County council discussess next year salary increases, income tax decrease

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT

Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Council discussed the 2022 budget at their meeting Monday night, August 2.

Auditor Bobbie Abel asked the council if they still want to hold their September meeting on September 13 or if they want to move it back to September 7 since budget hearings will no longer be held. Council Member Buck Stiles asked when the public hearing will be held on the 2022 budget and Abel replied that will be October 4 at 6 p.m. with adoption on October 18 at 6 p.m. The council decided to keep the regular meeting on September 13 at 6 p.m.

The two percent raise for county employees was discussed. Council Member Stiles asked if the county's financial advisor will tell the council if he feels the propriation request for $370.40 from the raise isn't possible for next year. Auditor Abel replied that he will however so far, he has said the county is where they need to be on the 2022 budget. A 10 percent decrease in income tax revenue is expected for next year, however.

Auditor Abel told the council that Shoals Town Council Member Cary Albright had a death in the family so was unable to attend the meeting to discuss the Town of Shoals' request for help with upcoming wastewater projects. Clerk-Treasurer Sierra Rutledge had approached the commissioners at their last meeting asking if the county would consider giving the town some of the American Recovery Act funds. Asking the county for help will add points to their grant application. The council agreed to take the request under consideration.

The council approved an additional ap-general fund from Sheriff Travis Roush to cover salary increases for the new positions created in the jail – assistant jail commander and assistant dispatch commander. The new positions took effect August 1. The council approved the additional money.

The sheriff, who was unable to attend the meeting, left an update on the communication tower upgrades with the auditor. Abel said the sheriff reported that VEI Communications was hired to do the upgrades for $248,900. They are moving forward with the work to hopefully have it completed before winter. The funds are coming from the statewide 911 account.

Council Members Randy Wininger and Sherri Bowling agreed that the upgrades are needed to improve safety in the coun-

Man wanted out of Michigan for prison escape apprehended in Martin County

On July 24, the Martin County Sheriff's Office received an anonymous call about a subject that was seen in southern Martin County who the caller believed was from the State of Michigan and a danger to Martin County citizens.

Martin County Deputy Jonah Shaw spoke with the anonymous caller and gained further information and a vehicle description. After a short investigation, Shaw learned that the subject in question, Jacob Tracey Long, 28, of Roseville, Michigan, was wanted out of Michigan by the department of corrections on a prison escape warrant with an original charge of armed robbery. Deputy Shaw contacted Master Trooper Jarrod Lents to assist.

Deputy Shaw and Trooper Lents located Long driving the described vehicle with a Michigan license plate on Rutherford Road in southern Martin County. The vehicle turned into a driveway on Rutherford Road.

Deputy Shaw and Trooper Lents conducted a felony traffic stop and apprehended Jacob Long without incident. While apprehending the suspect, Martin County Dispatch informed officers the vehicle had been stolen out of Michigan. While securing the vehicle, Trooper Lents located, in plain view, paraphernalia and marijuana.

Long was arrested by Deputy Shaw and transported by Trooper Lents to the Martin County Jail on the following charges: auto theft, a Level 6 Felony; possession of marijuana, a Class A Misdemeanor; possession of paraphernalia, a Class C Misdemeanor and a Michigan warrant for prison escape.

The Martin County Sheriff's Office would like to thank the alert citizen who made the call and remind everyone that anonymous reports can be made at any

$1.7M grant to pilot AI student education for rural Indiana middle schoolers

Naval Surface Warfare Center, Crane more than Netflix and Spotify curating Division, and Indiana University were awarded $1.7 million to collaborate on artificial intelligence programming for rural middle school students. The Office of the Secretary of Defense funded the AI pilot program, which will begin this summer.

NSWC Crane is teaming up with two IU schools: the School of Education and the Luddy School of Informatics, Computing and Engineering, both at IU Bloomington. NSWC Crane and IU received the National Defense Education Program Award to pilot the program, titled AI Goes Rural: Middle School Artificial Intelligence Education, to Indiana middle schools.

Tina Closser, the science, technology, engineering and math program coordinator for NSWC Crane, said the program will focus on how AI is involved in students' lives and the ethics surrounding AI.

"The expertise that IU is bringing to the AI Goes Rural program is exciting, and we are thrilled to have them as a partner to bring this curriculum to regional students," Closser said. "People, including kids, think AI is alien and science fiction. They don't realize how it is already integrated into their lives.

"AI is a hot topic right now, and it is movies or music for the user. This pilot program is unique; I've never seen anything like this. There's a lot out there about the technical side of AI and how it works, but we will be talking about what AI does and how it affects their lives."

Jeff Zaleski, interim vice provost for research at IU Bloomington, said he is pleased that IU is continuing its strong partnership with NSWC Crane.

"The involvement of the faculty from two of our schools points to IU Bloomington's deep strengths in areas related to artificial intelligence, and the application of this expertise to the lives of rural Hoosier students is especially exciting," Zaleski said. "To pilot this program, many letters of support were received from across the Department of Defense, including the Joint Artificial Intelligence Center, U.S. Special Operations Command and U.S. Central Command. The letters make note of the critical importance of developing the AI talent pipeline.

Raj Acharya, associate vice president for research for AI innovation at IU, said the AI Goes Rural curriculum is designed to help students understand what AI can and cannot do.

"We will educate students on AI and machine-learning techniques by designing modules that students will experiment with under varying conditions," Acharya said. "This will help them understand not only the potential of routine AI methodologies used, but also their limitations such as bias and ethical considerations."

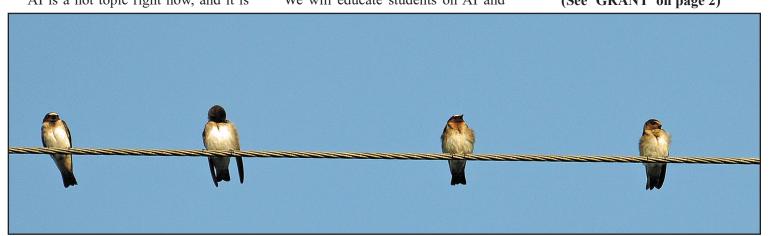

Closser said the curriculum and training are intended to be scalable across the nation, with broad applications.

"We wanted to create something that anyone around the country can implement, copy and paste," she said.

A report from the Committee on STEM Education of the National Science and Technology Council said that investing in STEM education and outreach is critical for several reasons: The demand for STEM professionals will exceed the expected supply over the next decade; our nation's students are "middle of the pack" when evaluated against other countries; and participation and achievement of underrepresented groups such as women and minorities are lower than desired.

The STEM talent pipeline is part of the Department of Defense's STEM Strategic Plan and includes promoting an "increased participation of underserved

The red-tail is the largest hawk, usually weighing between 2 and 4 pounds. As with most raptors, the female is nearly 1/3 larger than the male and may have a wingspan of 56 inches. The red-tailed hawk is capable of "kiting," holding still against the wind on set wings, much like a kite tugging against string. It's one of the few birds able to do so.

groups in STEM activities and education programs." Closser said this and several other factors led to the development of this program.

"As our STEM team and IU were in the brainstorming process, we considered the rural, underserved area," Closser said. "There's a large percentage of students that attend Title I schools in the area, or schools that under the Department of Education have high numbers or high percentages of children from low-income families.

"We have talented people in the area, but the number seeking STEM degrees isn't high. We have an opportunity through this program and programs like this to show kids what options they have and what they can do as a career."

ditor Abel why TIF district funds cannot be used to pay the county's economic development director, Angie Risacher. Auditor Abel replied that she is almost positive salaries cannot be paid with TIF funds. She told the council that a TIF class was to be held on Tuesday for any member who wanted to know more about how those funds could be spent. Several council members asked if the class would be recorded so they could watch it another time. Auditor Abel said she would have to check but she knows they are planning to use the class to train LEDO (local economic development organizations) in the state.

The council also approved a transfer for the veteran service office of $50 from travel expenses to office expenses.

So, I thought perhaps a little humor should be added to the mix. I wish both students and teachers the best of luck because all things considered, you are in the world's finest business. I miss it every

Consumer alert: Products recalled in July

Attorney General Todd Rokita strongly encourages all Hoosiers who purchased consumer products that were recalled in July to take advantage of the remedies available to them.

"No Hoosier should have to accept paying for a faulty product that is defective or does not work properly," Attorney General Rokita said. "If you recently purchased a good or item that is in any way defective, you should immediately find out what the company that made the product is offering as a solution and take advantage of it."

According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the following consumer products were recalled in July:

Removable Foam Facial Interfaces for Oculus Quest 2 Virtual Reality Headsets from Facebook Technologies

Model Years 2020 and 2021 Can-AM Defender HD10 side-by-side vehicles from BRP

Rechargeable Handheld Fans from Rite

FARMING & OUTDOORS

Purdue

It is time to get busy on the autumn garden. We still have several weeks of summer, but it is time to plant crops that will mature and be harvested in the cooler days to come.

Perhaps the most planted fall crop in this area is turnips. Turnips may be harvested for greens when the tops are only a couple of weeks old. They will begin forming their bulbs in a month or so and may be harvested any time. It just depends on how large you like your turnips. When planted in the fall, turnips are less likely to bolt than those planted in the spring, so the harvest time may extend into winter. They can take some frost and the bulbs will remain usable until a hard

By now, the spring greens and peas are done, and that real estate is perfect for turnips. If you had early potatoes and have dug them, you may plant turnips there also. Actually, you may plant turnips about anywhere you have soil that is not growing another crop. Planting is also easy. Most people do not plant turnips in rows, but simply broadcast the seeds in a bed. Mixing the seed in a granulated fertilizer accomplishes a dual purpose. It helps space the seeds for growing area and also feeds the crop.

There is plenty of reason to plant turnips. Even if you do not like turnips, they are good for next year's garden. They make a good cover crop that can be turned into the soil next spring. They may also be used to feed livestock and I have known many people who plant turnips in plots adjacent to wooded areas just to feed the deer and other wildlife.

There are several other crops that do well when planted now for fall harvest. Most salad greens do better now than when planted in the spring. Spring growing of such crops often get bitter and bolt when the weather warms. In the cooler days of fall, such crops will produce for a longer harvest period. Cole crops, including cabbage and broccoli also do well as fall crops, as do cooking greens, such as spinach, mustard and kale.

Oriental greens such as pak choy, bok choy and Chinese cabbage also do well when planted for fall harvest. Micheli-type Chinese cabbage stores very well in a refrigerator vegetable crisper, so, if you have the room in the fridge, you may enjoy this healthy snack through the win-

Unfortunately, the hardest part of growing these crops is finding the seed at

Patoka Lake Cleanup Day set for August 28

Patoka Lake will host a cleanup day on Saturday, August 28 across the property beginning at 8 a.m. An increase in visitation this summer has meant more trash.

Registration for the event will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m., and cleanup will run from registration until 11 a.m. Meet an event coordinator at Painter's Creek, Osborn, South Lick Fork, Lick Fork, Newton-Stewart or South ramps to get trash bags and gloves. Signs will be posted to guide volunteers to cleanup locations. Plan to wear close-toed walking shoes, bug spray, and long pants. Participants will be placed in locations based on family groups.

Volunteers will receive a ticket for a free entrance to Patoka, a free lunch, a goodie bag, and a chance to win door prizes.

For more information, contact the Patoka Lake Nature Center at 812-685-2447.

this time of the year. Many garden centers have taken seeds off the sales floor and even those who have kept the seeds out often do not stock some of the specialty seeds. Some mail-order companies will ship quickly for an extra fee, so you may have the seeds in time to get them

In addition to the traditional fall crops, many summer crops that mature quickly can still be planted for a late harvest. Most seed packets have a "days to maturity" statement. If that number is less than 100 days, you will probably get a crop if planting seeds now. Of course, when frost threatens in the fall, you then may take steps to cover and protect crops that still need time to mature. The advantage to planting summer crops late is that disease and insect cycles may be completed, and you may be able to get green beans without beetle damage.

Ornamental gardeners may also plant for the autumn season. Of course, you will be planting bulbs for spring blooms, but you may also plant seeds now for fall flowers. Just like the veggies, seed packets will have a maturity time. It is important to have plenty of flowers in bloom in the fall to provide the nectar needed by hummingbirds and monarch butterflies for their migration flights. Plants some late cosmos, zinnias and marigolds to entice the butterflies and hummingbirds to visit your garden as they pass through

Application deadline nears for state park deer management hunts

Indiana DNR's Division of State Parks is seeking volunteer hunters to participate in deer management hunts at 17 locations this fall.

Properties where hunting will be allowed with firearms only (i.e., any firearm legal to take deer on public land in Indiana) are Chain O'Lakes, Indiana Dunes, Lincoln, Ouabache, Pokagon, Potato Creek, Shakamak, Spring Mill, Summit Lake, Tippecanoe River, Turkey Run, Versailles, and Whitewater Memorial state parks, and Cave River Valley Natural Area.

Properties where hunting will be allowed by archery only (i.e., any archery equipment legal to take deer in Indiana) are Clifty Falls and Fort Harrison state parks, and Trine State Recreation Area.

The dates on which hunting will be allowed on these properties are November 15-16 and November 29-30.

Volunteers can apply online at on.IN. gov/reservedhunt, where additional guidelines can be found under State Park

Applications must be received by 11:59 p.m. on August 9.

Management hunts are carried out exclusively to achieve an ecological objective — to ensure balanced and healthy natural communities for all plants and wildlife within park boundaries.

Successful applicants are allowed to take up to three deer, only one of which can be antlered.

Deer harvested at a state park management hunt are not counted toward regular statewide bag limits. "Trophy hunting", i.e., passing on does or smaller bucks to wait to take a larger buck, is counter to the ecological objective of state park management hunts and is strongly dis-

Provide input on fish and wildlife regulations

The Indiana DNR Division of Fish & Wildlife wants to hear your ideas on fishing, hunting, trapping, and other fish and wildlife-related regulations in Indiana, including special permits regarding those topics.

Through September 15, you can use a convenient online form to contribute ideas and provide input on issues the DNR has identified for consideration.

The form is at: on.IN.gov/gotinput

The form – 'Got INput?" – not only allows you to comment on ideas from the DNR Division of Fish & Wildlife, but also allows you to propose your own ideas on any fish and wildlife regulation

Got INput users must register with a username and a password.

Input and ideas can also be mailed to: Indiana DNR Division of Fish & Wildlife, Attn: Got Input, 402 W. Washington St., Room W273, Indianapolis, IN

After September 16, DNR staff will evaluate all comments and determine which ideas to forward for consideration by the Natural Resources Commission.
