County council approves stipend for sheriff employees, unsure of increase for auditor's office

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

Sheriff Travis Roush approached the Martin County Council at their meeting Monday night, October 5, about giving a stipend to his employees for the work they have done through COVID. Sheriff Roush told the council that his officers do not just work a shift and then go home, they help with training, classes, and when other officers need help. "We just can't walk out of the office at the end of a shift," said Roush. "We are unique", he said, adding that they don't work 8-4 and then go home.

The jail matron put together a proposal the Sheriff Roush presented to the council. The proposal gives a $1,000 stipend to all full-time sheriff's department staff and from $100 to $500 to part-time employees, depending on how many hours they work per month. The total cost of all stipends would be $25,300.

Council Member Randy Winger asked the sheriff where his officers are compared to Loogootee Police pay. Chief Deputy Josh Greene replied that new patrol deputies in Loogootee start out with pay similar to what seasoned sheriff's deputies are paid. It was noted there is an estimated $5,000 difference in starting pay between departments. Sheriff Roush said that they have lost officers to Loogootee. "Our loss is Loogootee's gain," he said.

Council Member Sherri Bowling asked if the sheriff's department is back to covering dispatch for the City of Loogootee. Roush replied that they currently cover the "graveyard shift" along with all 911 calls. Loogootee covers their own dispatch 16 hours a day. The sheriff said he is sending a proposal to the Loogootee Mayor to see if the sheriff's department can do 16 hours of dispatch for Loogootee instead of eight. They are also sending a proposal to Shoals. The sheriff said he didn't think it was fair to charge Loogootee to provide dispatch and not Shoals, who they have always handled dispatch for.

Council Member Barb McFeaters said that she thinks the sheriff's department is "very deserving" of the stipend. Council Member Winger agreed. Council Member Warren Albright added that the stipend also helps make up for the sheriff's department employees working holidays and weekends. Council Member Winger said that the jail has been free of COVID too, which is worth noting. "He doesn't have to do all this stuff," said Winger of the sheriff. "He wants to."

The council verbally agreed to move forward with the stipends for this year. They sheriff will be required to request the stipends again next year.

The sheriff also presented a check for $78,850 for four months of housing Vigo County inmates in the jail.

Sheriff Roush thanked Council Member Richard Summers for following through with a commitment he made a few years ago to check in with department heads from time to time. Roush said Summers comes by the jail once a month to check in and he really appreciates it. He added that Council Member Winger stopped by last Friday and he appreciated that as well. He said it boosts the morale of his employees.

Prosecutor Aureola Wright came to answer questions about her second deputy prosecutor after the subject came up at the last meeting. The council last year approved Wright hiring another deputy to help her office catch up on a backlog of cases. Wright said her office is doing "very good" at catching up and they are continuously finding ways to cut their budget. She said that they have increased reimbursements from the state for the child support fund and because of that, the state has now taken over paying more for her office. She said she brought in $85,000 last year in reimbursements and $45,000 so far this year. She added that Martin County's reimbursement rate for child support is now above the state and national average.

Council Member Bowling said that they discussed last year when hiring the new deputy that it would be discussed at budget hearings this year. Prosecutor Wright said she attended budget hearings, but the subject didn't come up. The position was in her budget for full-time for next year. Wright added that she was available at budget hearings to answer any questions the council may have had.

Council Member Winger asked Wright if there is a timeline on when her office will be caught up or if she is expecting to fund the position forever. The prosecutor replied that she always wants to decrease the budget whenever she can, and they are always looking for ways to do that.

Council Member Albright suggested leaving the position as is for next year and look at it again at budget hearings in 2021. The council agreed.

Recorder Rhonda Sanders and Treasurer Lori Carrico, who were in the audience, then asked if the auditor and her two full-time employees are still getting the raise requested at budget hearings. The commissioners had included extra money in their budget for next year for the auditor's office for handling extra tasks the office has taken on, mainly involving human resource.

Council Member Bowling said she still thinks the county needs someone responsible for human resources. Council Member Buck Stiles agreed. Bowling asked the auditor if someone in her office would be interested in that.

Carrico asked how someone would file a grievance against the auditor's office if the human resources director worked for the auditor's office. Auditor Bobbie Abel replied that any grievance against her of-

Commissioners hear from Air Evac after considering another company's proposal

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT

John Gott, with Air Evac, and Jason Monday, Air Alliance Divisional Director, approached the Martin County Commissioners at their meeting Tuesday, October 6, about their medical helicopter service. Monday explained that he is aware that another company presented a proposal to the commissioners for a county-wide membership plan. He wanted the commissioners to know that 30 percent of Martin County residents are already members of the Air Evac program, at their own choosing. He said that around 21 percent of residents are on Medicare, that covers helicopter transport, so 50-51 percent of Martin County residents are already covered. Monday said that Air Evac has a base in Paoli, and he is fairly sure they are always the first call when a helicopter is needed because they are the closest. A dispatcher from the sheriff's department who was in the audience confirmed that Air Evac has always been the first call, in the two years she has dispatched.

Commissioner Paul George said one reason they considered the other company is because they are moving a base to Huntingburg. A member of the audience said they have been saying they were putting a base in Huntingburg for a few years now, but it has yet to be done.

John Gott said he isn't at the meeting to discuss the other company's offer, but he knows Air Evac couldn't offer that kind of price. Commissioner George asked how the other company can because when he saw their price he thought it was too good to be true.

Gott recommended the commissioners ask the right questions because there are many factors to consider. He said that there are landing zone issues with certain helicopters in rural settings, federal regulations, and challenges with insurance companies when it comes to paying for transport.

Gott said Air Evac has an excellent relationship with Martin County fire departments, sheriff's department and ambulance service as they have been working with the county for 19 years. He said that when an accident happens, dispatch is going to call the first available helicopter, whoever can get there the quickest.

Commissioner Aaron Summers noted that when something is too good to be true, it usually is. Millie Brown, Lost River Township Trustee, said that when she got all the trustees together to discuss the offer from the other company, she also felt

Martin County Historical Society receives $8,601 grant from state

Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch last week announced 479 organizations will receive almost $10 million through the Arts, Cultural and Destination Marketing Organization (DMO) grant program. This initiative is made possible through a partnership between the Indiana Destination Development Corporation (IDDC) and the Indiana Arts Commission (IAC), providing operational support to local organizations whose operations were disrupted by COVID-19.

The Martin County Historical Society received $8,601.35.

"These organizations help enhance the quality of life here in our great state," Crouch said. "I am pleased to see the arts and cultural sector, which adds to Indiana's tourism economy, get this funding."

A complete list of the awardees can be found at www.in.gov/arts/about/covid-19-actions/arts-cultural-and-destination-marketing-organization-support-grants/.

"Ensuring the arts and cultural community can survive is what this grant will do for so many organizations across the state," said Lewis Ricci, IAC's Executive Director. "This funding can help bridge the gap."

"The tourism and hospitality industry is one of the leading economic sectors in Indiana, contributing over $37 billion to the state's gross domestic product," said Elaine Bedel, IDDC's Secretary and CEO. "These funds will help the Destination Marketing Organizations lead the recovery of our leisure and travel related economy."

Award amounts were determined by a formula which included factors for budget size, previous amounts of CARES Act funding received and amount of eligible expenses, resulting in an equitable distribution to organizations in all areas of the state.

Each grantee will be responsible for documenting the use of all distributed funds.

Martin County Civil Defense receives $2,500 equipment grant

More than 70 rural and volunteer fire departments from 47 Indiana counties have been awarded more than $320,000 in Volunteer Fire Assistance grants, DNR Director Dan Bortner announced last week. Martin County Civil Defense received $2,500 for communication equipment.

The awards will be used for training, installation of dry hydrants, or to purchase necessary firefighting equipment and gear to combat wildland fires. The grants are administered by the DNR Division of Forestry and made available through the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service.

Recipients were selected based on population density, acres of public wildlands protected, and wildland fire reporting to DNR Fire Control Headquarters. As in past years, emphasis was given to projects that involved the fighting of wildfires.

The awarded grants range from $1,000 to $5,000 and were given to 76 departments.

Fire departments receiving the grants in 2020, the amount of the grant, county and the project category are:

it was too good to be true. She said her fire department and first responders really like Air Evac and they have never had an issue with them. Gott again encouraged the commissioners to ask the right questions and make sure they are getting what they think they are getting.

Commissioner Paul George told Brown that they need to set up another meeting to discuss the other company’s proposal again.

(Editor’s note: Stat Flight recently proposed covering all Martin County residents for medical helicopter transport for $25,188 a year. The idea was to break up the cost between Loogootee, Shoals and each township. The Loogootee City Council approved paying their portion for Loogootee residents for $7,488 at their meeting last month. No other entity has approved a contract yet.)

Dr. Del Jarmin and Brian Cornelius, with SiteLogicIQ, provided information to the commissioners about their facilities management company. Dr. Jarmin said they currently work with Shoals School and their goal is to form long-term relationships with their clients. Cornelius said they are not a project-based firm, they look at a long-term plan. They offered to look over the county buildings for an assessment of what upgrades, repairs, etc. need to be completed. Commissioner Paul George said they could assess the courthouse, jail and highway department.

Sheriff Travis Roush reported there are currently 73 inmates in the jail with 29 of them from Vigo County.

Tiffany Whaley, director of Martin County EMS, presented the ambulance service’s quarterly report. Whaley said the ambulance service has had 751 runs so far this year with a 10-minute average response time. She said the national average for urban areas is nine minutes and 58 seconds and with Martin County being extremely rural, she thinks their time is very good. She said runs had gone down due to COVID because many people didn’t want to go to the hospital, but they are picking back up now. Whaley said she is new to the director position and wanted to know if the commissioners needed anything else in their report from her. Commissioner George said the commissioners have not received any report for a long time and asked if one could be presented quarterly. Whaley said she would do that.

Tim Hunt, with HWC Engineering, reported that work on the Brooks Bridge bank erosion should be done this week. There was no crop damage that needed to be paid for. Work on bridge 69 has been stalled due to emergency work the crew needed to do in another county.

Hunt recommended not doing the January 2021 cycle of the Community Crossings grant so the highway department has time to build back up matching funds. The cycle after that will be in July.

Commissioner George said he hates to let one cycle slide by. He said if they can’t get the full $1 million in January, they can reapply for the July cycle.

Hunt said they can come up with a preliminary list for the next commissioners’ meeting so they can discuss it. He said the state may have roughly $90 million to pass out for January which is less than half of what they have had in the past to split up around the state.

The burn ban for the county is still in effect. Monte Wolfe said it is really dry and they are hoping to get some rain from the hurricane coming through in the south.

The commissioners approved a National 4-H Week Proclamation for October 4-10. Wednesday is Wear Green 4-H Service Day.

COUNTY COUNCIL

fice could be filed with the commissioners or county attorney.

Carrico then said that none of this is fair for the other courthouse offices, to have one office receive more pay than the others. “You are saying to everyone else that they are more important than the rest of us,” said Carrico.

Council Member Stiles replied that only the person with the human resources title would receive extra pay.

Carrico asked what the human resources job description entailed. Auditor Abel replied that she didn’t have a copy of the job description with her but could provide one to Carrico the next day. Abel said she did email it to the council members.

Recorder Sanders said that if a human resources position was being discussed, they need to have the job description read. She asked if someone could pull up the email and read it. No one replied.

Auditor Abel told the council that the salary and wage ordinance doesn’t have to be approved until December, so they do not have to decide anything right now.

Council Member Summers said the same issue with more pay for one department transpired a few years ago. He said it’s a lot better to work as a team and in his opinion, the commissioners should have discussed the extra pay with the council prior to putting it in the budget before assuming they would pay for it. “It’s a lot easier to work together,” he said. “We come in here on day and there it is on a piece of paper. I may be right or wrong, but that’s how I feel about it,” he said.

Council Member Stiles said he spoke to two of the commissioners and asked them if they would be in favor of meeting with the county council quarterly and they were in favor of that. He added that he didn’t want to “kick the can down the road to December” and would prefer to make a decision on the extra money now. He said he didn’t think it was fair to the other office holders and the increase needed to be removed from the budget for next year.

“Fine idea,” said Sanders from the audience.

“Until you run for that job,” said Council Member Albright to Sanders.

“I don’t want that job,” replied Sanders. “Right there, exactly!” said Council Member Winger.

Sanders said that she doesn’t want the auditor’s job, just like she wouldn’t want the sheriff’s job, but she knows several people who do want the auditor’s job.

Sanders was asked why the auditor is running unopposed this year then, if there are others who want the job.

Sanders replied that if the auditor gets the raise that’s been requested, she may run for that position next cycle.

Council Member Winger asked if the assessor’s office employees make more than the other offices. Assessor Carolyn McGuire, from the audience, said that they do, but they have to be certified.

Winger replied that he thinks there are problems, and he is not ready to vote on salaries right now.

Clerk Gerald Montgomery, from the audience, said that the auditor’s job is the third hardest job in the courthouse. When asked who had the first two hardest jobs, Montgomery replied that his job is the hardest and the assessor job is the second hardest.

Sanders said that it’s someone’s choice to do more than they are required to do. Treasurer Lori Carrico added that all offices do that and it’s not fair to compensate one and not the others. “It’s a morale thing in our building,” said Carrico. “It doesn’t make things run smoother in the building.”

Council Member Stiles said the county council hasn’t had a raise in five years and they will change that next year. “We will see what you say about that,” Stiles said to the audience. “Let’s move on with this. There is no use arguing.”

Council Member McFeaters asked the auditor if the additional part-time employee the council approved for her office last year has helped. She said they were hoping that would have taken some of the burden off the staff. Auditor Abel replied that it helps them focus more on their other duties.

Council Member Stiles said that last year they upgraded the computer systems in the auditor’s office, and he thought that was supposed to speed up the work. Auditor Abel said that the upgrades were due to software no longer being supported but it didn’t change anything as far as the work required.

Council Member Bowling said that in her opinion, if there are three people who work harder than the others, they should be compensated, and everyone says their job is the hardest.

Council Member Stiles said again that he wanted to cut the raises out of the budget. Winger again said he wasn’t ready to make a decision because he wants to know how much extra has been put on the auditor’s office to do HR and how much time it takes. He also would like to know how other counties handle human resources tasks.

Council Member Bowling asked if one person does human resources takes or if it’s divided up in the office. The auditor said it is divided depending on the question.

Abel then said she has spent hours, at budget hearings, through emails and at other meetings explaining what her office does. “I am done defending what my office does,” she said. She said the commissioners added the increase to the budget, she didn’t.

Council Member Summers asked if they want to deal with this later or talk to the commissioners about their intentions. Council Member Stiles replied that he thinks the commissioners were looking for an increased budget since the taxes were raised.

Council Member Albright said someone needs to look at the job descriptions and see who deserves what. “Everyone’s job is the hardest when you are defending your job,” he said. Albright added that all of the staff are underpaid for what the job is, but he doesn’t feel qualified to say which job is worth what.

Council Member McFeaters said they have talked about hiring an independent professional to help with the financial aspect. She recommended doing more research into that and not jumping into anything. In the end, the council made no decision on the issue.

In other business, the council has been tasked with appointing someone to the new tourism board that will oversee the recently implemented innkeepers’ tax. The commissioners have already appointed Jameson Hibbs and have one more appointment to make. The City of Loogootee appointed Pam Loughmiller. Auditor Bobbie Abel said the advertised looking for anyone wishing to serve on the board but didn’t get any response. The council agreed to see if they could find someone interested in the appointment. The position is unpaid.

The council approved a $500 transfer for the recorder’s office from travel to office supplies and $11,000 in the commissioners’ budget from health insurance to maintenance contracts.

The council approved $15,000 for the drug fund grant to be used in contract services for the community corrections department.

The council also approved a reduction in the budget of $272,463 for reassessment fees for this year.

The council will meet again Monday, November 2 at 6 p.m. This will also be the 2021 budget adoption.

More Neat Stuff

By Ann Ackerman

I often run into interesting people when I walk my dog in the mornings. Lately, I've seen Norbie Burch who is on his "post office walk" and we've had some good conversations. He likes More Neat Stuff, so this is for him.

THOUGHTS

*I have decided to get into politics. I have decided to run for childhood. If elected, I promise to bring back mid-day naps, chocolate milk with lunch, and recess.

*Accidentally used the dog shampoo today and I'm feeling like such a "good girl."

*I can't believe it's October. It literally feels like it was March just 16 years ago.

*They say with age comes wisdom so therefore I don't have wrinkles, I have wise cracks.

*Cooler weather is coming. Unfortunately, I never got that bikini body, but I can rock a hoodie and sweatpants like nobody's business.

*This goes out to all the girls who had report cards growing up that read, "talks too much."

*Some people wake up feeling like a million bucks. I wake up feeling like insufficient funds.

*If 2020 was a Pinata, it could be a wasp's nest.

*I posted a photo of my clean house and it was flagged and removed as "fake news."

*Just spent 15 minutes searching for my phone in my car while using my phone as a flashlight.

Did you ever look at your nephews and think?

1. That one will be dropping me curbside at the nursing home.
2. That one will be paying for it.
3. That one will visit me most.

4. And that one? He'll be sneaking in the good tequila and Twinkies.

SERIOUSISMS

*Education is not something you can finish.

*You won't change the world by saving an animal, but you will change that animal's world.

*We are visitors on this planet. We are here for ninety or one hundred years at the very most. During that period, we must try to do something good, something useful with our lives. If you contribute to other people's happiness, you will find the true goal, the true meaning of life. -Dalai Lama XIV

HOME COVID TEST

1. Pour a large glass of red wine, try to smell it.

2. If you can smell the wine, then drink it and see if you can taste it.

3. If you can taste and smell, it confirms you don't have COVID.

Last night I did the test 19 times, and all were negative, thank God.

Tonight, I am going to do the test again, because this morning I woke up with a headache and feel like I am coming down with something.

I am so nervous?

Make someone smile today!

In the Garden

By Ralph Purkhiser, Purdue University
Master Gardener

When one thinks of autumn in Indiana, one cannot help but think of colors. We are starting to see the colors in some foliage, but we are also still enjoying some beautiful flowers. As I take my walks around Sandhill Gardens, I cannot help but marvel at the color show and give thanks to the Creator for the beauty he allows me to enjoy.

Although the recent dry spell has resulted in the loss of some foliage without the change of colors, we should still see plenty of beautiful hues. As I walk around the gardens, I see deep red coming out in the sumacs and dogwoods. I see yellows in the hickories and the red maples are turning scarlet. Some of the deciduous rhododendrons and azaleas are also sporting coats of many colors, ranging from pale yellow to magenta. However, right now, the most colorful foliage found at Sandhill Gardens is on a Little Henry itea or sweetspire. The leaves sparkle in tones of red, orange and yellow, with some deep green accenting the display. When I see such beauty in a well-behaved little shrub, I cannot help wondering why anyone would plant an invasive burning bush. Little Henry's color far surpasses other shrubs and I do not understand why it is not used in more landscapes. The dwarf form allows one to enjoy the shrub in small gardens and the spring flowers attract a lot of pollinators.

I am just starting to see the burgundy in the oak-leaf hydrangeas, another under-used garden star. It truly is a four-season attraction. Since spring, these hydrangeas have been covered with large leaves with a rough texture that makes them stand out when displayed around other plants. The huge conical flower clusters started out white back in June, then turned pink and gradually to a russet red. Now, they are paper-bag tan and many will persist through the winter. The leaves will stay until early winter, and then the exfoliating bark becomes the star of the show. While the species is quite large and hard to fit into a small garden, there are several dwarf cultivars now available and these dwarfs did not lose any of the attributes that make the species such a wonderful plant. Oak leaf hydrangea may be used as a specimen planting or grouped into a hedge. I cannot imagine my garden without them, and there are several scattered around the various beds.

Berries also add a lot of fall color. The beautyberry bushes are currently catching the eyes of visitors. Berries on various cultivars range from white to purple to burgundy. As the leaves drop, the berries become even more evident. Perhaps the brightest berry in the garden right now is the firethorn, with deep orange berries against dark green foliage. These berries often last through the winter, as they seem to not be palatable for the birds until they have fermented in late winter. I had dark blue berries on the blue muffin viburnums, but the birds stripped those off in the past couple of weeks. The bright red berries of the spicebush also attract the attention of people and birds. They especially stand out as the foliage has begun to turn bright yellow. The hollies also sport beautiful berries of red, orange, yellow and black. Most holly berries will also remain well into winter. I am especially fond of the deciduous winterberry hollies, which will sport berries, but lose their leaves. This is another versatile native plant that deserves more use in gardens.

Many flowers are still supplying color at Sandhill Gardens. The zinnia seeds that I deposited in many of the perennial beds are now supplying a rainbow of blossoms. There are also many hydrangea blooms remaining and even a few hibiscus stragglers. There are plenty of goldenrods, and, of course, the bright asters. Late roses and some re-blooming lilacs and irises add to the symphony. There are still many other annuals and even some tropical plants that are in bloom. Autumn is indeed a time for color.

Join the virtual Big Sit! at Goose Pond FWA

Join Friends of Goose Pond and DNR in observing and recording birds during the virtual Big Sit! on Sunday, October 11, from 7:55 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. ET. Big Sit! is an international event focused on recording all bird observations at one location over the course of a day.

In previous years, birdwatchers with all levels of experience would attend their local Big Sit! event, watch birds together, and share food and stories. This year, the Big Sit! at Goose Pond Fish & Wildlife Area (FWA) will be hosted virtually by Friends of Goose Pond and DNR.

"This is the third year of the event, and we want to keep the momentum going so rather than cancel, we decided to adapt," said Friends board member Jim Brown.

Throughout the day, virtual guests can watch as roving birdwatchers report what they are seeing at various locations at Goose Pond FWA. This will allow the virtual guests to learn what bird species visit Goose Pond FWA and how to identify them.

You can virtually attend this free event in two ways. You can register at friendsofgoosepond.org/big-sit for the all-day Zoom broadcast and tune in as your schedule allows. In addition, several Facebook Live Big Sit! sessions will be shown throughout the day on Indiana Division of Fish & Wildlife Facebook. Visit friendsofgoosepond.org/big-sit to see the schedule of sessions.

Grazing Bites

By Victor Shelton
NRCS State Agronomist/Grazing Specialist

I've not been on the road as much lately and it's been nice to watch minute, daily changes in things as the days shorten and the nights become cooler. A few spiny pigweeds in the barn lot were one of the first things to catch my eye. They first quit growing, then with each additional cool night you could see a darkening of the leaves and more maroon showing. They don't like the cooler weather; I don't like the lack of sufficient moisture.

It is late September as I write this, and so far this month I've had a total of two-fifths of an inch of rain up until today. Some oats and turnips I planted over three weeks ago have barely broke ground. They won't provide much grazing at this rate. Sadly, there are areas of Indiana that are in even worse shape moisture wise, especially parts of the northeast. That area has suffered from lack of sufficient rainfall most of the summer and those areas with gravelly outwash subsoils and sandy loam topsoil have suffered the worst.

If you have been diligent about maintaining cover and not overgrazing this summer — at least for most of the state where there has been a little better moisture — then at least you are doing everything you possibly can do to conserve moisture. I grazed a couple fields just a bit closer than I should have in advance of this dry late summer/early fall period. It was supposed to rain! It didn't. Fields with closer to six inches of residual left behind bounced back better.

It would probably be dangerous if we could predict the weather far enough in advance to make a better impact on pastures, but we can be more proactive and remain in somewhat of a contingency plan mode. I have to remind myself that the next drought period could be only two weeks away and to keep a game plan in check to help reduce the negative impact if it occurs. There are limits though.

What could have you done differently? Sometimes nothing, but for future ruminations here are a few options. Maintain soil cover. You don't want to see any bare ground and you want a good dense stand of forage and residue to keep the soil cool and reduce evaporation. Maintain good stop grazing heights, you know, the live leaf and stem material that is left behind after a grazing event. That is the shortest amount left, not the tallest. For most cool-season forages, that is four inches so to have the shortest be four inches, there will be at least one third of the forages of at least six inches or more.

Let's think a bit more about that last statement. That stop grazing height is a good average guide to stick to, but there are always exceptions to the rules. On rare occasions, especially under ideal moisture conditions and with lots of forage present, you can occasionally remove slightly more forage, but it's generally best not to. Removal of too much leaf area will slow photosynthesis and regrowth, but if only done on rare occasion on only single paddocks or small parts of a pasture, it won't be too detrimental. If there is a lot of growth present, removal can be misleading due to a fair amount of forage being laid down rather than consumed. If that happens, it may not be consumed by the grazing livestock, but some of it will be consumed by the microflora of the soil livestock and that is never a bad thing they need fed too.

When we are in a timeframe of decreasing moisture and especially if growth is slowing down, then we need to adjust that stop grazing height, leaving slightly more behind and not grazing as close. Moving livestock after removal of just the top one third of available forage is probably ideal under these conditions instead of the traditional mindset of graze half and leave half. You want to leave slightly more behind for the same reasons we started discussing earlier and if you do so, you will normally keep forages growing a lot longer and be rewarded with a little more production.

You may not have been short on forages at any point and time or at least it didn't appear that way, but I like to go back and consider animal bite size. To start with, how does a cow eat? If she can, she will take her tongue and reach out with it and wrap it around a nice mouthful of forage tearing it off in the process and pulling it into her mouth. To adequately get a full bite, forages need to be at least six inches tall, eight to ten inches or more is better. When forages become less than six inches, the swath of forage becomes increasingly more challenging to tongue harvest and cows turn into horses and bite off forages rather than graze as they prefer. It is estimated that shifting from tongue harvest to biting harvest can reduce forage intake per bite by two-thirds.

You would think that if they had to take more bites to meet their requirements, they would do so, but that quite often doesn't happen. Ruminant livestock spend only about one-third of their day grazing, then approximately one-third of the day ruminating and the rest just resting. Sounds like a heck of a life if the buffet isn't limited!

Smaller ruminants are less impacted by bite size, mainly due to their ability to be more selective in their grazing and/or browsing, but shorter forages for them impact forage diversity and can also certainly impact parasite loads to a degree. Grazing/browsing taller forages is preferred and better.

Well, like normal I ran down an unexpected rabbit trail; where was I? Oh, could you have done anything different this year to boost fall grazing? Though not conventional by any means and also hard to swallow and do, there are sometimes timeframes, especially during droughty periods, when forage growth has slowed down so much that it is no longer keeping up with livestock needs. If you continue to allow it to be grazed, photosynthesis is usually hampered even more, root growth doing the same, energy stores reduced, and the potential for regrowth quite often severely sabotaged. This was very evident after the drought of 2012. But, where forages were not overgrazed or taken below the stop grazing heights and let to sit dormant until rains replenished needed moisture, they rebounded with compensatory growth!

How do you accomplish that? You shut the gates and feed hay. Like I said, easier said than done, but it sure can have a lot of benefits. That said, animal numbers always need to be assessed along with stored feed on hand with a sharp pencil looking at what is going to be needed ahead. The earlier in the late summer or early fall that this is done the better because the later it gets the shorter the days get, and it all impacts potential forage regrowth yield and even quality. I'm thankful for the little rain that I'm getting as I finish this on the last days of September, but the rain would have been so much more beneficial two or three weeks earlier.

Be slow to graze these fields even after they start to rebound; they are already weakened from the conditions so it will be important to try and wait until they are dormant to graze them if possible or risk slower spring growth, reduced yields and potentially increased weed pressure next season. So, if you have corn stalks, hay aftermath or annuals that can be grazed, that may provide you more opportunity to defer those fields longer, and with a little rain possibly grow even more stockpile or feed hay now and graze later after the dust settles.

LHS Varsity Boys' Tennis win sectional, fall in regional

The Loogootee Varsity Boys' Tennis Team fell in the regional against Jasper on Tuesday, October 6, 1-4.

Head Coach Mike Tippery said, "Jasper is a great team. They pounced on us early at #1 doubles and #2 and #3 singles and never really let us get into any kind of rhythm. #2 Doubles got off to a good start and played well in that first set. Jordan played a solid first set and struggled in the second. He was able to turn things around in the 3rd set to get us our lone point."

The varsity boys finished with a record of 23-1. This year's senior class at LHS finished with an 81-9 record over the past four years. "They set the bar awfully high. They will be missed but their accomplishments will never be forgotten."

Senior Jordan Wildman advanced in the individual tournament and will go up against Jaylen Mullen of North Daviess tonight (Wednesday) at 5:50 p.m.

"Tennis is a single class sport, so every team except one is going to end the season disappointed. Though we are disappointed this loss cannot diminish the historic season we had. 23 wins shatters the school record of 20 that we set last year. We had four players end the regular season undefeated. Jalen and Jordan both broke the school record for most wins. There are countless other individual records broken as well," said Coach Tippery.

National unemployment edges down to 7.9 percent for September

Total nonfarm payroll employment rose by 661,000 in September, and the unemployment rate declined to 7.9 percent, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last week. These improvements in the labor market reflect the continued resumption of economic activity that had been curtailed due to the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic and efforts to contain it. In September, notable job gains occurred in leisure and hospitality, in retail trade, in health care and social assistance, and in professional and business services. Employment in government declined over the month, mainly in state and local government education.

This news release presents statistics from two monthly surveys. The household survey measures labor force status, including unemployment, by demographic characteristics. The establishment survey measures nonfarm employment, hours, and earnings by industry.

Household Survey Data

In September, the unemployment rate declined by 0.5 percentage point to 7.9 percent, and the number of unemployed persons fell by 1.0 million to 12.6 million. Both measures have declined for 5 consecutive months but are higher than in February, by 4.4 percentage points and 6.8 million, respectively.

Among the major worker groups, the unemployment rates declined in September for adult men (7.4 percent), adult women (7.7 percent), Whites (7.0 percent), and Asians (8.9 percent). The jobless rates for teenagers (15.9 percent), Blacks (12.1 percent), and Hispanics (10.3 percent) showed little change over the month.

Among the unemployed, the number of persons on temporary layoff decreased by 1.5 million in September to 4.6 million. This measure is down considerably from the high of 18.1 million in April but is 3.8 million higher than in February. In September, the number of permanent job losers increased by 345,000 to 3.8 million; this measure has risen by 2.5 million since February. The number of unemployed job leavers rose by 212,000 to 801,000 in September. (Job leavers are persons who quit or voluntarily left their previous job and immediately began looking for new employment.)

In September, the number of unemployed persons who were jobless less than 5 weeks increased by 271,000 to 2.6 million. The number of persons jobless 5 to 14 weeks decreased by 402,000 to 2.7 million, and the number of persons jobless 15 to 26 weeks fell by 1.6 million to 4.9 million. The number of long-term unemployed (those jobless for 27 weeks or more) increased by 781,000 to 2.4 million.

The labor force participation rate decreased by 0.3 percentage point to 61.4 percent in September and is 2.0 percentage points lower than in February. The employment-population ratio, at 56.6 percent, changed little over the month but is 4.5 percentage points lower than in February.

In September, the number of persons employed part time for economic reasons (sometimes referred to as involuntary part-time workers) declined by 1.3 million to 6.3 million, reflecting a decrease in the number of persons whose hours were cut due to slack work or business conditions. The number of involuntary part-time workers is 2.0 million higher than in February. These individuals, who would have preferred full-time employment, were working part time because their hours had been reduced or they were unable to find full-time jobs.

The number of persons not in the labor force who currently want a job, at 7.2 million, changed little in September; this measure is 2.3 million higher than in February. These individuals were not counted as unemployed because they were not actively looking for work during the last 4 weeks or were unavailable to take a job.

Among those not in the labor force who currently want a job, the number of persons marginally attached to the labor force, at 1.9 million, changed little in September. These individuals were not in the labor force, wanted and were available for work, and had looked for a job sometime in the prior 12 months but had not looked for work in the 4 weeks preceding the survey. The number of discouraged workers, a subset of the marginally attached who believed that no jobs were available for them, was 581,000 in September, also little changed from the previous month.

Household Survey Supplemental Data
In September, 22.7 percent of employed persons teleworked because of the coronavirus pandemic, down from 24.3 percent in August. These data refer to employed persons who teleworked or worked at home for pay at some point in the last 4 weeks specifically because of the pandemic.

In September, 19.4 million persons reported that they had been unable to work because their employer closed or lost business due to the pandemic—that is, they did not work at all or worked fewer hours at some point in the last 4 weeks due to the pandemic. This measure is down from 24.2 million in August. Among those who reported in September that they were unable to work because of pandemic-related closures or lost business, 10.3 percent received at least some pay from their employer for the hours not worked.

About 4.5 million persons not in the labor force in September were prevented from looking for work due to the pandemic. This is down from 5.2 million in August. (To be counted as unemployed, by definition, individuals must either be actively looking for work or on temporary layoff.)

These supplemental data come from questions added to the household survey beginning in May to help gauge the effects of the pandemic on the labor market. The data are not seasonally adjusted. Tables with estimates for the supplemental questions for all months are available online at www.bls.gov/cps/effects-of-the-coronavirus-covid-19-pandemic.htm.

Establishment Survey Data

Total nonfarm payroll employment rose by 661,000 in September, following larger gains in the prior 4 months. In September, nonfarm employment was below its February level by 10.7 million, or 7.0 percent. Notable job gains occurred in leisure and hospitality, in retail trade, in health care and social assistance, and in professional and business services. Employment declined in government, mainly in state and local government education.

Employment in leisure and hospitality increased by 318,000 in September, with almost two-thirds of the gain occurring in food services and drinking places (+200,000). Despite job growth totaling 3.8 million over the last 5 months, employment in food services and drinking places is down by 2.3 million since February. Amusements, gambling, and recreation (+69,000) and accommodation (+51,000) also added jobs in September.

Retail trade added 142,000 jobs over the month, with gains widespread in the industry. Clothing and clothing accessories stores (+40,000) accounted for about one-fourth of the over-the-month change in retail trade. Notable employment increases also occurred in general mer- (See 'UNEMPLOYMENT' on page 10)

-- PRIORITIES --

Priorities are one of my favorite topics. That and how we need focus in our lives. Focus helps to define what is important to you. Your priorities will play a major role for your focus in your life.

-- BROAD, SPECIFIC --

Your priorities can define the context of how you live or help define the order or importance of choices before you. I have always tried to keep to five broad priorities before looking at the more specific ones. My five, in order, are God, family, others, myself and work. It's always amazed me how, that by focusing on the higher priorities, the lower ones (though not at all insignificant) tend to take care of themselves.

-- PASSION --

You may share priorities with others. You may have your very own. They are your framework; they, at times, are your passion. A priority without passion often loses importance and lessens the likelihood of success.

-- OUR LOCAL BANDS --

I'm sure that most of you have seen and heard our local high school bands in action. It's wonderful to see the passion in those students and the band directors. They are there because they want to be there. They have a passion for making music and boosting up the energy level at an event. It's a priority for them, a priority that can fall under any of those broad ones I mentioned earlier, depending upon why the students are there and doing what they do.

-- COVID IMPACTS --

This year is making it hard on our bands to enjoy their passion and they're looking for ways to continue making the music and spreading the joy. Based on some Emergency Relief Fund grant applications from the Loogootee and Shoals high schools, the MCCF Board approved special grants to the bands at both schools for online learning, assessment and concerts.

The Shoals High School band was awarded $1,950 with Duke Energy providing an additional $1,500 towards the project. And the Loogootee High School band received a $3,568 grant for the efforts. The MCCF is happy to be able to help keep the passion alive in our band students.

UNEMPLOYMENT

 chandise stores (+20,000), motor vehicle and parts dealers (+16,000), and health and personal care stores (+16,000). Employment in retail trade is 483,000 lower than in February.

Employment in health care and social assistance rose by 108,000 in September but is down by 1.0 million since February. Health care added 53,000 jobs in September, with continued growth in offices of physicians (+18,000), home health care services (+16,000), and offices of other health practitioners (+14,000). Social assistance added 55,000 jobs, mostly in individual and family services (+32,000) and in child day care services (+18,000).

Professional and business services added 89,000 jobs in September. Employment increased in services to buildings and dwellings (+22,000), architectural and engineering services (+13,000), and computer systems design and related services (+12,000). Despite gains of 910,000 since April, employment in professional and business services is 1.4 million lower than in February.

Employment in transportation and warehousing rose by 74,000 in September. Within the industry, job gains continued in warehousing and storage (+32,000), transit and ground passenger transportation (+21,000), and couriers and messengers (+10,000). Although the industry has added 291,000 jobs since May, employment in transportation and warehousing is 304,000 lower than in February.

Manufacturing added 66,000 jobs over the month. Durable goods accounted for about two-thirds of the gain, led by motor vehicles and parts (+14,000) and machinery (+14,000). Despite gains over the past 5 months, employment in manufacturing is 647,000 below February's level.

Financial activities added 37,000 jobs in September. Job growth occurred in real estate and rental and leasing (+20,000) and in finance and insurance (+16,000). Employment in financial activities is 162,000 below the level in February.

In September, the other services industry added 36,000 jobs, largely in membership associations and organizations (+31,000). Employment in other services is 495,000 lower than in February.

Employment in information grew by 27,000 in September but is down by 276,000 since February. Motion picture and sound recording industries accounted for most of the September gain (+23,000).

Construction employment increased by 26,000 in September, with growth in residential specialty trade contractors (+16,000) and construction of buildings (+12,000). Construction employment is below its February level by 394,000.

In September, wholesale trade added 19,000 jobs, with gains in both the durable and nondurable goods components (+13,000 and +8,000, respectively). Employment in wholesale trade is 312,000 lower than in February.

Government employment declined by 216,000 in September. Employment in local government education and state government education fell by 231,000 and 49,000, respectively. A decrease of 34,000 in federal government was driven by a decline in the number of temporary Census 2020 workers. Partially offsetting these declines, employment in local government, excluding education, rose by 96,000.

Employment in private education decreased by 69,000 in September, after a gain of similar magnitude in August. Employment in the industry is down by 355,000 since February.

Employment changed little in mining in September (+1,000). Employment in the industry is down by 133,000 since a recent peak in January 2019; about three-fourths of this decline has occurred since February of this year.

In September, average hourly earnings for all employees on private nonfarm payrolls, at $29.47, changed little (+2 cents). Average hourly earnings of private-sector production and nonsupervisory employees were also little changed in September (+1 cent) at $24.79. The large employment fluctuations over the past several months--especially in industries with lower-paid workers--complicate the analysis of recent trends in average hourly earnings.

The average workweek for all employees on private nonfarm payrolls rose by 0.1 hour to 34.7 hours in September. In manufacturing, the workweek rose by 0.2 hour to 40.2 hours, and overtime decreased by 0.1 hour to 2.9 hours. The average workweek for production and nonsupervisory employees on private nonfarm payrolls rose by 0.1 hour to 34.1 hours.

West Nile virus found in Dubois County

The Dubois County Health Department is reminding residents to stay vigilant in protecting themselves from West Nile virus and other mosquito-borne diseases. A sample of mosquitoes has recently tested positive for West Nile virus in Dubois County.

The Dubois County Health Department encourages everyone in the county to protect themselves from being bitten by mosquitoes by following these simple steps: apply insect repellent containing DEET to clothes and exposed skin; wear light colored clothing; Avoid wet, highly vegetative areas where mosquitoes live; and avoid being outdoors during prime mosquito biting times, dusk to dawn, when possible.

Some simple steps to prevent mosquitoes from breeding are as follows.

- Eliminate areas of standing water on your property
- Repair failing septic systems.

- Remove any containers that will hold water.

- Clean your clogged gutters.
- Keep grass cut short and shrubbery trimmed. Tall vegetation is an excellent harborage area for mosquitoes.

- Keep swimming pools chlorinated and clean.

The basic rule is; if water lasts more than four days mosquitoes can reproduce. Even a small bucket can produce up to 1,000 mosquitoes in just a few days.

Some symptoms of West Nile virus are high fever, severe headache, stiff neck, muscle weakness or paralysis, nausea, vomiting, and confusion.

West Nile virus can also infect domestic animals like horses. The virus is very serious and often fatal in horses. It is very important to contact your veterinarian to get your horse immunized if you haven't already.
