both livestock and humans. It is a true biennial so it will set seed the second year — so kill it the first year! It is a prolific seed producer. Do not handle with bare hands. According to Purdue's toxic plant website, poison hemlock has toxic components that include the volatile alkaloids coniine and gamma-coniine. A lethal dose for a horse is four to five pounds of leaves. Cattle may be poisoned with one to two pounds, and sheep with a half-pound or less. Humans are often poisoned, mistaking the roots for parsnips, the leaves for parsley or the seeds for anise.

Poisoned animals show signs within two hours of eating the plant, and tend to become nervous, will tremble and become uncoordinated. After the excitement phase, the animal becomes depressed. The heart and respiratory rates slow down, the legs, ears and other extremities become cold, colic and/or bloating may occur. Even at this stage, the animal may not die, but may remain like this for several hours to days, and then recover. In lethal cases, the animals tend to die within five to 10 hours after the onset of the clinical signs, typically from respiratory failure (in which case the mucus membranes will appear blue). A mousy odor has been reported to emanate from affected animals. Contact your local extension office for more information on this plant or control methods.

I'll end today with a reminder on magnesium. It is a good idea to move to a high magnesium type mineral supplement (usually 10-20 percent instead of 1 or 2 percent) and continue with it until we are past the early flush of new forage. The issue with insufficient magnesium is more of a problem where nitrogen and/or potassium has been recently applied or in excessive amounts. For more detailed information about grass tetany, contact your local extension service or large animal veterinarian.

Management of spring regrowth will impact overall production. The cows or sheep are the tools to help manage the forage! Remember, it's not about maximizing a grazing event, but maximizing a grazing season! Keep on grazing!

In the Garden

By Ralph Purkhiser,
Purdue University Master Gardener

I am happy to report that most of Sandhill Gardens survived last week's freeze. I used some old blankets and burlap sacks to protect some tender plants and it seems to have worked. There was some frost and freeze damage, but nothing that will kill any plants.

I have had several questions about what to do about damage on plants. The first step is to determine if it is frost damage or freeze damage. Frost occurs when moisture freezes on the surface of plants. Since cold air flows into low places in the landscape, it is possible to have frost damage in those low spots even if the air temperature does not fall below 32 degrees. Also, since frost occurs only on nights with little or no wind, it is possible for temperatures to fall below freezing and still not produce frost. Generally, frost damage is surface damage. The affected area will usually turn brown or black and will become brittle. Frost damage rarely kills a plant, unless it is a tropical plant or a tender annual. However, frost may mean that a plant will not have its normal flowers. If fruiting plants suffer frost damage on the blooms, fruit will fail to develop. Once frost damage has occurred, there really is very little that one can do. In most cases, that brittle material will eventually drop off and the plant will produce new leaves. Some plants may even produce new flowers, but most will simply skip flowering for the year.

Freeze damage occurs when temperatures fall into the mid-twenties, causing the water in the plant cells to freeze and expand. That causes the cell walls to burst, killing that tissue. That does not necessarily mean the whole plant will die.

Freeze damage usually occurs in tender new growth, and just the outer areas may be affected. Freeze-damaged plant material usually becomes limp and will quickly rot.

Do not be in a hurry to trim frost or freeze damage. Pruning plants stimulates new growth and that tender growth is more susceptible to damage if another frost or freeze occurs. In southern Indiana, we are not considered safe from frost until after May 10. Until then, allow the plant to compartmentalize the damage and seal off the affected areas. Should there be damaged areas that could become a hazard or if it is just so unattractive that you cannot bear to see it, go ahead and prune it out. Just as with any other pruning, cut back to a leaf node in healthy tissue. It is from the nodes that new growth will emerge. If the mercury drops again, be prepared to give the plant some extra protection.

In the meantime, better weather has returned to the Hoosier Hills. Many of our tough plants shrugged off the cold nights and continued developing. It does not appear that the lilacs were our far enough to sustain damage from the cold and buds are now swelling, promising a banner year for lilac blooms. The Korean spice viburnum is beginning to perfume the garden. The flowering quinces have burst into bloom and show no signs of damage. Every day, I walk through the garden and see new plants breaking through the soil. Seedlings in the greenhouse seem to double in size each day. Although weather is unpredictable in Indiana, it looks like we will truly have a spring season this year and the flower display is turning out to be a superb show. Get out there and enjoy it.

Local groups spread word about common invasive landscaping plants

This week area residents might notice billboards going up featuring the popular landscaping plants Burning Bush and Callery Pear. Burning Bush, also called Winged Burning Bush or Euonymus alatus has been a go-to landscaping shrub for years, selected for its brilliant fall foliage. Callery Pear, also called Bradford Pear or Pyrus calleryana, is a spring favorite of many homeowners for its showy white flowers. However, while attractive both plants are considered invasive species in Indiana, joining the ranks of more well-known invasives like Honeysuckle, Autumn Olive, and Multiflora Rose.

Burning Bush was introduced to the US from Asia in the 1860s, but since the 1970s has been documented spreading from cultivation to invade woodlands, prairies, and other natural areas. Likewise, when the Bradford Pear cultivar was first promoted in the 1960s, it was thought to be ideal, and was initially sterile. However, since then additional cultivars such as Capital, Cleveland Select, and Aristocrat have been planted. These cultivars have allowed cross pollination, abundant seed production, and an army of invasive trees spreading from our landscaping.

Birds easily spread the seeds of both plants from yards to nearby forests and natural areas. There wild Burning Bush shrubs grow into large and dense thickets, spreading via root suckers and new seedlings, eventually outcompeting native plants for space and light. Able to survive even in heavily shaded woodlands, overtime Burning Bush can degrade wildlife habitat as it replaces native tree, shrub, and understory species. Wild Callery Pear populations are just as bad, overtaking open pastures, roadsides, fence rows, and forests. A simple spring drive around Jasper or any interstate highway reveals dense patches of this flowering tree in areas that were open just 10 years ago.

That is why this spring local Soil & Water Conservation Districts (SWCDs) and invasive species groups are working to raise awareness through five area billboards. They also encourage homeowners to replace their invasive landscaping with native alternatives, such as Ninebark, Chokeberry, Redbud, and Serviceberry.

Removing and controlling these invasives in landscapes and woods will help to limit their spread and support healthy forests. Small individual plants can be pulled out but may re-root from stems or roots if left lying on the ground. Cutting plants will result in resprouts from the stump unless herbicide is also applied. For more information on Burning Bush and Callery Pear, including handouts with information on controlling them, visit www.isacdc.org.

Landowners struggling with invasive plants in Daviess, Dubois, and Martin counties can also find help through the SWCD's Invasive Species Specialist, Emily Finch. For more information, contact Finch at Emily.Finch@in.nacdn.net or 812-482-1171 ext.3.
