To Whom This May Concern,

My name is [REDACTED] and I work with high school students that have differing abilities. I aid the students in identifying goals and assist them with plans to aid their transition from high school. Their transition can either encompass attending college, obtaining training, or entering into the workforce. A part of this is also assisting the students in gaining skills to be independent so they become successful, competitively employed individuals in the future.

I was introduced to Lowcountry Academic Consulting as they were a vendor my agency utilized in order to educate students on various things to be successful in their educational journey. The scheduling process was simple- I was able to speak directly with Courtney Lawrence, the President & Founder of Lowcountry Academic Consulting. We were able to discuss the populations I serve, their needs, and determine dates that would work best for the students' schedules. I selected the topic "Effective Study Habits" in order for students to gain insight, tips, and tricks on how to best manage their time and utilize strategies that may aid them in retaining and recalling information so they can be successful in their educational journey.

During the presentation, students were engaged and could relate to the various challenges Ms. Lawrence presented. Some were able to disclose their disability and limitations as well as discussed how it impacts them in their current educational setting. At the conclusion, they shared how the information shared was extremely helpful and how they will be able to adopt some of the strategies Ms. Lawrence discussed. As a Counselor, I feel this is invaluable. Students continue to discuss how helpful this presentation was and desire to work with Ms. Lawrence & Lowcountry Academic Consulting in the future.

It was a pleasure to partner with Lowcountry Academic Consulting and I would utilize them time and time again. The time she spent with my students to impart knowledge they can utilize at the current moment as well as in the future was exactly what my students needed to boost their confidence and aid them in their current educational setting. I look forward to a continued partnership with Lowcountry Academic Consulting where my students are the benefactors of such great information.

Kind Regards,

[REDACTED]
