Loogootee, Shoals receive grants for school safety

The Indiana Secured School Safety Board recently approved more than $14 million in matching grants to enhance school security by allowing local school corporations to add resource officers, equipment and conduct threat assessments. These grants include $35,000 for Loogootee Schools and $30,240 for Shoals Schools.

During the board meeting, applications were approved for 388 schools that qualified for the Secured School Safety Grant program. Each school must produce a 50 percent match to qualify.

"Indiana continues to be national leader in the safety and preparedness of our schools," said Bryan Langley, board chair and executive director of the Indiana Department of Homeland Security (IDHS). "With support from Governor Holcomb and legislators, this funding will help continue that trend to support schools as they plan and implement safety measures that protect students, educators, administrators and visitors."

The funds include an additional $5 million approved by the Indiana General Assembly at the governor's request. With the recent board approval, the Indiana Secured School Safety Grant program has provided more than $53 million since 2014 to enhance safety and security in schools.

Award letters were sent this month to school administrators. By statute, the Indiana Secured Schools Safety Board is administered by IDHS. Visit the

The Indiana Secured School Safety IDHS website for a complete awards oard recently approved more than list.

Background Information

The Indiana secured school safety grant program was created in 2013 to support initiatives to ensure schools are safe and secure.

The program supports a dedicated state grant fund that provides matching grants to school corporations, accredited non-public schools, charter schools or a coalition of school corporations and/or charter schools applying jointly to employ a school resource officer, conduct a threat assessment, purchase equipment to restrict access to the school or expedite the notification of first responders.

School corporations, charter schools or coalitions with an average daily membership of at least 1,000 can apply for grants up to $50,000 annually. Schools with membership of less than 1,000 can apply for grants up to $35,000 per year.

Indiana Department of Homeland Security

Established in 2005, the Indiana Department of Homeland Security (IDHS) leads the way to a safer and more secure Indiana. With jurisdictions involving emergency management, building code enforcement, as well as training and certification for first responders around the state, IDHS works around the clock to protect the people, property and prosperity of Indiana. For more information about IDHS, visit dhs.in.gov.

Lt. Governor unveils updated Indiana Broadband Map

Lt. Governor Suzanne Crouch announced yesterday that the Indiana Broadband Map now reflects the most recent data available, which will create a better understanding of the broadband landscape in the state.

"Broadband impacts our lives in a number of different ways — education, workforce, healthcare, economic development and quality of life," Crouch said. "It is imperative we have affordable and accessible high-speed broadband in all of our communities. Having an updated statewidemap that show areas we are lacking will better shape appropriate policies to address additional broadband investments."

In 2009, the National Telecommunications and Information Administration awarded federal grants to Indiana to create the Indiana Broadband Map. Up until 2014, the funds were used to create a map that provided detailed information on where broadband was provided, at what speeds, in what fashion and by which providers.

The federal funding ended in 2014, and seeing a lack of updated information, Crouch along with the Indiana Office of Technology have utilized data from the Federal Communications Commission and updated the map.

"Having sufficient broadband speeds for rural Indiana and the Hoosiers that call it home is a part of Governor Eric Holcomb and my Next Level Agenda," Crouch said. "Our agencies, and the new Director of Broadband Opportunities will be able to utilize this map to identify what areas are unserved and under-served so those communities are not left behind."

Crouch said that an up-to-date map will help guide policymakers when they are looking at initiatives aimed at improving the lack of affordable highspeed broadband in rural areas.

Revisions to the map will continually be made to improve functionality. To view the map visit www.indianabroadbandmap.com.

National unemployment bumps up to 4 percent for June

Total nonfarm payroll employment increased by 213,000 in June, and the unemployment rate rose to 4.0 percent, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last week. Job growth occurred in professional and business services, manufacturing, and health care, while retail trade lost jobs.

Household Survey Data

The unemployment rate rose by 0.2 percentage point to 4.0 percent in June, and the number of unemployed persons increased by 499,000 to 6.6 million. A year earlier, the jobless rate was 4.3 percent, and the number of unemployed persons was 7.0 million.

Among the major worker groups, the unemployment rates for adult men (3.7 percent), adult women (3.7 percent), and Asians (3.2 percent) increased in June. The jobless rate for teenagers (12.6 percent), Whites (3.5 percent), Blacks (6.5 percent), and Hispanics (4.6 percent) showed little or no change over the month.

Among the unemployed, the number of job losers and persons who completed temporary jobs increased by 211,000 in June to 3.1 million, and the number of reentrants to the labor force rose by 204,000 to 2.1 million. (Reentrants are persons who previously worked but were not in the labor force prior to beginning their job search.)

The number of long-term unemployed (those jobless for 27 weeks or more) increased by 289,000 in June to 1.5 million. These individuals accounted for 23.0 percent of the unemployed.

In June, the civilian labor force grew by 601,000. The labor force participation rate edged up by 0.2 percentage point over the month to 62.9 percent but has shown no clear trend thus far this year. The employment-population ratio, at 60.4 percent, was unchanged in June and has essentially been flat since February. The number of persons employed part time for economic reasons (sometimes referred to as involuntary part-time workers) was little changed in June at 4.7 million. These individuals, who would have preferred full-time employment, were working part time because their hours had been reduced or they were unable to find full-time jobs.

In June, 1.4 million persons were marginally attached to the labor force, little different from a year earlier. (Data are not seasonally adjusted.) These individuals were not in the labor force, wanted and were available for work, and had looked for a job sometime in the prior 12 months. They were not counted as unemployed because they had not searched for work in the 4 weeks preceding the survey.

Among the marginally attached, there were 359,000 discouraged workers in June, down by 155,000 from a year earlier. (Data are not seasonally adjusted.) Discouraged workers are persons not currently looking for work because they believe no jobs are available for them. The remaining 1.1 million persons marginally attached to the labor force in June had not searched for work for reasons such as school attendance or family responsibilities.

Establishment Survey Data

Total nonfarm payroll employment increased by 213,000 in June and has grown by 2.4 million over the last 12 months. Over the month, job gains occurred in professional and business services, manufacturing, and health care, while employment in retail trade declined. Employment in professional and business services increased by 50,000 in June and has risen by 521,000 over Manufacturing added 36,000 jobs in June. Durable goods manufacturing accounted for nearly all of the increase, including job gains in fabricated metal products (+7,000), computer and electronic products (+5,000), and primary metals (+3,000). Motor vehicles and parts also added jobs over the month (+12,000), after declining by 8,000 in May. Over the past year, manufacturing has added 285,000 jobs.

Employment in health care rose by 25,000 in June and has increased by 309,000 over the year. Hospitals added 11,000 jobs over the month, and employment in ambulatory health care services continued to trend up (+14,000).

Construction employment continued to trend up in June (+13,000) and has increased by 282,000 over the year.

Mining employment continued on an upward trend in June (+5,000). The industry has added 95,000 jobs since a recent low point in October 2016, almost entirely in support activities for mining.

In June, retail trade lost 22,000 jobs, largely offsetting a gain in May (+25,000).

Employment showed little or no change over the month in other major industries, including wholesale trade, transportation and warehousing, information, financial activities, leisure and hospitality, and government.

The average workweek for all employees on private nonfarm payrolls was unchanged at 34.5 hours in June. In manufacturing, the workweek edged up by 0.1 hour to 40.9 hours, and overtime edged up by 0.1 hour to 3.5 hours. The average workweek for production and nonsupervisory employees on private nonfarm payrolls remained at 33.8

In June, average hourly earnings for all employees on private nonfarm payrolls rose by 5 cents to $26.98. Over the year, average hourly earnings have increased by 72 cents, or 2.7 percent. Average hourly earnings of private-sector production and nonsupervisory employees increased by 4 cents to $22.62

The change in total nonfarm payroll employment for April was revised up from +159,000 to +175,000, and the change for May was revised up from +223,000 to +244,000. With these revisions, employment gains in April and May combined were 37,000 more than previously reported. (Monthly revisions result from additional reports received from businesses and government agencies since the last published estimates and from the recalculation of seasonal factors.) After revisions, job gains have averaged 211,000 per month over the last 3 months.

FLOYD GOODMAN JR.

Floyd E. Goodman Jr. passed away July 7, 2018 in his home after a battle with cancer. A resident of Loogootee, he was 68.

He was born on January 25, 1950; son of Floyd E Goodman Sr. and Lorraine Carter. He graduated from Effingham

High School in GOODMAN JR. 1968. He relocated to Martin County upon his military retirement in 1989.

Floyd strived to epitomize the phrase "For God, My Country, and My Family" during his daily life. He placed his faith in Jesus Christ at age 15 and remained faithful throughout the remainder of his life. As a part of this commitment, he served the Lord as a Treasurer and Deacon for his church for many years. To honor his country, Floyd served in the United States Air Force, earning two commendation medals before retiring after 20 years of dedication as a ground radar and airfield specialist. Lastly, he remained true to his love and the vows of marriage to his high school sweetheart, Brenda K. (Cummings) Goodman, for 48 years until his death.

Whenever the alarm goes off after-hours at the office where I work, the security company calls me at home and I have to go back and reset it.

Late at night I got one of those calls. As I was getting ready to head out the door, my husband gruffly said, "You're not going down there by yourself at this hour.'

Just as I was thinking, how thoughtful of him, he added, "Better take the dog with you."

Four men are in the hospital waiting room because their wives are having babies. A nurse approaches the first guy and says, "Congratulations! You're the father of twins.'

"That's odd," answers the man. "I work for the Minnesota Twins!'

A nurse then yells the second man, "Congratulations! You're the father of triplets!" "That's weird," answers the second man. "I work for the 3M com-

A nurse goes up to the third man saying, "Congratulations! You're the father of quadruplets." "That's strange," he answers. "I work for the Four Seasons hotel!"

The last man begins groaning and banging his head against the wall. "What's wrong?" the others ask. "I work for 7 Up!"

WHY IT'S GREAT TO BE A DOG:

- 1. No one expects you to take a bath every day.
 - 2. If it itches, you can scratch it.
 - 3. There's no such thing as bad food.
- 4. A rawhide bone can entertain you for hours.
- 5. If you grow hair in weird places, no one notices.
- 6. You can lie around all day without worrying about being fired.
- 7. You don't get in trouble for putting your head in a stranger's lap.
- 8. You're always excited to see the
- same people. 9. Having big feet is considered an asset.
 - 10. Puppy love can last.

By Ralph Purkhiser Purdue University Master Gardener

Gardens are always changing. Sometimes the changes come from the fact that plants are maturing and getting large. Sometimes plants die or are damaged in storms. Real gardeners know that a garden is never finished, even when one has completed an installation plan.

At Sandhill Gardens, I have amassed several plant collections, but one of my favorites has been my collection of hostas. More than fifty different varieties of hosta grow in the garden beds. I have several large trees that help provide shady conditions needed by hostas. For years, I have credited the proximity of the cliff behind my house with being a deterrent for deer, which love to eat hostas. However, for the past two years, the deer have definitely found my hosta beds and I fear that the collection will be wiped out if they continue to be grazed so completely.

I have begun taking some steps to save some of the more rare and expensive plants. I have moved them to more sheltered areas closer to the house in hopes the deer will not find them. This leaves a lot of area in the shade of the maple trees where grass refuses to grow. The challenge is to find plants that will survive in the shade but which are not on the preferred menu for deer. I know tht deer will eat almost anything if they are hungry, but most years, there is enough forage to keep them from starving without turning to plants they do not like.

Actually, there are some hostas on the non-preferred list. Deer tend to avoid the hostas with thick, crinkled leaves. It looks funny to see a large Brother Stephan hosta untouched in an area where other hostas have been decimated. I will be looking for other hostas with similar leaves to include in

Another shade plant collection here are Sandhill Gardens is the hellebore

The Martin County Highway Department is now taking bids for hot mix for the 2019 season. Bids should include separate estimates for the following projects:

-GRADED RD from Mt Olive Rd intersection to Saw Mill Rd -GOODWILL CEMETERY RD from Hwy 231N to Fairview St -MOUNT PLEASANT RD / BROOKS HOUSE RD from Hwy 550 to 231S. -800N from 231N to the Martin/ Daviess County line collection. While not as extensive as the hosta collection, I do have about 20 different cultivars. I have written about my love of hellebores in the winter garden, but they actually are also a good plant for the summer. The thick leaves of most hellebore species are credited with deterring the deer. During the summer, clumps of hellebores increase and remain dark green well into winter. There are only a few hellebores with variegated foliage, but there are some distinct differences in the leaves of different species to provide some interest. I will definitely be moving more hellebores into the areas where the deer have been grazing.

The deer have also ignored my pulmonaria or lungwort plants. These plants supply beautiful pink, white and blue flowers to the shade garden in early spring, but the spotted, fuzzy foliage continues to provide some interest into the summer. The major enemy of lungwort is slugs, so surrounding them with some sort of sharp mulch will help to keep them looking good.

Brunnera is a good plant to fill in for variegated hostas. While the patterns on brunnera are not as varied as hosta variegation, the large leaves of Great Alexander will definitely brighten up dark spots. The early spring blue flowers are a bonus, but the stems on which the sprays of flowers are held do need to be pruned out to keep the clusters looking good for the summer. I have several different brunnera varieties and the deer have avoided them thus far.

Even amid hostas, Solomon's seal offers a contrasting growth habit. Wands of leaves arch in clusters. Flowers that resemble tiny bells grace the underside of the leaves in spring. Solomon's seal will grow into a thick clump, so it is not a good neighbor for less vigorous plants. A variegated form actually is my favorite Latin plant name—polygonatum odoratum variegatum. Say that three times.

Ferns are another type of shade-loving flora which deer avoid. Next week, we will take a look at the variety of ferns that are hardy in our area.

Producer sentiment inches up despite commodity price decline and continued trade war concerns

Agricultural producer sentiment of 2018, producers have been slowly rose slightly in June according to the Purdue University/CME Group Ag Economy Barometer. The increase was unexpected given unresolved trade war concerns and sharp price declines for key commodities, including corn, wheat and, especially, soybeans during the month. The June barometer reading of 143 was only 2 points higher than May. The barometer is based on a monthly survey of 400 agricultural producers from across the country.

"In June, we saw a sizeable drop in commodity prices that caught many observers by surprise," said James Mintert, the barometer's principal investigator and director of Purdue University's Center for Commercial Agriculture, "But, despite the price decline, producers' appraisal of current economic conditions improved compared to May. However, it was clear from survey responses that uncertainty regarding the agricultural outlook increased considerably."

The barometer's rise was underpinned by an increase in the Index of Current Conditions, which climbed to 138 compared to a reading of 132 a month earlier. The Index of Future Expectations remained nearly unchanged with a reading of 146 in June, 1 point higher than in May.

Each month the survey asks producers whether they expect "good times" or "bad times" in U.S. agriculture, both one-year and five-years ahead. This month, respondents provided mixed responses with many producers shifting to "neutral" and away from a "good" or "bad" response, that suggests a rise in uncertainty for the future. Several times a year, the barometer also asks producers if they expect prices for key commodities to move higher, lower or remain unchanged over the next 12 months. Compared to the beginning asked producers how much their crop acreage changed in 2018 and whether or not they use flexible cash rental leases to rent farmland. As expected, most farmers' crop acreage did not change in 2018 compared to a year earlier, but the survey revealed that some farms were expanding crop acreage rapidly. For example, 8 percent of farms increased their crop acreage by more than 10 percent, and 6 percent of farms increased their crop acreage by up to 10 percent in 2018, compared to 2017. Usage of flexible cash rental leases has been increasing recently and, among the farms in the survey that rent cropland, 36 percent reported they plan to use a flexible cash rent lease on some of their acreage.

"Flexible cash rent leases provide a way for farm operators to share some risk with land owners, while also providing landowners some of the stability that comes with a cash rental agreement. The increase in volatility in crop agriculture could be stimulating interest in flexible cash rent leases," said Mintert.
