Commissioners accept bridge inspection proposals, discuss courthouse repair issues

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Commissioners met Tuesday, July 23.

Highway Superintendent Scott Seals returned the bridge inspection proposals from Kapur, Inc.; BF&S, RQAW, USI and HWC Engineering, that were reviewed by the county attorney. Attorney Dave Lett said they all met the requirements. Commissioner Paul George said the state mandates how much is paid to the bridge inspector so there was no monetary value attached to the proposals. The commissioners voted to accept all the proposals which will now be reviewed by the committee formed which consists of the commissioners, the highway superintendent and EMA Director Monty Wolf. A committee meeting will be held next Tuesday morning at 8:30 a.m. at the highway department to go over the proposals and choose one.

Seals also reported he has a mower and truck in need of repairs. The truck is going for repairs this week and they are waiting on parts for the mower. He said they are still doing patching work and people are not slowing down to watch for highway crews. A driver on a cell phone almost hit a highway worker this week. Seals said drivers need to be more aware.

Solid waste board meeting cancelled due lack of a quorum

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Solid Waste Board was supposed to meet last Wednesday, July 17 however only two of the seven members showed up – Brian Ader and Jim Hamby. Without a quorum, Ader and Hamby discussed a few issues with Director Janell Freeman, but couldn't make any decisions.

Freeman reported that Duke Energy replaced a few lights in the building but nothing in the warehouse. When she asked the technician when the warehouse lights would be replaced, he told her that was not part of the contract. Freeman

Mid-States Corridor Tier 2 Study to begin

The Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) has given the Mid-States Corridor Project Team notice to proceed with the first Tier 2 Study. Work will begin in the Dubois County area to determine the alignment and access plan for the new highway. The Tier 2 Study will evaluate more site-specific impacts to determine the specific preferred location and right-of-way needs of a 200-to-500-foot-wide facility.

The Tier 1 Final Environmental Impact Statement identified the location of the 2,000-foot-wide corridor which travels east of Huntingburg and Jasper. Section of Independent Utility (SIU) 2 extends from Interstate 64, around Huntingburg and Jasper, to S.R. 56 at Haysville. This study of SIU 2 is anticipated to take approximately three years to complete.

Emergency Management Agency Director Wolf reported that starting July 31 through August 12, the U.S. Army aviation assets will be conducting routine flight operations in the vicinity of Burns City Gate while supporting a DoD training exercise. There may be periods of time during this training that military personnel may be utilizing blank ammunition and pyrotechnics. This training is separate from other NSA Crane scheduled operations during this timeframe. He wanted the public to be aware this will be happening.

Attorney Lett told the commissioners that the closing on the purchase of the former Old National Bank building in Shoals will happen at the end of this week or the first part of next week.

Auditor Michelle Norris asked the commissioners if they would like to give a recommendation to the county council regarding employee raises for 2025, as they have done in the past. Commissioner George said he believes they have recommended a 5 percent raise in past years. Commissioner Cody Roush said he believes they tried for an 8 percent increase last year but said the council will probably shoot for 3-5 percent. After discussion, the commissioners agreed to recommend a 7 percent raise for county employees.

Auditor Norris also discussed the council (See 'COMMISSIONERS' on page 3) disagreed as did Board Member Ader. Ader said they wouldn't be paying Duke Energy until all the work laid out in the contract was completed.

Freeman said she needs to know how the board plans to proceed with extending the $65,000 loan with German American. She said she would like to see it extended two years instead of just one. Ader and Hamby discussed the need to hold a special meeting with the board as soon as possible to get that worked out.

The board also discussed the need to give Freeman a raise as they said one was promised to her when she took the position. Freeman also noted Bookkeeper (See 'SOLID WASTE' on page 2)

Early activity will include survey work and data analysis. Office hours will resume at the project office beginning Thursday, July 25. The office is located on the Jasper campus of Vincennes University at 850 College Ave., Jasper, IN 47546. Office hours are every Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Mid-States Corridor Project examines an improved highway connection in southern Indiana. The Mid-States Corridor generally follows US 231 from Interstate 64, passing east of Huntingburg and the Jasper area, and extends north to connect to Interstate 69. Additional Tier 2 Studies of the remaining SIUs have not been scheduled. Maps and other information regarding the project study area can be found at Mid-States Corridor - Improving Regional Transportation (midstatescorridor.com)

'We can and we will stop the Mid-States Corridor'

To the editor of the Martin County Journal,

There was a Martin County Commissioners' meeting on July 9, 2024 and one of the topics addressed was obtaining a $350,000 loan to purchase and repair/re-store the former Old National Bank building in Shoals. This decision is an example of what we don't want or need with regards to our elected officials.

First, there is not a plan, a vision, for what the building will be used for. It might be used for the clerk's office, and it might be used for something else. The commissioners said as much. "Might be" is not a plan, it's an excuse to spend taxpayers' money.

Second, Commissioners Paul George and Aaron Summers voted to approve the loan using The German American Bank. I understand going with the lowest bidder; but, saving less than $500 over the course of 18 months doesn't justify using the financing arm of the Mid-States Corridor. Who really negotiated this loan? Was it Mr. George and Mr. Summers or was it the County Attorney Dave Lett? Whoever it was must be one of those wolves in sheep's clothing who want the Mid-States Corridor.

Cody Roush is to be commended for standing up for fiscal responsibility and a continuing voice against the Mid-States Corridor. Mr. Roush is the type of elected official we need.

This is the latest example of how some of our elected officials flip-flop on issues that are important to their constituents. I know the commissioners have been asked publicly what their positions are on the Mid-States Corridor. Some state they are opposed, at that moment, and some just ignore the question. However, when it comes to spending our tax dollars, they show their true colors.

None of us want to pay higher taxes and certainly none of us want our taxes spent on frivolous projects; and by frivolous, I mean spending money on buildings and things with no plan for their use. Or, to approve loans to businesses that are 100% in favor of the Mid-States Corridor.

We all need to be watchful of how and what our tax dollars are being spent on; and anything and anyone that supports the Mid-States Corridor should be loudly opposed. Those officials that continue to oppose the community's position on the Mid-States Corridor need to be held to account. It is up to us to continue our fight against the Corridor by loudly saying "NO". We can and we will stop the Mid-States Corridor.

without work. The top ten spots in the state for lowest jobless rate for June were Daviess and Gibson counties at 3.4 percent, White, Tipton, Pulaski, Martin, Hamilton, Dubois and Clinton counties at 3.5 percent; and Wells, Union, Posey, Decatur and Boone counties at 3.6 percent.

The top ten spots in the state for highest jobless rate in June were Fayette County at 6.2 percent, Howard County at 6 percent, Lake County at 5.9 percent, Vermillion County at 5.7 percent, Delaware County at 5.5 percent, Monroe County at 5.3 percent, Vigo County at 5.2 percent, Greene County at 5.1 percent, and Blackford, Lawrence and Miami counties at 5 percent.

The unemployment rate of the State of Indiana in June stood at 3.8 percent, according to the Indiana Department of Workforce Development. By comparison, the national unemployment rate for June stands at 4.1 percent.

In addition, Indiana's labor force participation rate remained at 62.4 percent for June, remaining slightly below the national rate of 62.6 percent. This rate is the percentage of Hoosiers 16 and older that are either working or actively looking for work. Those not in the labor force include, primarily, students, retirees and other non-working populations, such as individuals unable to work due to a disability or illness, or adults responsible for their family's childcare needs.

Indiana's total labor force stands at 3,378,707 - an increase of 1,527 from the previous month.

Private sector employment in Indiana increased by 5,100 jobs over the last month. In June of 2024 Indiana saw a gain of 41,900 jobs over this time last year in 2023. Indiana's June private employment stands at 2,854,800.

Industries that experienced job increases in June included:

- Private Educational & Health Services (+ 3,600);
- Construction (+1,700);
- Leisure and Hospitality (+1,600); and
- Professional and Business Services (+1,100); and

As of July 17, 2024, there were 96,433 open job postings throughout the state. As of the week ending on June 29, 2024, Indiana had 19,084 continued unemployment insurance claims filed.

Individuals looking for work, training or career information are encouraged to visit in.gov/dwd/job-seekers.

SOLID WASTE

Mykala Rice's 90-day probationary period is coming up and they need to approve her as an official employee.

Freeman told Hamby and Ader that she is ready to end the collection of glass. She said they drove a load of glass to Indianapolis recently and only made $300 after expenses. She said she was told initially that glass separated, clear from colors, would make more money but it turned out that wasn't the case. She said the representative of the company she has been working with will not return her calls now.

Freeman also reported that she recently found out that the center's property and casualty insurance will be increasing from $19,833 to $21,500 this year. She asked the board members if they felt raising the deductible from $500 would help. Hamby told Freeman she could get prices based on a $2,500 deductible and they can discuss it.

Dora gave up her career at Crane to raise their two boys.

DORA BARDWELL

Through every high and low, win and loss, achievement and disappointment, Dora celebrated, encouraged, and sympathized with them in person and in spirit. This included her nieces and nephews, Greg (Madelyn) Souerdike, Margaret Demby, Roberta Demby, Kiply Drew, Leslie Shobe, Michol Jones, and Stephanie Greenwell. Dora loved them like her own children.

COMMISSIONERS

Auditor Norris also reported that there are issues with the central air in the downstairs courtroom area. She said not only is it hot, but they are also having humidity problems. It was noted that the new air conditioning units were replaced last year so the company that installed them is trying to resolve the issue. Auditor Norris said she is unsure if there is an issue with the ductwork going into the downstairs area. Commissioner George said the company last year only replaced the units on the building but didn't do anything with the ductwork. Auditor Norris said she doesn't need the commissioners to make a decision on anything at this time, she just wanted to make them aware that there is an issue, and they are trying to figure it out.

Auditor Norris also discussed the issue they are having with the interior entrance doors at the courthouse not opening properly. She said a few companies have looked at the doors to see if they could be fixed however one company said they can't do it and the other said they are too busy. She said she did receive a quote from a company in Franklin. The commissioners discussed whether they need to just replace the doors since they have had so much trouble with them. Commissioner George said they could discuss that further however they need to find someone to get them working now. He said he believes he remembers a company from Jasper that does work on automatic doors. He said he will see if he can track down that firm.

G2

By Gordon Grindstaff

As a writer, I consider myself an observer of the human condition casting about to find the humor in my observations. But let me tell you, there is not a lot of humor floating about the world these days. "It used to be easy," I said to a friend of mine. "Some stories would practically write themselves but not anymore."

"Well then, write about something else, maybe something that annoys you," he said. Annoyances, eh? It seems like the older I get, the more things tend to annoy me. Maybe not a bad idea to write something; get it off my chest, as it were.

So dear readers, here I am, feverishly creating a list of things that annoy me. I already have several; roadside trash, TV lawyers, fast food drive-thrus, our cat, people trying to buy my house, disappearing crackers, that guy with the Emu and the use of the words 'greivous' and 'irregardless'.

All of these are worthy subjects that I may get to in time but for now, I want to talk about the item at the top of my list; the telephone, now known as just 'the phone'. I have no idea what happened to the 'tele' part.

Thanks to technology, the telephone that used to be my friend has now become my enemy. The introduction of the menu driven automatic answering phone system has become a nightmare. It used to be that when I needed someone or something, I would pick up the phone, a real human being would answer and together, we would quickly accomplish whatever it was I needed to do.

No more. Now I get some anonymous voice telling me to 'please listen carefully as our menu options have changed.' These companies are flattering themselves if they think I have memorized their menu options. Why are they changing these menu options in the first place? Is it just to keep us on our toes?

Then when you have finally chosen one of the options, we're informed that 'We are experiencing heavier than normal call volume.' (1) followed by the supreme insult to my intelligence: "but your call is very important to us". Oh really? I don't believe it is. If my call was that important, someone would be answering the phone.

I know it's only old folks like me that are annoyed by this; younger people aren't bothered; they have no idea that it wasn't always this way. In the middle of the 20th century, telephones were our friends and were used to talk to other people. We had telephone books with names, addresses and phone numbers. And not everyone had the luxury of a telephone, there was lots of running to the neighbor's home for those folks

I don't remember when our family got ours, but the first telephone that I remember in our home on Dewey St. in Loogootee would have been around 1950. I can still see that phone in my mind: it was a brown box hanging on the wall in our kitchen, a receiver was attached to the left side and on the right side was a crank handle that you turned to get the operator's attention.

Our phone required the assistance of a telephone operator to get anything done. When you turned the crank, one of the dozen or so operators -one of whom was my mom - would say 'number please'. If you needed information on a phone number or wanted to make a collect call, they would also help you with that.

Interestingly enough, my wife Susie, who's only 2 years younger than me, grew up in the big city with a dial telephone. Why didn't my town? I don't know but I'm glad they didn't. My mom would have been out of a job.

I left Loogootee headed for the big city in 1963 and the operators were still busy saying 'number please' to the town's citizens. 10 months later, Susie and I were married, and we had our own telephone and telephone number. As the years went on, our family was growing and even though one phone was enough, the Bell Telephone Company convinced us we needed not just one phone, we needed one in every room with different models in different colors and they were more than happy to rent them to us. (2)

It wasn't all peaches and cream with this phone arrangement. Don't tell anyone but we never managed to keep up with the Jones's when it came to phones. Much to my shame, we never had a model 701B 'Princess' phone.

My telephone story went full circle when, in the late 1970's, we had a phone installed on the wall in our kitchen. It wasn't a brown box with a crank on the side; this one was green, had a lighted dial mounted on the front and had a 10-foot cord attached to the receiver so you could walk around the room. (3) It wasn't a Princess phone, but it was the next best thing.

And with that folks, as Paul Harvey would say "Now you know the rest of the story".

G2 notes:

- 1: Heavier call volumes, my eye. It's much cheaper to put us on hold than it is to hire someone to answer the phone.
- 2: And thus, the age of consumerism was born.
- 3: I thought that 10-foot cord was great but little did I know that I would end up spending innumerable hours trying to untangle the damn thing.

PURE COUNTRY

Throwback

"He doesn't sit well." This was the comment that I heard mentioned about a gentleman named Charlie on a recent trip to Missouri. I thought about it for a while and asked the person that said it what he meant. He said "Charlie has to be moving and accomplishing something all the time. He is one of our best production managers, but if a meeting is dragging on it isn't unusual for him to just get up and leave." I thought about this for a while and realized that I don't sit well either. Later on, meeting Charlie, I rode with him in his truck out to visit a farm we were looking at. Charlie was a big guy, had played football at a college in Arkansas and seemed like the kind of guy you didn't want to mess with. He laughed when I said I had heard "he didn't sit well." He said he had realized early in life that he had a menacing appearance (think of one of those fake pro wrestlers and that sums up Charlie's appearance) and he might as well use it to his advantage even though he turned out to have a very gentle nature about him and was far more likely to help someone up than knock them down.

There are some kids (especially little boys) that don't "sit well" either. I know I didn't when I was little. Most of us learn to control it because our society or workplace demands us to "sit well." None of our little grandkids sit particularly well. I am kind of glad they don't, even though it drives others crazy. It just isn't a realistic expectation for little kids to be quiet all the time. Most of the time when we want that type of behavior, they have no idea what is going on, yet we expect them to pay attention and "sit well."

Last weekend we visited our son, daughter-in-law, and granddaughter at their home north of Lafayette. By the time we left we had completely painted the exterior of their house, mowed the yard, pruned some landscaping and enjoyed every minute of it. On the way home we agreed that we were "good tired", meaning we had used the time to help accomplish things that they needed done, played around while doing it, and in doing so hadn't felt like we were doing anything we didn't want to be doing.

Most volunteer work can make us feel "good tired." Martin County has many individuals that volunteer their time and talent in a way they deem worthy. It bothers me some that regardless of the organization and its mission, there are always some who expect it to be done better or for the volunteers to do even more. As we work through a recession and budget changes the volunteers become even more valuable than ever. They often work at thankless tasks and then sometimes find themselves defending their efforts. That doesn't seem right to me.

Charlie showed us around the farm we were visiting and ended by saying that "If we were finished, he had other more pressing things to do." I was glad to have met him and witness someone else who "doesn't sit well."

I just saw my first goldenrod blooms for the year, and right on time, my eyes are sticky, and watering and my nose is running. However, the two events are not really related. It seems that I repeat this explanation annually, but I still hear people saying that the goldenrod gives them hay fever.

To understand the situation, we must discuss the different ways plants are pollinated. Some plants release their pollen into the air and depend on the wind to carry it and complete the pollination process. In other plants, the pollen is carried from one plant to another by pollinators, including insects, birds and other animals. It is those plants that release pollen into the air that cause hay fever symptoms in people.

If a restaurant wants to attract people, the owners put up a sign. Flashing neon signs get the attention of would-be diners. Flowers play the same role in the realm of plants. The flowers advertise the presence of nectar, and as pollinators stop in to eat, they get pollen on them, which they carry to the next flower they visit. Such pollens are generally larger than those released into the air, and usually are a little sticky. Since they are heavy and sticky, they are not released into the air and are not the cause of allergy symptoms. In general, flowering plants do not cause hay fever!

That being said, some people develop specific allergies that may be triggered by the scent of flowers, but such symptoms are specific sensitivities and not true hay fever allergies. Some people also have tactile allergies to the sap of plants, usually resulting in skin rashes instead of hay fever symptoms.

So why does the sighting of the bright yellow flowers of goldenrod signal the start of allergy season? Is it all in our minds? Not at all. It is simply that goldenrod happens to bloom at the same time that ragweed blooms. Ragweed flowers are tiny and green, so they are not showy and advertising for pollinators. They release their pollens into the air and are the major cause of hay fever in the Midwest. Another plant that is air-pollinated is corn. When you see the tassels on the corn, you may find yourself having allergy symptoms. Grasses and many weeds also release pollens into the air, and the beautiful goldenrod gets the blame, because it is more noticeable.

The oft-maligned goldenrod is actually a beneficial plant for the eco-system. In Indiana, there are more than twenty species in the genus Solidago, with one for just about every site. Some tolerate dry soil, while others thrive in wet conditions. Some are only about two feet tall, while others top out over six feet tall. The flowers have many forms, but all have that beautiful bright yellow color to attract the pollinators. The goldenrods are essential for late summer and fall pollinators, providing the energy needed for some to migrate and supplying the food that others need to get them through the winter months.

As noted, the latex sap of Solidago may cause rashes for some people, but that latex has been investigated as a replacement for rubber, and research continues into other possible uses.

Meanwhile, the flying pollen of common and giant ragweed continues to cause watery eyes, runny noses, scratchy throats and sneezing. I encourage efforts to cut or pull those plants before they get to bloom stage. It is not likely that we can get them all, but reducing the numbers will help keep the air clean.

DNR asks for feedback on accessibility at properties statewide

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources invites Hoosiers to share their experiences with accessibility at DNR properties across the state.

An online, five-question survey is now available at on.IN.gov/2024-guest-survey. It can be completed in about five minutes.

Creating a welcoming environment for all guests while retaining natural experiences is a key priority for DNR. The department's new accessibility webpage at on.IN.gov/dnr-accessibility provides information on accessible activities like visiting beaches and pools, fishing, hunting, wildlife viewing, exploring trails, and more.

"Exploring Indiana's great outdoors is a pastime that must be available to everyone," said Dan Bortner, DNR director. "It's exciting to see people find new experiences to enjoy through the accessibility webpage we launched this year. Through feedback we receive on this survey, we will continue working to improve accessibility and help overcome barriers that may prevent people from experiencing Indiana's incredible natural and cultural wonders."

As DNR adds and refines accessible activities based on feedback from this survey, the webpage will continue to be updated with new activities and places to explore.

Hoosier farmers, landowners break conservation record for third year

In a remarkable achievement for sustainable agriculture, the latest results from the Conservation Tillage Transect survey reveal that 1.7 million acres of farmland are now under living cover across all crops in Indiana. This significant milestone underscores the increasing adoption of cover crops by farmers, driven by their multiple benefits for soil health, water management and overall farm productivity.

"Protecting soil, our most vital natural resource, is top of mind for our Indiana farmers and year after year our farmers are breaking their own conservation records" said Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch, Indiana's Secretary of Agriculture and Rural Development. "Through the implementation of cover crops and other conservation efforts, farmers are ensuring our land and water resources remain healthy and productive for years to come."

Overwintering living covers (i.e. - cover crops and small grains, like wheat) are known for their environmental benefits. Cover crops and small grains help increase organic matter in the soil and improve overall soil health by adding living roots to the soil more months of the year. Cover crops also improve water infiltration into the soil, while other covers, like legumes serve as natural fertilizers.

Although the conservation transect does not differentiate between cover crops and small grains, Indiana farmers typically plant fewer than 300,000 acres of small grains annually, so cover crops vastly dominate the 1.7 million estimated acres. Apart from corn and soybeans, cover crops are planted on more acres than any other commodity crop in Indiana. Cover crops are typically planted in the fall after harvest and designed to protect the soil and keep roots in the ground throughout the winter, which improves soil health and helps filter water runoff.

"These results are very encouraging," said Damarys Mortenson, state conservationist for USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service in Indiana. "The adoption of cover crops on such a large scale indicates that farmers are recognizing the long-term benefits of these practices for both their land and the en-

Farmers like Todd Armstrong, who operates a 1,100-acre farm in Washington County, have seen firsthand the advantages of cover crops.

"The water holding capacity and tilth of the ground has just improved so much and my neighbors have even seen that," said Armstrong. "Neighbors that worked ground every year have stopped and started incorporating cover crops because they've seen how good it has worked for us."

As a result of the cover crops and other overwintering covers planted last year, it is estimated that 1.8 million tons of sediment was prevented from entering Indiana's waterways, which would fill about 18.4 thousand train freight cars.

The conservation survey also showed that about 69 percent of row crop acres were not tilled and about 17 percent had employed reduced tillage over winter, after the 2023 harvest. This early spring survey is not intended to quantify pre-planting tillage.

Despite the clear benefits, there are challenges to the widespread adoption of cover crops, including the initial cost of seeds and the need for additional management skills. However, various federal and state programs offer financial incentives and technical assistance to help farmers incorporate cover crops into their operations. One such initiative that helped contribute to the successful year for cover crops in 2023 was the Cover Crop Premium Discount Program (CCPDP). It is a program that provides a discount on crop insurance for planting cover crops. CCPDP assisted landowners in planting about 19 thousand acres of cover crops in 2023.

The conservation transect is a visual survey of cropland in the state. It was conducted between March and May 2024 by members of the Indiana Conservation Partnership, including the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, the Indiana State Department of Agriculture, Indiana's Soil and Water Conservation Districts and Purdue Extension, as well as Earth Team volunteers, to show a more complete story of the state's conservation efforts.

Franklin P. and Arthur W. Perdue Foundation Awards $10,000 to Youth First for Daviess and Martin County youth

The Franklin P. and Arthur W. Perdue Foundation continues to invest in the health and well-being of Daviess and Martin County youth and families. A grant award of $10,000 was recently presented to Youth First, Inc. to provide mental health support and substance misuse prevention through their school-based student assistance program.

The Franklin P. and Arthur W. Perdue Foundation, the charitable giving partner of Perdue Farms, awards grants to 501(c)(3) organizations that benefit communities where large numbers of their associates live and work and focuses on strengthening communities in the following areas: agriculture and the environment, education, fighting hunger and poverty, health and social services, and public safety.

The grant is part of Perdue Farms Delivering Hope To Our Neighbors® outreach focused on improving quality of life and building strong communities.

“At Perdue, we are committed to enhancing the communities where our associates live and work,” said Sara Norfolk, complex human resource manager for Perdue Farms in Washington. “We are proud to continue to invest in Youth First’s program to make sure no child falls through the cracks when it comes to mental health care.”

The grant to Youth First will allow for continued mental health support for approximately 4,350 students in 11 Daviess and Martin County schools. Youth First partners with 125 schools across 14 Indiana counties to embed prevention programs and over 90 skilled mental health professionals (primarily master’s level social workers), bilingual support personnel, and parent engagement coordinators in school buildings, where they provide extra mental health support for students and prevention coaching for parents and teachers.

Youth First Founder Dr. Bill Wooten was present at the check presentation and shared why he started the organization: “It was important to me that all children receive this type of support, so they remain healthy, hopeful and focused on school.”

Youth First Mental Health Professionals build caring relationships, foster readiness for positive change, and boost resiliency along with other valuable life skills. Research shows these protective factors are the keys to effective prevention of negative outcomes for young people. The organization’s positive work and strategies are driving growth, with more schools seeking Youth First’s help to address the growing need for mental health support for students.
