New Vision ~ New Direction

ROGER DOWNEY is a candidate for Mayor of Loogootee and would be most appreciative of your vote in the upcoming May election. Roger currently serves as a Loogootee City Councilman, as well as being the President this year. Roge was a Director of Operations for various restaurants in a multi-state area and has a broad background in Management including developing and executing budgets and project planning. His background and experience has enabled him to develop solid leadership and management skills. Roger knows what it means to be a Team Player and understands that even if everyone doesn't agree on the same thing, you still respect each other and work together as a team to do your best at getting the job done and done right. Roger never meets a stranger and is always available to lend a helping hand. Roger has reached out to and has served his community well and has a vision for the city. Here are a few of his ideas:

-As a city the size of Loogootee with a tax base the size of Loogootee's, we must afford ourselves the opportunity to receive all grants available to us. To that end, Roger will coordinate with AIM (Accelerating Indiana Municipalities) and local business Midwestern Engineers to make sure that we, as a community, are indeed applying for and giving ourselves the best probability of receiving all grants that are available to us. It is his firm belief that the city leadership needs to start giving back to the citizenry in the way of improved infrastructure, but not limited to, storm water drainage, streets, and water lines.

-Another item that needs addressed is the state of some of the properties in our city. There are ordinances already on the books to address these issues. The enforcement bodies simply need the leadership and support of the Mayor's office to enforce these ordinances.

-The city owns property that is currently not being utilized. There are many things that we could use these properties for. Roger loves hearing the ideas on how best to utilize those properties. One idea that he is especially drawn to is for the construction of a dog park.

-Roger will also work diligently with any interested parties that are willing to invest in the City of Loogootee to assist with our economic development. He feels these issues relate to quality of life whether it be improving our infrastructure or adding amenities or beautifying our city which makes day to day life better for the citizens of Loogootee but also makes it more appealing to outside investors.

Roger will have the city's elected officials serve on the Board of Works rather then having the Board of Works be a position appointed by the Mayor.

Roger is proud of his hometown and both he, and his wife Carolyn, epitomize what it means to "give back". Roger has spent numerous hours volunteering his time to many heartfelt causes. MARTIN COUNTY JOURNAL Wednesday, May 1, 2019 Page 8

By Ralph Purkhiser Purdue University Master Gardener

Caveat Emptor. (Let the buyer beware.) Nowhere is that more relevant than in the garden center. It is important to know what you are buying, and many garden centers are not very forthcoming with the proper information, especially the garden centers of big chain stores.

This is not a case of intentional deception, but generally is the result of ignorance. In most cases, the workers in the garden centers of such stores are not horticulturalists. They have received some training from the company, but that training falls far short of being able to offer expert advice. The plants are also usually placed according to marketing plans that come down from company headquarters, where making sales is the prime ob-

One of my garden plans for this season is to increase the collection of azaleas and rhododendrons along the path to the cave here at Sandhill Gardens. Recently, as I visited a popular retail store, I saw several varieties of azaleas at a low price in a display in the parking lot. I decided to buy two plants and picked out two different colors. When I got home and prepared to plant them, I noticed that one of the plants was labeled as hardy to zone 6. The other said it was hardy in zones

The latest U.S. Department of Agriculture zone maps place most of southern Indiana in zone 6. This is a change from the maps used for many years, when we were in zone 5. Indeed, we have had some winters when temperatures never fell below zero degrees, but I have found that we still occasionally get that extreme cold. Therefore, I still think of zone 5 hardiness for my garden selections. I find that zone 6 plants survive in protected locations and large rocks will absorb enough heat to provide additional protection. I have even grown a few plants for a couple of years that were hardy to zone 7 by growing them on the south side of the house, close to the concrete foundation and providing extra protection by covering them with leaves as winter sets in.

I will go ahead and plant the zone 6 azalea in a place with some protection. The other one, I plan to keep in a pot that can be brought inside during the winter. I think I will start training it for a bonsai specimen. Azaleas are often used for bonsai. Since, they were cheap, I do not feel too bad about this purchase. However, the same store had larger azaleas with much higher prices and I fear many of my readers will be taken in by the display and purchase them, as I did, without checking the hardiness rating.

There are other plants that have varieties that are hardy here and other varieties that are not. The same store had some potted cyclamens that say they are hardy to 20 degrees. Most winters, we have at least a few days when temperatures fall below that mark. Another plant that often is displayed in the perennial section is red fountain grass. I know several people who have purchased this beautiful grass, thinking they would have it forever. However, that particular grass is only hardy to about zone 8, so it is not likely to survive an Indiana winter.

My point is that we need to check the plant labels before we buy. I do not believe that the people who work in the local stores mean to deceive us. They are just displaying the plants as a company plan dictate. Many of those garden center workers simply do not know which plants will actually survive our Indiana winters. Several of the plants that are displayed as annuals are actually tender perennials. Impatiens, geraniums and several other popular bedding plants are actually perennial in frost-free climates. I would hope that the retailers would post signs alerting potential buyers of plants that need warmer climates. Buyers should know that these plants must either be treated as annuals and discarded after one season or that they will need to be brought inside for the winter. In the meantime, I urge you to read the plant tags.

AG defends DNR's right to hold controlled deer hunts at state parks

In a legal victory for Attorney General Curtis Hill and the Indiana Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the Indiana Court of Appeals last Tuesday affirmed DNR's authority to hold controlled deer hunts at state parks.

DNR has held controlled deer hunts at parks and other public lands for years to manage overpopulated deer herds, which become susceptible to disease and starvation.

Overpopulated deer herds also may affect other species by upsetting a region's ecological balance.

Emergency rule-making provisions enable DNR to act quickly in specific circumstances to address such fluctuating factors.

In 2017, a public interest organization called the Center for Wildlife Ethics Inc. went to court to challenge DNR's authority to hold such hunts. Among other things, the organization claimed in its lawsuit that DNR violated state law by temporarily closing parks to most visitors during the controlled hunts.

"Indiana law gives DNR the authority to control admission to its state properties and to conduct appropriate management of wildlife resources both within and outside the boundaries of public lands," Attorney General Hill said. "I am pleased the court has rightly recognized DNR's prerogatives in this regard."

DNR Director Cameron Clark described the court decision as a victory for DNR's ability to effectively mitigate the adverse effects of deer overpopulation.

"We are pleased the Court of Appeals upheld the trial court ruling and years of rule-making by the DNR," Director

MARTIN COUNTY JOURNAL

Mayoral candidates answer questions about city issues

ROGER DOWNEY and NOEL D. HARTY

Martin County Journal: Tell us about yourself (Education, family, experience, etc.)

Roger Downey: I have been married to Carolyn Parsons-Downey for over 38 years. We have three children and 8 grandchildren. My parents were Bill Downey Jr. and Barbara "Jo" Taber Downey. My wife and I both graduated from LHS in 1979. After working as assistant manager the last two years of high school at the Lakeview restaurant, I studied Hotel and Restaurant Management for one year at Vincennes University. I then worked 20 years for BR Associates holding various positions from Director of Operations to District Manager to Manager. Some things I was responsible for were profit & loss accountability, all personnel matters, opening new restaurants, budgeting and overall operations. I have continued my career in the foodservice industry with sales representative positions with US Foods and have currently been with Wabash Foodservice for over six years. Outside of the foodservice industry I spent six years working for the USPS in various positions. My wife and I owned and operated the skating rink in Jasper for 7 years.

Noel Harty: 1997 graduate of Shoals High School, 1997 North Lawrence Career Center Business and Office Occupations completion, 1997 graduate of Missouri Auctioneers School, 1998 Real Estate Certification Program completion, 1999 ServSafe Food Safety Program completion, 2002-03 attended Vincennes University Jasper Campus Business Management, attended IUPUI Mayor's Institute - Silver Level completion. My parents are the late Georgy Harty and Kenny and Dee Sanders of Shoals. My wife, Amber, and I have two children, 15-year-old Madalyn Mc-Bride and 13-year-old Eli McBride.

Martin County Journal: Do you see the mayor's job as a part-time job or full-time job, and do you plan to have any other jobs outside of being mayor?

Roger Downey: I feel the Mayor's position is a full-time job as you are always on call 24 hours a day 7 days a week. And I will always be available via phone calls, text, Facebook, or email. And there are many responsibilities the mayor has that needs to be accomplished from City Hall. To that end I will be at the office at City Hall for periods of time daily to handle those matters and to speak with residents that enjoy a more personal relationship. I will also continue to work for Wabash Foodservice, but fortunately the inherent flexibility afforded me in this position will allow me to perform my Mayoral duties when needs be. You may contact me at 812-639-8106 / rsdbench@hotmail.com / Facebook Roger

Noel Harty: In the seven-plus I have been privileged to serve as Loogootee's Mayor, I have done so on a fulltime basis. The mayor position is not a strictly 9-5 Monday-Friday job. The mayor must be available and reachable after 5 p.m. daily and throughout the weekend, which I am. In the evenings and weekends, I attended related board meetings (Loogootee School Board, Martin County Alliance for Economic Growth, Solid Waste, Loogootee Park Board, etc.) or community functions such as benefits, auctions, funerals, various school sports events, plays or other school functions, meetings with local business owners, and planning meetings for our city events, including Summerfest, Fall Festival, Thanksgiving Dinner, and Christmas Parade, etc. My door is always open during regular business hours and for those residents who work during those hours, I appreciate being approached with concerns or ideas at various events during the evenings or weekends or by email or a phone call. I also work two part-time jobs (real estate and driving a school bus) and am very fortunate that I can arrange my schedule in advance to accommodate all three jobs. I am proud to be mayor of Loogootee and wherever I go outside our city (either in an official capacity or even on vacation), I go with conscious thought that I am representing and promoting the City of Loogootee.

Martin County Journal: What is it about the City of Loogootee that makes you want to be mayor?

Roger Downey: My family moved back to Loogootee when I was in the 4th grade. My parents divorced a few years later, leaving my mother to raise my three siblings and I. Thankfully I had some great mentors in Loogootee, after starting to work at an early age. My first job was with the Youth Center in Loogootee. Joe and Lynn Gee and Carolyn Blackwell were very instrumental in teaching me honesty, excellent work ethic, being responsible, punctual and dependable and to have respect for others. I also want to mention some teachers at LHS that were very patient, understanding, had belief in me and showed me kindness during high school. Those teachers were Ann Ackerman, Steve Poehlein and Randy Mills. I also value the lessons learned during my time as assistant manager of the Lakeview restaurant when West Boggs first opened up under the leadership of manager Turk Carrico. These life experiences during my formative years helped to mold me into the husband, parent, grandparent and civil servant I am today. I aspire to pay that forward by mentoring the young people of Loogootee thru the office of Mayor. So, it is the people of Loogootee that make me want to be Mayor. Those people who taught me and the generations to come.

Noel Harty: Martin County has always been my home. I spent the first half of my life living in Shoals and the second half living in Loogootee. I have also been able to travel to all 50 states and to Europe three times. Every time I arrive home, I have always said the same thing: It is always nice to have the opportunity to visit other places but there truly is no place like Home. Loogootee is a special place filled with special people. Everyone who lives here wants to see our community succeed, though some may have different views on how that success may be created. We all want Loogootee to continue to be a safe, clean, and vibrant place for everyone to enjoy for years to come. Why do I want to be the Mayor of Loogootee? The people who live here!

Martin County Journal: How do vou feel businesses are doing in Loogootee? Is there anything you could do, as mayor, to help with economic development for existing business and attracting new businesses in the city?

Roger Downey: Like anywhere, there are businesses that are thriving and businesses that are struggling. One issue that I repeatedly hear that of a diminishing workforce. I feel that we need to improve the workforce availability for all local businesses. I will form a committee of local business owners and community leaders, and the Chamber of Commerce to meet quarterly to discuss ways to help local businesses fill their staffing needs, increase customer counts and profits. Tim Kinder who represents the Martin County Alliance for Economic Growth is also a valuable resource to bring economic development to Loogootee. As Mayor I will work closely with Tim and the committee to benefit the local economy. My years of experience in leadership in the customer service industry has prepared me to help the community in this area. We can also utilize the Zoning ordinance to entice larger businesses with larger workforces to our community.

Noel Harty: In general, I believe our community businesses are doing well. We are fortunate to have many good places to dine, grocery stores and pharmacies, gas stations, access to local repair specialists and construction, and specialty shops, etc. I do think small retail businesses – not just here but everywhere - have an especially hard time competing with franchise stores for various reasons; and now with Amazon and the internet, it's even harder for small retail businesses to make a profit and stay in business. As mayor and also on a personal level, I strongly promote buying locally whenever possible to give back to our community. Likewise, when the city needs to purchase items or contract for a specific job, we always look to make that purchase or award the contract to a local business first if we possibly can. Over the last several years, I have served on the Executive Committee for the Martin County Alliance for Economic Growth and as President of the Martin County Chamber of Commerce. During my time in working with both of these organizations, we have made great strides in identifying our community strengths such as our friendly residents, schools, parks and natural resources, and employers such as Loughmiller Machine, Midwestern Engineers, Crane and Gypsum, etc. Identifying our strengths has allowed us to begin marketing our community both to those looking for a place to live, start a small business, or both.

Martin County Journal: Stormwater issues have been a huge problem for the city for a long time. What do you plan to do to fix this? And do you have a timeframe?

Roger Downey: As a City the size of Loogootee with a tax base the size of Loogootee's, we must afford ourselves the opportunity to receive all grants available to us. To that end I will coordinate with AIM (Accelerating Indiana Municipalities) and local business Midwestern Engineers to make sure that we, as a community, are indeed applying for and giving ourselves the best probability of receiving all grants that are available to us. We have been working with Midwestern Engineers on a detailed plan as to where to begin this process. I will continue to work closely with this homegrown resource as well as the good people at AIM. In regard to a time frame... immediately. The process of applying for every available grant will begin immediately. Actual infrastructure improvements will begin as soon as the application process yields results. Because it is my firm belief that the City leadership needs to start giving back to the citizenry in the way of improved infrastructure including, but not limited to, storm water drainage. The city does have limited funds available to address these issues without grants, but I feel we should explore all grant opportunities before committing our resources. Due to the fact that sometimes matching funds are needed when applying for grants.

Noel Harty: The storm water issues the city continues to face are definitely not a new situation. The fix is an ongoing process. First, we formed a storm water utility three years ago. As part of this formation, the city implemented a $6 storm water fee, which was necessary for us to gain more essential points to help us succeed when applying for a storm water grant. Applying and receiving a grant is a very competitive process. To be successful, we need to stand out above the many other applicants. The storm fee has given us an important edge toward this goal. Unfortunately, most grants specifically for storm water utilities require an income survey of the residents to determine the average income falls below a certain threshold. I say "unfortunately" as when the survey was completed in Loogootee, the average income of our residents prevented us from qualifying for most storm water grants. We have had to look to other resources for financial assistance. One possible resource we have found is through Community Crossings, which does not require an income survey. We have been preparing to apply for a grant through Community Crossings in July. If successful, I would recommend the city use part of the funds obtained by the user fee to complete smaller projects while using the funds through Community Crossings for the larger project.

Martin County Journal: What plans/ideas do you have for the City

MAYOR

Roger Downey: Most importantly, it's my belief we should focus on the decaying infrastructure, including but not limited to the condition of some of our streets, some water lines that need to be replaced and the storm water system. I know that there are some homes and neighborhoods whose yards flood entirely too often. Another thing that needs to be addressed is the state of some of the properties in our city. Some are dilapidated, abandoned, overgrown or covered in trash. There are ordinances already on the books to address these issues. The enforcement bodies simply need the leadership and the support of the Mayor's office to enforce these ordinances. Additionally, the city owns property that is currently not being utilized. There are many things that we could use this property for. I love hearing the ideas on how to best utilize those properties. One idea that I especially drawn to is for the construction of a dog park. I would like to have an exploratory committee look into the feasibility of constructing a dog park on land that is already owned by the city. Also, we will work diligently with any interested parties that are willing to invest in the City of Loogootee to assist with our economic development. I feel like these issues relate to quality of life whether it be improving our infrastructure or adding amenities or beautifying our city which not only makes day to day life better for the citizens of Loogootee but also makes it more appealing to outside investment.

Noel Harty: I have found that throughout my time as mayor as I attended ongoing trainings and workshops, "quality of life" is one of the main reasons influencing people to decide where they want to live. I personally think when looking towards the future of our community, a trail project would be beneficial to our current residents as well as being an attractive plus to those who may be considering moving to Loogootee. In fact, over the past year, a group of residents and local professionals have met to discuss this very subject. Without any doubt, I belie a trail would be well used; but as with most any project, it will not be a lowcost venture. Fortunately, there are a lot of funding mechanisms recently created by the Governor's office, among others, to encourage such community projects. I think if those already working on this specific project and new faces come to the table, we could do it in phases. Currently, the city is working on its facilities (such as the public pool and park) and making improvements for the enjoyment of all for the years to come.

Martin County Journal: What do you believe is the most pressing issue facing the city right now?

Roger Downey: Infrastructure. The most pressing issue currently is our infrastructure. We also need to continue to pay down the almost $4 million we owe for the West Boggs Sewer purchase, sewage works ban of 2015, EDIT bond for the pool, and refunding the revenue bond from 2012.

Noel Harty: I believe the most pressing issue we face right now is the storm water infrastructure problem. As I said above, we have been working on storm water issues and the implementation of the storm water fee has put us in a good position to obtain the critical funding assistance. A large storm water repair project would cost at least one million dollars. The cost to correct all of our storm water issues is estimated roughly at between four and five million. Obviously, we cannot afford to bear either expense without funding assistance. We are focused on obtaining funding through the Community Crossings grant and we will continue to explore other options in case we need them.

Martin County Journal: Is there anything else you would like to get across to the voters?

Roger Downey: I would also like to have the cities elected officials serve on the Board of Works rather than having the Board of Works be an appointed position as appointed by the Mayor. The citizens of Loogootee may have witnessed my wife and I being blessed to be able to give back to our community. We feel truly fortunate to be able to volunteer our time to various organizations. I appreciate the outpouring of support for a New Vision and a New Direction. And I personally appreciate all the kind words. Vote Downey for Mayor.

Noel Harty: We are all in this together! We all love our community and want to continue to make it a place where our children and their children will want to reside! Over the past several administrations, great things have happened in our city; but everything does take time because of the cost involved with various projects. My staff and I am committed to continuing our mission of serving our community better each new day. Thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve these past seven-plus years. It has been a great honor and a privilege!

Loogootee City Council District 2 candidates

TIM "BIGGIN" LAWRENCE AND

RUTH SMITH

Martin County Journal: Tell us about yourself (Education, family, experience, etc.)

Tim Lawrence: I am Tim Lawrence, 55 years old. I have spent 25 years in labor union, been in the restaurant business for seven years. I have five kids and a fiancée. I am a member of the Masonic Lodge, the VFW and the Birdseye Christian Church. I love to fish and be outdoors.

Ruth Smith: I am the current council member for district 2. I have two sons, Jason (Tina) Smith and Aaron (Brenda) Smith. I have been blessed with 7 grandchildren. I call them my Rainbows because they are every size shape and hair color. My education is basic. I graduated from high school. A short trip to college but never finished. I served on the Martin County Community Corrections Board for many years and was President for 2 years. I resigned from that board to dedicate more of my time to being in City Council. I always was very active in helping build our new pool. Along with the late Charlotte Meyer, I was on the Martin County Election Board and President there for 2 years as well. I left that board to run for council. I currently service in the appeals board on zoning for the City as well as on the quality control board that monitors the City. And finally, the girl Friday at the Martin County Courthouse filling in wherever need. I'm a member of St John Catholic

Church

Martin County Journal: What is it about the City of Loogootee that makes you want to be a council member?

Tim Lawrence: Loogootee has a lot of things that can be done for it and the people. I think it's a great place to be and raise a family – something I want to be a part of.

Ruth Smith: I ran for Council because I felt I could make a difference. I'm hoping to continue to do so.

Martin County Journal: Are you happy with the way the city's finances are being spent? If so, explain. If not, what would you like to see done differently?

Tim Lawrence: I think we need to work on our debt – the numbers are growing.

Ruth Smith: On spending that is always a challenge. Our budget gets tighter every year. To improve you have to spend so you learn to be flexible and very creative. We are not flush in money but with the help of grants etc. we have been able to achieve some of our goals. And will continue to in the future.

Martin County Journal: How do you feel businesses are doing in Loogootee? Is there anything you could do, as a council member, to help with economic development for existing business and attracting new businesses to the city?

Tim Lawrence: Most businesses are doing okay. We can always do better. I think we need to get more people in our city. Hopefully, we get streets and stormwater fixed – it will help pretty up things and make us more attractive.

Ruth Smith: Like every small town our local businesses have issues. It's so hard to compete with the large box or one stop shopping stores. We need to do more to promote our locals and encourage our citizens to shop local.

Martin County Journal: Stormwater issues have been a huge problem for the city for a long time. Being the fiscal body of the city, what do you think can be done to help resolve the issues?

Tim Lawrence: We need to work on grants to get the help we need to get going on them. There is a lot to do.

Ruth Smith: Stormwater is a major, major issue. It is a million-dollar project and then some. We can't do it on our own. WE HAVE to have help through grants. Other cities are having the same problem so grant money is tight. We are hopeful that this grant cycle we will receive money. We won't be able to do the project all at once, but we can get started soon.

Martin County Journal: What do you believe is the most pressing issue facing the city right now?

Tim Lawrence: Our infrastructure needs a lot of work and updates.

Ruth Smith: I believe the most pressing issue right now is the Stormwater. We have to get it repaired. Securing the cash to begin is the only way to proceed. We are getting there.

Martin County Journal: Is there anything else you would like to get across to the voters?

Tim Lawrence: I'll do my best for the people of our city. I served two and a half years on the city council previously. Thank you.

Ruth Smith: It's is important that all of us work together to continue to make our City a great place to live. Working together good things happen. We are well on our way and our future is bright. I love where I live and I can't see me living anywhere else in the world.

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to respond

Collin J. Padgett: My name is Collin Joseph Padgett, and I was born on August 26th, 1987 to Terry Padgett and Kathy Norris Mathias, both of whom are from Loogootee. I spent the first 20 years of my life growing up in Petersburg, IN, where I graduated from Pike Central High School in 2006. I began working at the age of 15 when I took a corn detassling summer job with Mike Hopkins in Loogootee and the surrounding areas. Over the next 3 years I had several regular and summer jobs, including roofing, metal fabrication, Dairy Queen (Petersburg), auto detailing, and more. In October 2008, I started working for Midwest Satellite in Washington. I then made the decision to move back to my hometown of Loogootee in 2009, to be closer to my family. In 2011, Midwest Satellite moved me to Loogootee where I operated an office for the next 7+ years until the corporate decision was made to close the location in August 2018 due to the struggling economy. Since that time, I have currently been employed as a life & health insurance agent with Kirk & Associates right here in Loogootee and I love it. I am also a co-owner of Bradley's Bar & Grill, which we opened in 2014. I manage all the financial and legal responsibilities for the business, including but not limited to accounting, payroll, federal/state/local tax filings & payments, licensing, etc. It's been a great experience, as I have gained much business knowledge and learned a lot about how small businesses and the economy work.

Martin County Journal: What is it about the City of Loogootee that makes you want to be a council member?

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to respond.

Collin J. Padgett: Even though I have only lived back in Loogootee for 10 years, it has always felt like my real home. After having served as a City Council member for the last 7 months, I have gained so much insight on how the local government and infrastructure operate. It has fascinated me, and I feel it is my responsibility to continue to learn more each day so that I can provide the most well-suited decisions for the city and its residents.

Martin County Journal: Are you happy with the way the city's finances are being spent? If so, explain. If not, what would you like to see done differently?

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to respond.

Collin J. Padgett: The city's current financial situation is stable, but there is much room for improvement. We need to utilize more in-depth consideration for every decision moving forward, rather than just quickly raising a hand for a 'yes' or 'no' vote so that we can move on to the next issue and repeat the process. I have begun questioning many of the city's financial accounts in order to learn more about our annual expenses and budget. I have gained a lot of knowledge from that research, and I plan to continue learning more to get our city on the proper financial path.

COLLIN PADGETT business and attracting new businesses to the city?

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to

Collin J. Padgett: As a local business owner, I can attest to the struggles of running a small business, especially those of us in the food/restaurant industry. I believe the struggles come more from a national economic issue, rather than just a Loogootee problem. I would like to find a way to work with the Chamber of Commerce and the Martin County Alliance for Economic Growth, to educate and implement more social media networking, advertising and interaction with our local businesses. We are living in a digital world, and the only way to succeed is to acknowledge it and adapt. I spend a lot of time using social media for Bradley's Bar & Grill, and it really has made some major differences to our business. I am personally willing to talk to and help any local business owner learn more about the benefits of social media.

Martin County Journal: Stormwater issues have been a huge problem for the city for a long time. Being the fiscal body of the city, what do you think can be done to help resolve the issues?

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to

Collin J. Padgett: This is one of the biggest issues facing the City of Loogootee. We do not have nearly enough funds to complete the repairs and improvements that are needed. We need to make some spending cuts and focus on growing the budget for the stormwater drain funds. While that would help, it's still only a drop in the bucket. We need to apply for and utilize any and all grants that are available through our federal and state government. This is another area where social media and networking can be a great resource for obtaining information about grants and/ or other assistance that we currently might not even be aware of.

Martin County Journal: What do you believe is the most pressing issue facing the city right now?

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to

Collin J. Padgett: Unnecessary spending and infrastructure. During the next four years, I would like to see our budget transitioned into better prioritized spending. I feel like many tax dollars are being spent on some of the city's less important issues. I would like to start utilizing our funds on more immediate needs first, such as the numerous potholes in our streets, and some soon-to-be needed upgrades to our public water supply system. I simply want to question each individual issue that the city runs into and spend a little time and actual research to evaluate which of those issues take the highest priority needs from our budget.

Martin County Journal: Is there anything else you would like to get across to the voters?

Donald Rick Norris: Chose not to respond.

Collin J. Padgett: The citizens of Loogootee are currently paying me to make the best decisions for our city. That is a massive responsibility, and I don't take it lightly. During the next four years, I plan to go above and beyond the standard duties and expectations that our taxpayers hold us to. It's easy to simply attend a meeting once a month, go through the motions, and just blindly approve every financial request that is presented to us. Timely research and due diligence are a must before making any decision that will affect our thousands of residents, and that is exactly what I plan to do for another four water issues for some time now and money needs to be found to help with this issue as well as some other issues. More grant monies need to be looked into to help pay for these issues.

James Richard Taylor: Chose not to respond.

Martin County Journal: What do you believe is the most pressing issue facing the city right now?

Ron Gilbert: During my four-year term I would like to see more grant money applied for whenever it is made possible by the state or at the national level. Some of our sidewalks are in poor shape and need to be replaced as well as drainage pipes. I would like to find money for this to happen.

James Richard Taylor: Chose not to respond.

Martin County Journal: Is there anything else you would like to get across to the voters?

Ron Gilbert: I have worked in the city of Loogootee since 1981 and feel I can talk to the people of Loogootee in a friendly and polite manner to try to get things done. Remember though, I only have one out of five votes on each situation. I will vote the way the people ask me to.

"Our City Matters to YOU It Matters to Me!"

I am very mindful that although we have achieved many of our goals in the almost eight years I have been in office, this election is about our future and opportunities to continue to make this City we all love a better place to live for us, for our children, and eventually for their children.

We have already begun our most challenging project yet -- repairing our crumbling storm water infrastructure; and we are preparing to apply for a grant in July to help fund this very expensive project.

I wish we could just afford to pave all our streets at one time or do all repairs and maintenance our City needs at once; but the reality is our City operates on a very small tax base and we don't have millions of dollars in the bank to spend as needed or wanted. We depend on grants to support improvement and even maintenance projects. The process of grant writing is very competitive. Many cities and towns are competing for the same money. We feel fortunate to have been successful in the past and we will always take advantage of all grant opportunities for our City.

I will continue to support our local businesses and work to entice even more businesses to come to our community, including a much-needed assisted living facility and more senior housing; maintain and pave our streets; maintain our water utility infrastructure; maintain and beautify our municipal pool, park and common grounds; beautify our downtown area; bring high speed broadband to our rural areas; work with law enforcement on the war against drugs and protection of our children at our schools; work on special |projects, such as a walking trail; involve our youth in planning for our future, and more.

I appreciate all of the support and input I have received during the past eight years and I will continue to listen to you and make every effort possible to help in situations when you need my help.

It's no secret how much I love Loogootee and am so proud to live here and represent you. My staff works hard every day to serve our City and your needs, and we will always strive to find ways to do our Elections are not decided by the number of signs in yards, or social media "likes" or even the best wishes or intentions. Elections are decided by those who show up to vote for their candidates of choice. All candidates have worked hard for your vote and we are hoping for the best voter turn-out ever!

I ask once again for your vote of confidence in me as your Mayor for a third term and I promise you as I promised you before, I will serve our City, and you, to the best of my ability and I will work hard for Loogootee's best interest and our future.

Paid for by the Committee to Elect Noel Harty for Mayor.
