The new St. Vincent de Paul store in Shoals held a grand opening on Tuesday, August 27. The new store is located across from the Martin County Courthouse in the former recycling center. According to St. Vincent de Paul representative Dan Gregory, the store will be open on a trial basis to see how profitable it is. If it proves to be a successful endeavor, St. Vincent will weatherize the building and purchase it from Martin County Solid Waste. The Shoals location will mostly carry clothing with occasional household items, toys, etc. They will not accept donations at the Shoals location, only in Loogootee. The hours for the Shoals location are Tuesday through Friday, noon to 5 p.m. and Saturday 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Shoals recycling center has been relocated across the parking lot in the garage that housed the veterans' van. From left to right above are June Eckerle, recycling center employee; Loogootee Mayor Noel Harty, Joe Williams and Keith Greenwell, with St. Vincent de Paul; Solid Waste Director January Roush, Alecia Wiscaver, St. Vincent employee; Martin County Alliance Director Tim Kinder, Shoals Town Council Member Cecil Ragsdale, Dan Gregory with St. Vincent de Paul; an employee with St. Vincent, Sherry Wade, with Old National Bank; Martin County Prosecutor Aureola Wright and Shoals Clerk-Treasurer Sierra Rutledge.

Commissioners discuss IU partnership, cyber security

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Commissioners met Tuesday, August 27.

Community Corrections Director Kathy Collins presented a memorandum of understanding with Indiana University to provide three college students to the county for social work and addiction counseling. Collins explained that the students are on their way to achieving their bachelor's or master's degree and through communication with Indiana University, those students will be working with Martin County free of charge. Collins said gas money will be provided to the students for coming to the county three days a week. She said they are also working closely with the Samaritan Center who currently provides services to the county. Collins explained that a licensed social worker is required to oversee the students and IU will provide one if one is not available.

County Attorney Dave Lett recommended the commissioners look into getting insurance related to cyber security. He said that other government units are getting locked out of their systems by ransom hackers who require the county to pay them to be able to again access their systems. He suggested asking German American's Dave Welsh, the county's insurance agent of record, to look into pricing for a policy. Auditor Bobbie

Abel said Welsh has actually already approached her about it and is getting cost estimates. Lett also recommended the county look into hiring an IT director to oversee all the county's government computer systems. He said other counties do it, including Daviess County, and it has served them very well. It was estimated that the cost of having an IT director would be around $75,000 a year, with benefits. Auditor Abel said it is too late to change the budget for 2020 but an additional appropriation could be made by the commissioners if they want to go that route. No decision was made.

Prosecutor Aureola Wright told the commissioners that she has found another (See 'COMMISSIONERS' on page 2)

NSWC Crane collaborates with Purdue and a UK-based university

These are not your average college courses. This is a hard-hitting, relevant advanced-degree program that drives home specific defense engineering and technology skills necessary for the professional development of the workforce," says Adam Parsley, a Division Manager at Naval Surface Warfare Center, Crane Division (NSWC Crane).

Purdue University and Cranfield University have partnered to support the Department of Defense (DoD) by developing a tailored master's degree program at NSWC Crane. The jointly delivered, or dual master's degree, will be in Defense Engineering and Technology with a concentration in Expeditionary Warfare once officially finalized. Purdue and Cranfield Universities signed a Memorandum of Agreement in October of 2018 to deliver the program. Purdue recently completed its first offerings this summer – a course on Data Science and Analytics and a course titled Science and Engineering of Energetic Materials. This collaboration between NSWC Crane, Purdue, and Cranfield is an innovative approach to fill a workforce development need.

"Scientists and engineers learn fundamentals in their undergraduate work, but they have no experience applying that knowledge directly to defense systems," says Parsley. "When new engineers come to work at NSWC Crane, it could be their first-time applying principles of heat transfer to ammunition or weapon design or applying physics of semiconductors to night vision sensors. With this Dual Master's Degree, that fundamental science and engineering knowledge is refined and sharpened in these highly relevant and applied courses. Students gain insight on the science and math at work in defense technology, development work of the past, and potentially where to head with new research."

NSWC Crane is a naval laboratory and a field activity of Naval Sea Systems Command (NAVSEA). Crane, located in the heart of landlocked, southern Indiana, is one of ten Warfare Centers across the country and the only federal lab in the Hoosier state. NAVSEA, with a force of 74 thousand personnel, engineers, builds, buys, and maintains the U.S. Navy's ships, submarines, and their combat systems. Of the many roles and responsibilities of

Public meeting to be held for proposed two-county trail

The Daviess-Martin Trail Committee has been working to create a vision for trails and funding of trails for the region and would like to unveil their vision. The committee is inviting the public, industry and elected officials to the All Saints Church at the corner of 900E and 100N in Cannelburg. The meeting will take place Thursday, September 12 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. The meeting will be an open house style event where citizens will be walked through the proposed project and future vision. Residents will be allowed to ask questions, express ideas and have conversations with committee members.

The proposed project being reviewed at the meeting is an eight-foot-wide asphalt trail from Loogootee to Montgomery with a future vision of connecting to the City of Washington. The trail will allow for non-motorized travel separate from the roadway. The route will follow county right of way or be located on willing landowners' property. It is the desire to run the trail along existing county roads in order to maximize safety and make it easier to access for emergency services as well as not interrupt farm ground. Residents can get onto the trail at any intersection but there is also a proposed set of three trailheads that will be located at or near the Gasthof Amish Village, All Saints Church, and the Loogootee School Corporation. The total mileage of the project is approximately 7.5 miles.

The media students at Loogootee Middle/High School have created social media pages that will allow for questions to be asked and answered about the trail. The pages are Facebook: Dm Trail Project Twitter: @TrailDm Instagram: @dmtrailproject.

of office and laboratory space, Crane provides a distinct advantage in sensors and communications, mobility, and special munitions, and weapons.

NSWC Crane is a top employer in the state with a workforce of more than three thousand, 73 percent consisting of scientists, engineers, and technicians. Crane's workforce includes more than 600 Master's and over 100 Doctorate Degrees.

Parsley, who helped lead this dual master's initiative for Crane, says there are significant advantages to combining the expertise of Purdue and Cranfield to further the education of Crane's workforce.

"Purdue is a global leader in engineering and technology and Cranfield leads in defense engineering," says Parsley. "This program really allows our workforce to continue their STEM education, hone their technical skills, and be better prepared to tackle current and future challenges the warfighter faces."

Cranfield University is a United Kingdom-based postgraduate university focused on technology and management. Dr. Amer Hameed, the Director, Cranfield Defence and Security—Technology and professor in Defence Engineering for Cranfield University, says the institution offers specialized programs in defense engineering.

"Cranfield is a university that has defense in its DNA," says Dr. Hameed. "The advantage of this program is you have two leading universities working together which will provide the engineering fundamentals from Purdue, while the system level development engineering and concept specifics will come from Cranfield."

Dr. Hameed says Cranfield specifically designs courses to provide solutions to real-world problems.

"Our courses are continuously updated based on evolving threats and technologies to counter those threats," says Dr. Hameed. "As a result, the engineering and technology taught and included in our coursework are supported by real-life, operational examples."

Dr. Stephen Beaudoin is a Professor in the Davidson School of Engineering and the Director of Purdue Energetics Research Center at Purdue University. He has also helped lead this dual master's program at Crane.

"By combining Cranfield's tremendous expertise with that of Purdue's, students get a very broad experience in theoretical, conceptual, practical, and applied science and engineering – the whole spectrum," says Dr. Beaudoin. "For example, students can learn about munitions from a Cranfield course and about the energetics of those munitions from Purdue. This partnership provides a unique opportunity to learn critical skills in Defense Engineering and Technology."

Dr. Beaudoin explains the program was created to meet NSWC Crane's needs. In order to support Crane in their national security mission, Purdue organized faculty and tailored coursework in several unique ways to best support Crane's workforce.

"The partnership with Cranfield is unique, but Purdue made other adjustments to support Crane," says Dr. Beaudoin. "All of the courses align with Crane's Expeditionary Warfare Mission Area. We've also brought in the diverse expertise from across Purdue. This interdisciplinary program, although heavily STEM focused, involves faculty and coursework from all colleges at Purdue. The mode of instruction is also unique – we mobilized faculty to go to Crane and teach in an active way; students aren't just sitting and taking notes for eight hours. We also organized the coursework to take place in one week in a flexible degree format to meet the needs of the individual student."

Parsley says that the design of the courses was critical to support Crane's mission.

"For a typical advanced degree, an employee may be offsite for an extended period of time," says Parsley. "We needed our workforce here at Crane to execute the mission for the warfighter. With this program, they don't have to go to campus for a year or take night classes. They can make time for a weeklong course. It may be rigorous, but it's the right combination of time spent learning and time spent executing their job."

Doreen Gonzalez-Gaboyan, the Associate Director for Workforce Engagement and NSWC Crane Project Director at Purdue Polytechnic Institute, says the dual degree program is the culmination of a yearlong effort. Gonzalez-Gaboyan led the collaboration for Purdue, which included focus groups and summits to determine the courses, schedule, and learning outcome.

"Purdue has given its commitment to Crane to support its efforts related to national security," says Gonzalez-Gaboyan. "This program is the first of many courses that Purdue faculty will be teaching at WestGate related to degreed programming. It is the intent that Purdue faculty will continue customizing education programming – the Expeditionary Warfare is the first of many majors that will fall under the Masters in Defense Engineering and Technology Degree."

Gonzalez-Gaboyan says taking these undergrads to a master's level is an academic achievement.

"As Indiana's land-grant university, it is Purdue's mission to educate Hoosiers and the workforce," says Gonzalez-Gaboyan. "This education will enable, empower, and equip talented people and create a sustainable talent pipeline. This technically rigorous workforce will become more technically rigorous, and this is instrumental for national security."

The dual master's program sparks collaboration for the students across the DoD. Chris Shaffer, an Engineer at NSWC Crane, participated in recent Cranfield course. He says the course fills a need.

"The impact reaches beyond Crane," says Shaffer. "In the Light Weapon Design by Cranfield, we had students from other services and other warfare centers. Students get to know the equipment, and the better they understand what the equipment is used for, the better they'll be able to support the warfighter."

Parsley says this is just the beginning.

"Now that this program has launched, there could be future research and development opportunities as well as an expansion of the program beyond Expeditionary. There's a lot more to be done, but we've laid the groundwork for future success."

NSWC Crane is a naval laboratory and a field activity of Naval Sea Systems Command (NAVSEA) with mission areas in Expeditionary Warfare, Strategic Missions and Electronic Warfare. The warfare center is responsible for multi-domain, multi-spectral, full life cycle support of technologies and systems enhancing capability to today's Warfighter.

Traffic stop leads to search warrant and arrests

On Sunday, August 25, ISP Senior Trooper Jarrod Lents conducted a traffic stop on Nicholas J. Guy, 40, of Loogootee, on Highway 50 near Loogootee, for a vehicle and moving violation. During an inventory of the vehicle, Trooper Lents located several controlled substance pills, along with a crystal-like substance that field tested positive for methamphetamine and led to Guy's initial arrest.

Due to intelligence gained through ongoing investigations conducted by the Martin County Sheriff's Office, deputies, along with Trooper Lents, conducted an interagency investigation and requested the assistance of Martin County Prosecutor, Aureola Wright, to apply for a search warrant of Guy's residence. While Trooper Lents applied for the search warrant, Martin County Deputies Rob Lents and Johnathan Wells secured the property at 1553 US Highway 50, where Guy was currently residing.

The search warrant for the property was granted by the Honorable Martin Circuit Court Judge Lynne E. Ellis. ISP Trooper Lents, Deputy Lents, and Deputy Wells were joined by ISP Troopers Steve Nolan and T.J. Henning, along with Deputy Larry Gibson and K-9

Spike, and Reserve Deputy Cameron Ochs to assist with the execution of the search warrant for the property.

Upon gaining entry to the residence, Russell Peek, 35, of Loogootee, another resident of the property, was located inside and detained while troopers and deputies searched the residence. During the search, K-9 Spike gave positive indications for the presence of narcotics throughout the residence and property. The search yielded additional methamphetamine, marijuana, digital scales and paraphernalia.

Nicholas Guy was charged with possession of methamphetamine, a Level 6 Felony; maintaining a common nuisance, a Level 6 Felony; possession of marijuana, a Class B Misdemeanor; possession of paraphernalia, a Class C Misdemeanor; and possession of a schedule II controlled substance, a Class A Misdemeanor er $4,414 in money owed to the county by way of reimbursements from the IVD child support fund. She said she is looking at another $10,000 from 2018 that will be reimbursed bringing the total found to $35,000. The money was never claimed from the previous prosecutor. The money goes back into the county's general fund.

Wright also told the commissioners that her new deputy prosecutor has been hired and will start mid-September. She said she is not ready to reveal his name yet as he has not left his current job.

Highway Superintendent Leo Padgett reported that the new tractor and mower the commissioners approved for purchase will not be delivered until the end of the year due to the model that was ordered.

Commissioner Dan Gregory requested that the auditor provide a summary of what money remains in highway department funds at the next commissioners' meeting.

Commissioner Paul George reported that Bunkham Valley Roofing will start with the replacement of the jail roof sometime next week. The courthouse roof has been completed. Attorney Lett recommended that someone walk the roof to make sure the work was completed properly.

Auditor Abel told the commissioners that the county doesn't need to pay for computer and software upgrades for the courthouse offices because the state has agreed to pick up the tab.

Animal Control Officer Hughet reported that there are currently 78 inmates in the jail and 26 of them are from Vigo County. Commissioner Gregory said the jail remodel committee will be meeting Thursday at 3 p.m. to discuss going forward with the remodeling project.

I have had numerous inquiries lately about webworms and bagworms, both of which are actively eating on our trees at this time of the year. I have also had a couple of questions about tent caterpillars, but since they are active in the spring of the year, I suspect those people confused that group of caterpillars with the fall webworms.

Fall webworms are actually the larval or caterpillar form of several species of moths. Earlier in the year, the moths laid eggs, which have now hatched, and the caterpillars have been feeding voraciously. These caterpillars are communal and often huge numbers of them will spin large webs, covering whole limbs of trees. The worms will consume the leaves within the web and will venture out to eat other leaves during the day. While the webs are unsightly, the webworms of late summer and fall actually do not normally cause real damage to the trees they inhabit. The leaves have done their duty and are soon going to fall anyway. If the tree is otherwise healthy, it will leaf out again in the spring.

There are several ways to get rid of the offensive webs. On low branches, one may simply use a stick to collect the silk, exposing the worms to the birds. Some fishermen friends have told me they make good bait also. You may also prune out the affected branch and destroy it. For the high branches, use a hose with a jet setting on the nozzle. Do not use a torch to burn out the webs. The torch will actually do a lot more damage to the tree than the worms have done.

The best way to control webworms is prevention. In early spring, on a day when temperatures will remain above freezing for 24 hours, liberally apply a dormant-oil spray. This oil will suffocate the larvae that have over-wintered will be smothered by the dormant oil. Of course, it would be hard to do this in a forest, so most people just choose to live with the webworms.

Bagworms, on the other hand, are solitary. Each worm will use plant material and other materials, mixed with its own silk to build a sack. Usually the sack will be pointed at the bottom. In a bad infestation, bagworms may cause some damage to the trees they inhabit. Most of the time, though, one may simply hand pick the bags and drop them in a bucket of soapy water. Do this early in the morning or just before dusk to ensure the worm is in its bag. Large infestations may justify the application of an insecticide but choose one that is specific to bagworms and use it only when absolutely necessary. Dormant oil sprays in the spring may deter bagworms, but the oils may discolor the foliage of the evergreen trees which are the preferred trees for bagworms.

Tent caterpillars are another problem entirely. Huge infestations have resulted in the defoliation of entire forests. The tents they build in the spring are found in the branch intersections, as opposed to the outer branches preferred by the fall webworms. Dormant oil sprays may also prevent infestations, but it is difficult to predict when a major outbreak will occur. Watch your trees in the spring and remove the webs whenever you find them. Report major outbreaks to forest service officials immediately. They will determine the course of action that is necessary.

With any pest, use pesticides only when absolutely necessary and follow the label directions carefully. A healthy eco-system will usually provide natural solutions to ordinary outbreaks and the simple steps I have outlined will often be enough to control the pests without resorting to poisonous sprays.

Indiana Archaeology Month starts September 1

The DNR Division of Historic Preservation & Archaeology invites you to celebrate Indiana's past while looking to the future during Indiana Archaeology Month, which begins September 1.

This year is the 24th anniversary of a statewide celebration of archaeology in Indiana. The event started as Indiana Archaeology Week in 1996 and was expanded to a month in 2002.

During archaeology month, people can meet archaeologists and learn about Indiana's fascinating past. A variety of events for all ages will be held by universities, museums, organizations, and individuals throughout Indiana. A schedule and additional information can be found at dnr.IN.gov/historic/3674.htm.

Archaeologists have recorded more than 71,000 sites in Indiana since the early 1800s, helping to shape public understanding of the prehistoric and historic people who also called this land home.

"Archaeology tells us not only about the past but also sheds light about ourselves today and our future," said Cameron Clark, DNR director and state historic preservation officer. "Archaeology month provides a perfect way for Hoosiers to find out how, with programs that are not only educational and informative but also fun."

This year's commemorative poster highlights Evansville and the fact that it is a persistent place. The Angel Mounds site (12Vg1) was a thriving Native American community a thousand years ago. Today, the Evansville area, including Angel Mounds, continues to be an important locale in southwestern Indiana. Long-term occupation of a place is based upon a number of factors and leads to lasting imprints on the landscape.

August's Purdue Land Value Survey shows farmland values dive in Indiana

BY EMMA EA AMBROSE
Purdue University News Service

The August 2019 Purdue Land Value Survey, published in the Purdue Agricultural Economics Report (PAER) by the Department of Agricultural Economics, lays out changes in farmland values and cash rents.

Craig Dobbins, professor of agricultural economics and the survey's author, said both farmland values and cash rents are down across the state of Indiana. The decline indicates changes are still occurring because of the tight margins in crop production.

"It's the same story we've been hearing for the last couple of years: Current returns are not sufficient to support the current level of farmland values and cash rents," Dobbins said. "We're still seeing tight margins, low crop prices and continued fallout from a trade war with China. The future just isn't looking too bright right now."

According to the survey, top quality and average quality farmland decreased in value from last year by 5.3 percent and 0.9 percent, respectively. Poor quality farmland remained stable with almost no change on a statewide basis.

Cash rents also experienced a decline. In 2018, the statewide average increased for all land qualities. This survey reported a decline across all land qualities. Top quality farmland experienced a 4.6 percent decline in cash rents, followed by a 1.4 percent and 1.2 percent decline in average and poor-quality farmland, respectively.

"An interesting thing about these results is what's happening to good quality farmland," Dobbins said. "Frequently, you hear top quality farmland is better at retaining its value than poor quality, but that's not been the case this year."

Before this year, the decline from 2014 peak in farmland values had supported the conventional wisdom. While farmers have experienced financial strain for several years, Dobbins said future expectations also help shape a farmland buyer's view of how easy it will be to pay for a farmland purchase. There is increased uncertainty associated with important drivers in the farmland market.

"Buying farmland is about what's going to happen in the future, not what's currently happening," Dobbins said. "Many buyers have enough to make the down payment but will need to borrow to complete the transaction. Increased uncertainty about the future increases buyer caution."

Patoka Lake announces special waterfowl hunt dates

Patoka Lake has determined hunt dates for its three waterfowl resting areas for 2019-2020.

The Sycamore Creek area will remain closed this year to act as a refuge for waterfowl, offering them a place of little disturbance.

Waters lying east of Walls Boat Ramp, as well as the Allen Creek area, will be open to waterfowl hunting, fishing, trapping, and motorized and non-motorized boat traffic on specified days beginning November 1, 2019 and continuing through February 29, 2020.

Patoka Lake lies within the waterfowl hunting Southern Zone. The open dates are:

Southern Zone Ducks Regular Season

November 2, 3, and 30; December 1, 5, 9, 13, 14, 18, 22, 27, 28, and 29; and January 3, 4, 8, 11, 14, 18, 22, 25, and 26

Southern Zone Geese Regular Season

November 2, 3, 9, 10, 13, 14, 18, 19, 23, 28, 29, and 30; December 1, 5, 9, 13, 14, 18, 22, 27, 28, and 29; January 3, 4, 8, 11, 14, 18, 22, 25, 26, 31; and February 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, and 9

Hunters are reminded that they are required to use the self-service hunter check stations around Patoka Lake. Hunter check-in cards are to be turned in daily, even if no birds are harvested. Special regulations, state, and federal game stamps and licenses, and non-toxic shot are all required by law to hunt migratory waterfowl. Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

Maps for locations of hunter check stations, maps of the waterfowl resting areas, and other information about Patoka Lake can be found at the Patoka Lake park office. For more information, contact Patoka Lake at 812-685-2464.

Patoka Lake (on.IN.gov/patokalake) is at 3084 N. Dillard Road, Birdseye, IN 47513.

same as for Jackson SRA. Six to eight groups will be drawn for this hunt.

Both hunts will have a maximum of two hunters per stake. All fields surrounding the controlled sunflower fields at both locations will have the same hours.

There will be no "stand-by" or refilling of shooting stations if there are early departures at either property. All fields will be considered open hunting starting September 2. Shooting hours will be a half hour before sunrise until sunset.

Hunters need to purchase the proper licenses and stamps and have their Federal Harvest Information Program (HIP) number. Patoka Lake adult hunters will be limited to 50 shells, and youth hunters will be limited to 75 shells. Hunters must use size 6 or smaller non-toxic shot and are required to have their firearm plugged so it can only contain three shells at a time.

Tillery Hill SRA will host a non-draw hunt opportunity on September 1. There will be a 3-acre field at Hunter Check Station #6, and a two-acre field near Osborne Boat Ramp on W. Newton Stewart Road.

Hunters are strongly encouraged to wear blaze orange clothing for safety as other users may be in the fields and area.

Making A Difference

MARTIN COUNTY COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

By Curt Johnson
MCCF Executive Director

-- TIME, TALENT, TREASURE --

Yes – time, talent and treasure. Giving of those from yourself is what I've so often equated to philanthropy. You've heard about "time, talent and treasure" from me in these columns, and likely from your church, and often from friends and family in some context when talking about what they've done the past week. While that can make a big difference in our community, whether giving small or large, it seems there is a lot more to a day than that.

-- MORE TO IT --

The rest of our day is often consumed with family, work, or both. When you spend time doing these things, you are also giving back and saying thank you for what you've been given. With a family, you are giving back to help them grow, learn, and succeed at whatever level in life they are called.

But what about your job? That place most of us spend the better part of a day? What about all the work, sweat and stress that you put into your job? Is this giving back? Sure, you may be using some of your talents, but you're obviously giving your time.

-- WORK AND LABOR --

I've spoken of your time and talent in the context of philanthropy and giving back to your community. But the labor you put into your work is not only just a job for a paycheck; it is also another way for how you contribute to your community. You and your job are vital and just as important as any other aspect of philanthropy toward improving the quality of life in our community. The effort and work you put into your job reflects on our community. You are doing your part to improve multiple aspects of our economy and our county.

-- YOU ARE IMPORTANT --

Sometimes we are fortunate that the labor we call "work" is also a passion of ours. You always hear that someone is lucky if they love their job. I'm not so sure it's luck, but rather commitment, hard work and an open mind to new ideas and opportunities. But yes, I would still call you lucky.

So, whether or not your work is a passion or a love of yours, it is important. It is important to your family and their well-being, to your co-workers and employers, and to the rest of us sharing our county with you.

-- THANK YOU --

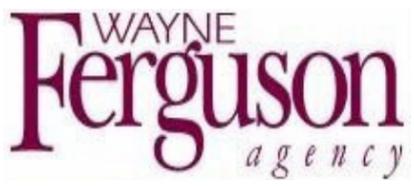

So that's what our upcoming Labor Day holiday is about. It's about recognizing your importance and recognizing the efforts that you've put toward your job. It's a tribute to you for the efforts you've put toward the strength, growth, and improvement in the quality of life for our community.

This Labor Day is for you. Thank you!
