Commissioners discuss bridge issue, bids

BY COURTNEY HUGHETT
Martin County Journal Publisher

The Martin County Commissioners held a short 16-minute meeting Tuesday night, November 30. With Auditor Bobbie Abel, Highway Superintendent Scott Seals and Commissioner Aaron Summers gone to a conference and Sheriff Travis Roush in training, there wasn't much to discuss.

Highway Secretary Terri Alcorn asked the commissioners if they were ready to approve the bids for stone, bituminous and culverts that were opened at the last meeting. County Attorney Dave Lett recommended the commissioners not approve the culvert bids. He said he thinks the commissioners would be better off playing the market. Commissioner Paul George said he believes the highway superintendent did want to approve the culvert bids. Commissioners George and Cody Roush decided to approve the bids for stone and bituminous and table approval of culvert bids until after they speak to the superintendent.

Alcorn said she heard people were driving over the gravel blockade in front of bridge 44 on Deep Cut Lake Road. Commissioner George suggested someone from the highway department check it out. It was noted that they may have to use concrete barriers if the gravel isn't working to stop people.

The commissioners approved the courthouse being closed December 9 from 11:30 to 1:30 p.m. for the courthouse employees' Christmas party.

The commissioners approved a contract for voting machine maintenance for $585 a year for three years.

Local Tri Kappa chapter celebrates 80th birthday

November 29, 1941 was a special day for the members of the Loogootee-Shoals Delta Tau Chapter of Tri Kappa as that is the day the local chapter was chartered. When the 17 ladies signed the petition to establish a local chapter in 1941, they started what continues to be a unified group of ladies working together for the betterment of the community.

As members gathered for their November meeting, the 80th birthday of the chapter was celebrated with birthday cake and a display of memorabilia from over the years including the petition to become a chapter, items from the two Province Conventions that were hosted by the chapter and numerous photographs. Members enjoyed reminiscing about the accomplishments of the chapter over the past eight decades.

Over the decades the chapter has provided many service projects in the community and conducted various fundraisers to support these endeavors. In 1947, the chapter began selling pecans which continues to be the major fundraising project and over the years a variety of nuts has been added to the selection. The chapter supports the local schools and gives valedictorian and salutatorian awards and a scholarship to graduating seniors

Fugitive captured after hiding under bridge near Shoals

On Thursday, November 18, members of the Martin County Sheriff's Office's Crisis Response Unit (CRU) captured Brandon Crowder, 39 of Shoals. Crowder was wanted on a Martin County Warrant for the following charges: kidnapping, a Level 3 Felony; domestic battery resulting in serious bodily injury, a Level 5 Felony; intimidation, a Level 5 Felony; strangulation, a Level 6 Felony; and three counts of domestic Battery, Level 6 Felonies.

Deputy John Wells of the Martin County Sheriff's Office was the lead investigator of the case. The warrant was issued by the Honorable Lynne E. Ellis on the 11th of November. The Martin County Sheriff's Office requested the public's help in locating the subject on the 12th of November, via a social media post.

On Thursday, November 18, the sheriff's office was receiving information that Crowder was in the Shoals area, but had difficulty confirming the validity of the information, because multiple locations were being cited for Crowders whereabouts. Multiple deputies, disguised as deer hunters, were deployed to possible locations. Later, around 5 p.m., actionable information was received that Crowder was under a bridge, which crossed Beaver Creek, on US Highway 150, approximately a half mile southeast of Shoals. Two members of the tactical team scouted the bridge for confirmation, and indeed spotted Crowder dressed in full camouflage attire under the west side of the bridge.

The sheriff requested the rest of the CRU to converge on the bridge after identity confirmation of Crowder. Then, the sheriff deployed a stun grenade, immediately preceding the CRU's assault on Crowder's position, led by Chief Deputy Greene. Crowder was arrested (See 'FUGITIVE' on page 2)

Jackie's faith in a power greater than herself allowed her to accept her diagnosis of terminal brain cancer with grace and courage. She often said people might say, 'why me God'? But I say, 'why not me'. Her ability to live each day, especially the last weeks of her life, full of trials and challenges, was fueled by Christ's spirit. She made the most of every situation presented to her and embraced most difficulty as a challenge to grow. Everyone who met Jackie quickly became her dear friend. She listened closely to people and celebrated the fact that all of us have our own story to tell. She cared deeply about everyone she met and had an open-door policy at her apartment in Bloomington.

The family and friends would like to thank the staff at Stonecroft Health Campus for their compassionate care and to many others who helped Jackie through the last few weeks of her life. The bar immediately falls absolutely silent.

In a very deep, husky voice, the woman next to him says, "Before you tell that joke, I think it is only fair, given that you are blind, that you should know five things:

1. The bartender is a blonde girl with a

Now, think about it seriously, do you still wanna tell that blonde joke?"

THOUGHTS

*Advice to old people: Do not sit on the floor without a plan on how to get back up.

*Adulthood is saying, "But after this week, things will slow down a bit" over and over until you die.

*A truck loaded with Vicks Vapor Rub overturned on the highway. Amazingly, there was no congestion for eight hours.

*People who ask me what I'm doing tomorrow probably assume that I even know what day of the week it is.

*I love when people get mad and speed past me, only to end up at the same red light.

*Managing my weight around the holidays just required a little planning. I took the batteries out of my scales at Thanksgiving.

A man was sitting quietly reading his paper when his wife walked up behind him and whacked him on the head with a magazine.

"What was that for?" he asked.

"That was for the piece of paper in your trouser pocket with the name Laura Lou written on it," she replied.

He explained, "Two weeks ago when I went to the races, Laura Lou was the name of one of the horses I bet on. I bought you those flowers with the winnings."

"Oh Darling, I'm sorry," she said. "I should have known there was a good explanation."

Three days later he was watching TV when she walked up and hit him in the head again, this time with a frying pan which knocked him out cold.

When he came to, he asked, "What was that for?"

"Your horse phoned."

In the Garden

By Ralph Purkhiser,
Purdue University Master Gardener

I have recently had several people who have called, saying that their Christmas cactus is already blooming. It is possible that it is not a Christmas cactus at all, but rather is a Thanksgiving cactus. I have done a lot of research on university websites and websites of plant breeders and the biggest thing I have learned is that the issue is confusing at best. There is a lot of contradictory information out there.

One thing is certain. Both Christmas and Thanksgiving cacti are true members of the cactus family in the genus Schlumbergera. Most of the sites agree that the Thanksgiving cactus is Schlumbergera truncata (sometimes spelled truncate). Some sites identify the Christmas cactus as Schlumbergera russelliana, while others use the binomial Schlumbergera buckleyi. Some say that Schlumbergera buckleyi is actually a cross between Schlumbergera truncata and Schlumbergera russelliana. It can be quite confusing.

However, just referring to them as Christmas and Thanksgiving cacti clears it up a bit. There are some differences on which everyone seems to agree. Both are native to the coastal mountains of South America, where they grow as epiphytes in trees. Both have flat stems composed of segments known as phyllocades. A major difference is that the edges of the Thanksgiving cactus segments have two to four serrations or teeth, while the Christmas cactus is smooth. In nature, the Thanksgiving cactus blooms a few weeks earlier than the Christmas cactus, but since either can remain in bloom for up to 8 weeks, their bloom times may overlap. Another difference is that the Thanksgiving cactus has yellow anthers (where the pollen is found) while the Christmas cactus anthers are purplish-brown.

The blooms may also be affected by light and temperature. In the fall, both cacti should be placed in a place with temperatures around 65 degrees F. They need 12 to 14 hours of total darkness for about 8 weeks to set buds. Many people resort to covering the plants with paper bags in the evenings to prevent artificial light pollution. Once the buds are set, the plants may be moved into rooms with more light, but one should still avoid bright direct sunlight and cold drafts.

When you buy or receive a holiday cactus as a gift, it will likely be wrapped in foil. The foil is for decorative purposes but is deadly for the plant. Unlike desert cacti, the Schlumbergeras need more water, but they do not like to be left soaked. They need good drainage, so either remove that foil or cut holes in the bottom to let the water out. If you set it in a saucer, water the plant until water drains out the bottom, but empty the saucer afterward. However, some humidity is good, so one could put rocks in a saucer and leave the water, as long as the water does not touch the bottom of the pot. Usually, the new plant will be in a plastic pot, but terra cotta is actually better for drainage. If you decide to treat your plant to a new home, select a pot that is not much bigger than the one in which it came. These cacti actually like to be a little pot-bound and do not need to be re-potted for three to five years. They are not terribly picky about the potting soil, but it does need to drain well. I prefer a cactus mix, adding some peat moss to give the plant more acid.

If you take care, you can have your holiday cactus for many years. I personally know someone who has a specimen that is over 30 and she says it has never been repotted. She does cut it back a couple of months after it finishes blooming, causing it to branch and resulting in more blooming stems the following year. The cuttings may be left to dry until the end scabs and then planted about an inch deep in moist potting medium. A plastic tent will help keep the humidity up for better rooting. New growth is the best indicator that the plant has rooted and is ready to add to your collection or be given to a friend.
