Jug Rox Robotix compete in World Championship in Houston

Jug Rox Robotix competed at the 2023 FIRST World Championship for the FTC robotics class at the Brown convention center in Houston, Texas on Tuesday, April 18 through Saturday, April 22. A total of 192 teams from 28 countries representing the top 3 percent of all teams competed at the event. The 192 teams were divided into four divisions of 48 teams and the Jug Rox were assigned the Ochoa division.

The event started on Tuesday afternoon with the setup of the team's pit area and hardware inspection of the robot. Wednesday morning the team took part in their 20-minute judged interview to review the team's robot design, engineering documentation, and team dynamics. The first of 11 rounds were on Wednesday evening followed by five rounds on Thursday and five rounds on Friday. A match consists of a 30-second autonomous period followed by a two-minute driver-controlled period. Teams are ranked by the number of wins/losses and then by their average autonomous score during the 30-second autonomous period.

The Jug Rox got off to a bumpy start, losing their first match on Wednesday and then their first two matches on Thursday. They rallied, however, to win the next three matches on Thursday giving them a rank of 25th coming into Friday morning for the remaining five matches. Friday, they continued with strong performances through some very competitive matches winning all five matches for the day. This propelled the Jug Rox to a rank of 9th at the end of the qualification rounds based off their 8-3 record and the average autonomous score of 57.57 which was 9th highest for the Ochoa division. Their performance gave them an overall rank of 35th across all 192 teams and their average autonomous score was 49th highest across all 192 teams.

Friday afternoon concluded with alliance selection for the final matches. In alliance selection, the top four ranked teams pick two other teams to partner with them in the final matches for a total of 12 teams that run in the finals. With a rank of 9th the Jug Rox felt they had a good chance to be selected to be part of an alliance in the Ochoa division. In the end, however, the Jug Rox were not picked which concluded the robot performance part of the competition.

Saturday, the Jug Rox attended the awards ceremony for the event. The Jug Rox were awarded the Connect Award Finalist. This judged award is given to the team that most connects with their local science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) community. A true FIRST team is more than a sum of its parts and recognizes that engaging their local STEM community plays an essential part in their success. The recipient of this award is recognized for helping the community understand FIRST, the FIRST Tech Challenge, and the team itself. The team that wins the Connect Award actively seeks and recruits engineers and explores the opportunities available in the world of engineering, science, and technology. This team has a clear team plan and has identified steps to achieve their goals.

Harty, Gilbert move on to General Election

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT

Noel Harty defeated opponent Teresa Nolley in Tuesday's City of Loogootee Primary Election by a vote of 312-231. There was only a Democratic ballot in this year's Primary as no Republicans had opponents. Harty will now go on to face Republican Brian Ader in the General Election this November.

Democrat Ron Gilbert defeated James "JD" Flynn (D) for the city council at-large seat, 272-242. Gilbert will now go up against Republican Buck Holland in the fall.

Just 27 percent of the 2,056 registered voters in Loogootee turned out Tuesday. There were 434 ballots cast on Election Day and 113 cast in early voting at the courthouse. One ballot was turned in blank and there was on provisional ballot.

Four years ago, 156 absentee ballots were cast and there was 34 percent voter turnout overall. There was only a Democrat Primary four years ago, also.

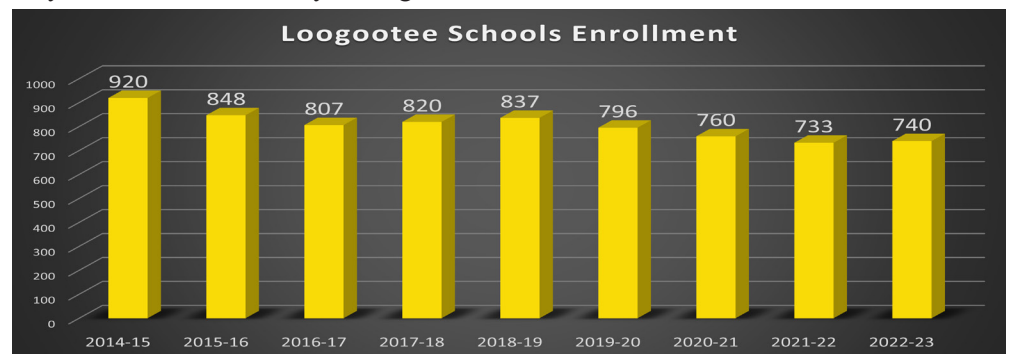

Those who win in the General Election this year will only serve three years as the City of Loogootee will be moving to the county-wide election in 2026.

The races for the City of Loogootee November General Election on Tuesday, November 7 are:

Mayor: Brian T. Ader (R) and Noel D. Harty (D)

City Council District 1: Mike Engleman (R)

Loogootee City Council District 2: (John) David Smith (R) and Tim Biggin

Loogootee School moves forward with improvements, property tax increase

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

Several patrons were in attendance at last Thursday's Loogootee School Board meeting but only two spoke about the plan to raise property taxes for the $17 million expansion and remodeling project. The school plans to build a 22,000-square foot activity center, a bus barn, a new elementary playground and remodel the middle school. The cost of the construction is $9.9 million with $7.1 million in interest over a 19-year period. Bond payments each year will be $917,000. The school is currently paying $750,000 annually which will increase that to $1,667,000. The board unanimously approved moving forward with the projects.

Resident Audrey Robinson asked why there is a need for two new full-size basketball courts in the district and why the property tax increase was not on the ballot as a referendum. She also asked why all the projects need to be done now and can't be spaced out over a period of time and asked why the school would want to pay $7.1 million in interest on a $9.9 million loan. She also wanted to know how the enrollment justifies these projects. She said she would like to see a majority of tax dollars spent on roads and other infrastructure, not on two new gymnasiums.

Jane Herndon, with Ice Miller, said the property tax increase did not need voter approval because it didn't cross a certain financial threshold. She said the other questions were not required to be answered by the board, the public hearing was to just listen to taxpayer feedback.

Board Member Brent Courter said the school board made a mistake when they approved building improvements in 2018.

County council hears about pickleball, approves highway employee raises

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Council met Monday, May 1.

Members of the Loogootee Pickleball group came before the council to inform them of their plans to build four new pickleball courts next to the Loogootee Pool. This year, they are in the planning stages with next year's goal to raise the funds needed. According to Bill Boyd, the total cost for building the courts is estimated at $415,000 although Teresa Smith, another member of the group, said she feels this is a high estimate. Boyd said a lot of communities around Loogootee are building courts as pickleball has become a popular trend. Council Member Jordan Dant asked how many residents are part of the pickleball club and Smith replied there are around 30-40, many of whom are traveling, sometimes twice a day, to Washington to play. It was noted that West Boggs is also planning to build six new pickleball courts in the park, with help from DNR grants. Dant asked what kind of money the pickleball group is requesting from the council. Boyd said they are not requesting a dollar amount now; they just wanted the council to be aware of the plan, so it isn't a surprise when they come back. Boyd was asked how much the City of Loogootee has committed to the project. Boyd said they haven't committed anything yet as the group is still in the planning stage.

Highway Superintendent Scott Seals requested using the salary from an open position he can't get filled to split up amongst the 13 positions in his department. The salary is $40,257 and would provide a $2.15 per hour increase to those employees for the rest of the year. Council members noted the highway would be short $18,000 for those increases next year since they are using the salary to cover eight months of this year, instead of 12. "I love the idea of raises, I just want to be confident that we know come budget time that we can come up with this extra $18,000," said Council Member Dant. Seals said he has enough money in the budget to cover that shortfall next year. "I wouldn't be here if I didn't think so," said Seals. The council approved the request.

Seals said he has a full staff now, after eliminating that position. He said there are a few employees who will be retiring down the road, however.

Seals also requested an extra $1,000 to pay for travel expenses for the highway department. He said the cost of travel has increased and there had been just $1,500 budgeted for 2023. Seals was asked to explain what the travel was for. Seals said he attends road school at Purdue and also the commissioners' conference. The council approved the additional funds.

The council approved an additional appropriation of $1,500 for the sheriff's department for hiring bonuses. Sheriff Josh Greene said they are currently losing two deputies and one jailer. He said there are currently 75 inmates in the jail with 34 of them from Vigo County.

The council approved moving $3,500 from a grant into the salaries for deputies to provide extra patrol for school bus stop arm violations. The four deputies who will be participating in the extra patrols will be paid $29.75 per hour.

The council approved Dianna Ragsdale to serve on the tourism board and Chrystal Goodpaster to serve on the Loogootee Public Library Board.

The board and Auditor Michelle Norris discussed the state board of accounts requirements with moving funds from EDIT (Economic Development Income Tax) to pay for the ambulance service. Norris also reported the ambulance service took in $40,386 in March and $64,249 in April from insurance reimbursements since the start of the service last August.

It was noted that a sponsor hospital for the county ambulance service has not been announced.

Angela Cook, Edward Cook, Cindy McNabb and Michael McNabb for traveling to Houston to support the team in their travels and to all our sponsors. They are so grateful and overwhelmed by the amount of support and generosity that has been shown to them since the very beginning of the season. Since announcing their advancement beyond the state tournament, they have been showered with congratulations and generous sponsorships.

This is the first time they have ever made it to national competition, and they were so excited to be able to go and represent the state and the community. Your financial support is what opens the door to so many amazing opportunities for the team to grow, learn, gain life skills, and have fun. The team was fully funded for the event, raising a total of $13,000 through fundraisers and the sponsorships of 60 separate businesses, individuals, and organizations.

He said they should have included the four projects planned now because they were discussed but they decided against doing them at that time to lessen the burden on taxpayers. He said students need physical activity which is why the activity center is needed.

Board Member Chad Wade said the school needs the upgrades in order to increase enrollment with the new jobs at Crane. He said up until 2017, the school's enrollment was declining but now it is remaining steady. He said they, as a board, have planned these improvements for the past several years.

As with the building improvements in 2018, other board members and the superintendent cited the need to draw in more students to Loogootee, the need to provide safety for students and the studies that have shown improved learning with physical activity and school pride.

Resident Darla Wagler, who also serves as the Loogootee Public Library director, told the board that when the library considered raising property taxes to build a new library, the public was very much against it. She said they went with a USDA loan instead, using money to repay the loan that is already allocated to the library. She asked why the school didn't go that route. She said the patrons that come into the library are very much against a property tax increase because they are barely making ends meet now. She said Loogootee is losing students to other schools and they need to look into why. Board Member Wade said they do look into it, and he doesn't think what Wagler is saying is accurate.

The bond will increase the tax rate for those in the Loogootee School District by 0.3013 for a total of 1.0852 per $100 of assessed property value. A home with an assessed value of $100,000, with or without deductions, would pay an additional $301.30 a year in property taxes for a total of $1,085.20 a year. Superintendent Harmon noted that property tax caps may result in less of a burden for some taxpayers. The cost for farmland and commercial property will be more of an increase. For every 100 acres of farmland the tax increase would be $572.52 more per year. For $100,000 in commercial or rental property, the tax increase would be $301.32 more a year.

The school took out a 20-year bond in 2018 for $11,890,000 ($7,440,000 plus $4,450,000 in interest) to remodel the elementary school and high school. That bond also increased taxes by 25 cents for every $100 of assessed home value.

In other business, the board voted to accept the resignation of High School Principal Chris Walker at the end of the school year.

Tri Kappa members attend state convention in French Lick

The 65th State Convention of Tri Kappa was held April 21-23 at the French Lick Resort with over 700 ladies from throughout the state attending. Council President Janet Perry presided with members of the Paoli Delta Chapter acting as hosts.

Representing the Loogootee-Shoals Delta Tau Chapter were President Pam Loughmiller, Delegate and Vice President Samantha Nelson, Alternate. Others attending from the local chapter were Province III Officer Audrey Robinson, Recording Secretary Tiffani Sergent, Corresponding Secretary Peggy Mattingly, Treasurer Dena Lyon and members Katie Milligan, Rachel Robinson, Renee Street, Pam Summers and Judy Treffinger.

Several business sessions were held during the three-day meeting. Displays by state committees and officers demonstrated Tri Kappa's work throughout the state. The Fine Arts winners from the regional province conventions and officer training were on display with attendees voting for their favorite in each category.

Tri Kappa's Philanthropy Committee continues to support Riley Hospital for Children at Indiana University Health, including the Riley Children's Foundation and Riley Cheer Guild as well as HANDS in Autism, Camp Riley and Ronald McDonald House Charities of Indiana. An informative presentation on the music therapy program was given during the Philanthropy luncheon.

The Scholarship Committee reported that chapters awarded over $1,100,000 to students in their communities over the last two years. Additionally, nearly $50,000 was awarded in province and state scholarships. More than 80 chapters donated to the scholarship fund and contributed at least one filled backpack to the School Backpack Challenge with the Loogootee-Shoals chapter donating three filled backpacks. With a drawing, one lucky chapter received all the donated backpacks to take back and distribute in its community.

The Mental Health Committee donated more than $16,000 to organizations to promote mental health needs of children and adults. Donations were made to the following organizations: American Foundation of Suicide Prevention of Indiana, Indiana Coalition Against Do-

The Memorial Fund donated more than $16,000 to 34 Indiana colleges and universities to help students with unexpected financial and personal hardships.

The Fine Arts Committee has been actively involved in the Hoosier Salon since it was organized in 1926. The Tri Kappa art collection, valued at over $550,000, is on display at the Logan Library at Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology in Terre Haute and two acquisitions were added to the collection this year. The committee also awards art and music scholarships every spring.

The Gifted and Talented Committee has donated to several programs including the Indiana Bar "We the People" enrichment program, the Indiana Academy for Science, Math & Humanities, Indianapolis Indians STEM program, Purdue University's Gifted and Talented Educational program and Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology.

At the Friday dinner, the 12 province officers including Delta Tau's own Audrey Robinson, honored the Council President by singing a song to her set to the tune of "Sweet Caroline". This was followed by a trivia night.

Saturday's dinner had a "Roaring 20's" theme with many attendees dressing in clothes of the era including Audrey Robinson, Rachel Robinson and Pam Summers from the local chapter.

At the Sunday morning business session, council (state) officers were elected and installed to serve during the 2023-2025 biennium. A brunch and announcement of the winners of the Fine Arts' competition closed out the convention with members looking ahead to the 2025 convention to be held in Fort Wayne. The Loogootee-Shoals Delta Tau Chapter was established in November of 1941 and now has 42 members. Its fundraising projects are the Birthday Calendar and the sale of pecans and assorted nuts to support the chapter's annual budget.

Each spring the chapter hosts an Academic Dinner to honor the Top 10 graduates at Loogootee High School. Scholarships are given to a graduate of Loogootee and Shoals High Schools as well as monetary awards to the valedictorians and salutatorians at both county schools. A few of the many donations made annually by the chapter are to the Martin County Community Foundation, Martin County Museum, Cops for Kids, SOAR, Martin County Humane Society, the Scout programs, Youth First, Post Proms, 4-H Council and 4-H project awards, local math and academic bowls and various departments in the school system. The chapter also supports Summerfest and sponsors the Kids N Chalk sidewalk art contest at both the Catfish Festival and the Summerfest.

Over the past 81+ years the local chapter has promoted the work of Tri Kappa through charity, culture and education with financial contributions as well as service projects. In November, the chapter will be celebrating its 82nd anniversary of providing philanthropic services to Martin County.

In the Garden

By Ralph Purkhiser

Purdue University Master Gardener

April showers bring May flowers. The flowers certainly have come in waves recently. Each day, a walk in the gardens reveals something new. It can be overwhelming, as the grass and weeds present challenges, but the procession of flowers and trees makes the labor worthwhile. Last week, I hosted a group from the Dirt Diggers Garden Club and also had some other garden visitors. I enjoy sharing Sandhill Gardens with people who love gardens, but I make it clear to them that they will not see perfectly manicured landscapes. However, I also can guarantee that they will see birds and often other wildlife that share my somewhat wild piece of southern Indiana.

On a recent day, when the weather was more winter than spring, I did some visiting of my own. However, it was with indoor comfort at the Indianapolis Museum of Art at Newfields. I had gone in search of the immersive exhibit in the Lume exhibit hall, highlighting the works of Monet and other impressionists. I certainly was rewarded with a wonderful indoor garden experience. Impressionist works of art are projected on the walls and even the floor of the exhibit hall. It is almost like walking into the paintings. Movement is added, with butterflies and birds that almost seem real. Text projected on the walls tells the story of the Impressionist movement, all set to classical music in surround sound. While not all Impressionist art is of gardens, painting en plain air was popularized by Monet and other impressionists. I was able to visit Monet's gardens and home in Giverny, France several years ago, and this exhibit transported me back to that visit. Many of Monet's famous garden paintings were included, and they even have a photo opportunity featuring a reproduction of one of the arched bridges from Monet's garden.

Although the weather on the day of my visit prevented me from taking in the gardens and outdoor sculptures at Newfields, I really felt that I had a garden experience. I highly recommend this exhibit, which will continue until the end of May. You do need to go on-line and purchase tickets for specific times for this exhibit, but your ticket is good for the rest of the museum and also the gardens. It is a great way to spend a day.

Another great way to pass a day is visiting the many garden centers and greenhouses around the area. It is hard for me to drive past a plant sale, and I have to watch my budget carefully. I love to see what is available in the area and to talk with the many friends I have made over the years in the horticulture trade. While there are some advantages to visiting the big box store garden departments, I love to visit the small, family operated nurseries. Finding these locations leads me down many side roads, and I get to see landscapes ranging from purely natural to carefully manicured. Many gardeners have potted up their extra plants, and I especially find it hard to pass up a plant sale along the road.

You will have the opportunity to increase the plant palette of your garden at some great plant sales this month. The annual Hoosier Hillside Master Gardeners plant sale will be Saturday, May 6 in the lot on the southeast corner at the spotlight in Orleans. My fellow Master Gardeners have been busy potting up vegetables, flowers and herbs. There will be both annuals and perennials, and you will also be able to get expert garden advice from the master gardeners. The Vanderburgh County 4-H fairgrounds will also be hosting a Master Gardener plant sale the same day, and you will also find plants for sale at the Mesker Park Zoo and Botanical Gardens in Evansville. The Good Earth Master Gardeners will have their annual plant sale on Saturday, May 13, in conjunction with the farmers' market at the Washington County government complex in Salem. Get out and support these master gardener events and get some great plants for your garden. You may learn something valuable, too.

Outdoor Indiana magazine features fishing for tiny fish

Outdoor Indiana magazine's May/June issue features a cover article on microfishing, the catch-and-release pursuit of tiny fish species most anglers ignore or don't know about.

The issue also includes a feature on Goshen College's Merry Lea Environmental Center at Wolf Lake in Noble County. Another feature highlights forest bathing, which is the practice of immersing oneself in nature and living in the present moment with the goal of receiving physical and psychological benefits.

Outdoor Indiana is available now at Indiana State Park Inns across the state for $4. Subscriptions are $15 for one year (six issues, a 27 percent savings over cover price) and $28 for two years (12 issues, a 42 percent savings).

Grazing Bites

By Victor Shelton

NRCS State Agronomist/Grazing Specialist

I've had two people ask lately about the yellow flowered plant that has suddenly invaded one of their pastures this spring. It is called buttercup and it's not something you want to see in the field, even if it is pretty.

And despite seemingly appearing out of nowhere, this winter annual probably didn't just abruptly appear. The "foundation" of its existence in such prevalence most likely has come from a built-up seed bank. If you like pretty, yellow flowers, then they will never let you down – but you don't want them! Don't build me up buttercup – that will age me.

Buttercup most often sneaks in from bought hay, poorly cleaned seed or from hay equipment. It may lay incognito for several years in the understory of forage slowly increasing the seed bank and waiting for an opportunity to fully show its true colors.

That opportunity usually starts with overgrazed fall pastures with at least some soil disturbance. This not only sets back desirable forage species that would normally compete with the weed, but also provides some small bare soil spots that enable the pesky weed to really take off from that built up seed bank.

Wet soils with at least some compaction and bare soil creates ideal conditions for buttercup. The whole situation is then exacerbated with each passing growing season.

Buttercup is toxic to all species of livestock. Animals that consume buttercup may suffer from mouth blisters, diarrhea, colic or possibly in some cases death. Luckily, I suppose, most livestock will not consume buttercup because it is just unpalatable. It generally is avoided if there is anything else to graze. Most likely the animal is getting some type of negative biological feedback from the plant fairly quickly and stops consuming it before it takes in too much. The toxin is not a problem or concern in hay – but if present in hay that is being made, seeds from maturing plants may get moved to new locations.

Cattle don't like it and will only eat it if there is nothing else present. Even then, it is usually still minimally consumed. Horses hate the stuff and will totally avoid it. Sheep don't typically eat buttercup but are more likely to graze the plant than most animals when the plant is very immature. They tend to have mouth blistering when they consume much of the plant.

Undesirable species, like buttercup, are plants typically rejected by livestock. They quite often have undesirable side effects when eaten or have little to no food value. Desirable plants are readily consumed by livestock and generally are of good quality to consume. Intermediate species are only eaten by certain species of livestock for short periods of time when somewhat tolerable and then avoided. This quite often is the case with species that have anti-quality factors that tend to increase as the plant matures or with plants that have a very short desirable stage. Yellow bluestem or Broomsedge is a good example of this, it's actually decent quality when it first spikes and starts to grow, but quickly turns to very undesirable and avoided rubbish.

So, when undesirable plants like buttercup are avoided and desirable species are grazed tighter than they should be, the undesirable species gets a continually stronger foothold for dominance in the pasture. I've seen this happen quite quickly in horse pastures. Like I said, horses will totally avoid it and have no issue picking around it and eating any desirable species into the dirt if allowed. A field where it was barely visible one year can turn to a field of solid yellow flowers in just a year or two.

What can we do about this pest? First of all, try not to bring it onto the farm in the first place. Check and maintain good fertility on pasture and hay fields to encourage good production and growth of desirable species. Be careful not to overgraze, especially in the fall and weaken the competition from desirable species.

We don't usually think about the pesky yellow flowered buttercup in the fall, but we should. Most buttercup plants develop from seed during the fall (somewhat dependent on if enough moisture is present). Overgrazing fields create opportunities for buttercup to grow. Maintaining cover is one of the best methods to help compete again with the emergence and growth of this weed.

Don't let it go to seed if at all possible! Mowing directly after a grazing event can help level the playing field just a little bit, setting the plant back to a more vegetative state. That only helps a little bit because the plant can set seed quite closely to the ground if forced to do so – but at least less seed is produced.

Longer rest periods prior to grazing again can help to create more competition from desirable species when it is still not too high in population. Once the threshold has been reached – and you'll know when that has happened – the infestation will have to be controlled by chemical means.

Ideally, apply herbicides in the early spring before flowers start to show. If present in the fall or early spring, herbicides labeled for use on pastures can help control it and you do have choices. Fall applications can be very advantageous especially with proper grazing management and good fertility programs.

Unfortunately, the unintended consequences of herbicide treatments to control buttercup can also be pretty detrimental to desirable forbs and legumes in the pasture sward. Some of those desirable species may return from the seedbank in the soil, but you may also need to reseed them once you have control of your pasture back. Contact your local extension office for herbicide choices and follow label instructions and restrictions.

I'm thankful that the new growing season is in full swing now. I certainly wish everyone a very good and productive grazing season. We never know what lies ahead so it is always good to try to stand sound and stay prepared. The simplest way to do this is never graze anything more than seven days in a row, a shorter time frame is a lot better. Do not overgraze – most plants respond best and produce more if they are not grazed shorter than three or four inches. Ideally, allow at least thirty days of rest prior to grazing again – no, that is generally not too long. Lastly, though it is hard to do and quite often can't be avoided, try to keep as much of the forage as possible in vegetative form.

Remember, it's not about maximizing a grazing event, but maximizing a grazing season! Keep on grazing!

PURE COUNTRY

Throwback

By Dan Gregory

Originally published May 31, 2007

I used this last year and thought it presented a pretty timely message then and decided to do a repeated column for the first time.

This is the graduation season, high schools and colleges across the country are sending forth a new crop of graduates, some with very different ideas about what to expect will happen to them next. They have had the opportunity to learn many things and now regardless of where or what they are graduating from, should realize that a change in their life is going to occur.

Bill Gates (billionaire founder of Microsoft) had these words to share at a recent high-school commencement.

Rule 1: Life is not fair – get used to it.

Rule 2: The world won't care about your self-esteem. The world will expect you to accomplish something BEFORE you feel good about yourself.

Rule 3: You will not make $60,000 a year right out of high school. You won't be a vice-president with a car phone until you earn it.

Rule 4: If you think your teacher is tough, wait till you get a boss.

Rule 5: Flipping burgers is not beneath your dignity. Your grandparents had a different word for burger flipping: they called it opportunity.

Rule 6: If you mess up, it's not your parents' fault, so don't whine about your mistakes, learn from them.

Rule 7: Before you were born, your parents weren't as boring as they are now. They got that way from paying your bills, cleaning your clothes, and listening to you talk about how cool you were. So, before you save the rain forest from the parasites of your parents' generation, try delousing the closet in your room.

Rule 8: Your school may have done away with winners and losers, but life HAS NOT. In some schools, they have abolished failing, and they'll give you as MANY TIMES as you want to get the right answer. This doesn't bear the slightest resemblance to anything in real life.

Rule 9: Life is not divided into semesters. You don't get summers off and very few employers are interested in helping you FIND YOURSELF. Do that on your own time.

Rule 10: Television is NOT real life. In real life, people actually have to leave the coffee shop and go to jobs.

Rule 11: Be nice to nerds. Chances are you'll end up working for one.
