To Whom It May Concern,

I am the parent of a college student who was professionally diagnosed as a elementary school student with Dyslexia and Dyscalculia. To say the K-12 years were challenging for my daughter is an understatement. However, through hard work, determination and a strong work ethic, my daughter was able to reach her goal of attending college and gained admission to College of Charleston.

At the beginning of her sophomore year, my daughter was required to take an Elementary Statistics class for her intended major. The class was taught online due to Covid and this format was not how my daughter learned best. Fortunately, Lowcountry Academic Counseling, specifically Ms. Courtney Lawrence was recommended to my daughter by a fellow student. Ms. Lawrence took the fear out of learning something extremely challenging and presented it to my daughter in a way which made sense. Her approach was always calm and supportive. Her ability to bring charts and graphs to life with technology she brought to tutoring sessions made a very difficult course more manageable. Ms. Lawrence always made herself available to my daughter via text, email and by phone in the days leading up to a test. As a parent, I appreciated Ms. Lawrence keeping me informed on how my daughter was doing in her weekly tutoring sessions.

I would recommend Ms. Lawrence to any individual who has learning differences and wants to reach their full potential in the classroom and beyond.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
