What Tomatoes Woody Grows!

BY BETTY HALE
Special to Journal

Jack may have his beanstalk, but Woody Longhurst has his tomato plant. It is 9 feet tall, 18 feet wide and at the present time there are 48 ripe tomatoes growing there!

This tomato was planted March 1, 1982, along a brick wall in the basement stairwell where Longhurst has built a slanting roof of plastic and installed solar equipment for heat. The tomato bore profusely last year and quit blooming in late December. By the time the tomatoes on the vine had ripened (March 1) blossoms began to appear again so he just left the plant in place. The vine continued to grow and set on another crop of tomatoes which now seems to be at its peak. The plant rested only during the marginal sunlight time.

The tomato has a stalk like a tree and is supported against the wall. It is a late variety bearing large fruit. He has provided a climate that was right and fertilized with nature's fertilizer from his own barnyard.

The solar system and rock heat storage furnishes the home with hot water and adds heat to the house as well as the greenhouse. A strawberry bed in a separate lean on the same south side of the house has already born its first crop of strawberries. The whole system cost less than $400.

Longhurst leans toward organic gardening and has devoted customers who buy the corn he raises on his place each year.

"Idaho's growing season isn't always quite long enough," says Longhurst. "My philosophy about that is just to adjust your lifestyle to the area in which you live. When it snows we ski, (we means Woody's wife, April, and their combined families including 14 children.) When the sun shines, we fish and swim or water ski. If the season seems a little short for growing plants, we find a way to give them some protection. It is just doing the best with what you have."

OFFICE OF THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH 84150

July 29, 1983

President W. James Johnston
Pocatello ID West Stake

Dear President Johnston:

The recommendations contained in yours of July 17, 1983 are approved, namely that (1) Woodrow W. Longhurst succeed Herbert W. Wallace as bishop of the Pocatello 9th Ward; and (2) Don E. Murdock succeed Bruce H. Winegar as bishop of the Pocatello 16th Ward.

You are therefore authorized to interview these brethren to ascertain their worthiness and willingness to serve in this position. As you inquire into their worthiness, you should specifically ask whether or not they have ever been excommunicated, disfellowshipped, or put on probation as the result of Church court action. If the answers to this question are yes, defer extending the calls and advise us about the circumstances involved in the excommunication, disfellowshipment, or probation, and your appraisal of their present attitudes and worthiness. If they answer the question in the negative and they are otherwise worthy and willing to serve, you are authorized to call them as the new bishops.

When you advise them of their appointments, you will do well to make very clear to them the necessity of conforming their lives fully to the principles of the Restored Gospel, which it will be their duty to teach to the people by example as well as by precept, and that their efforts to build Latter-day Saints can be successful only as they lead in the true way of life set for us by our Lord. Please review the Handbook of Instructions with the new bishops so that they may be fully informed regarding their duties and responsibilities. Also, it is important that the new bishops be given proper training in the procedures for handling Church monies.

You should then present them to their respective wards and, if the wards approve, you are authorized and directed to ordain them bishops. You should then set each apart to preside over his ward, conferring upon him all of the keys, rights, powers, and authority of this office. You should also set him apart as the president of the Aaronic Priesthood and of the priests quorum in the ward. In the blessing of each it would be appropriate to make specific reference to his duties as a common judge in Israel and as the presiding high priest of the ward, with specific emphasis upon his responsibilities for the Aaronic Priesthood and the young women of comparable age. If any of these brethren is not already a high priest, you should ordain him to that office before he is ordained a bishop. If he has already been ordained a bishop, it will be necessary only to set him apart as the bishop of the ward. Following the ordination and setting apart of the bishops, you should also set apart their counselors. The Church Directory Action Request form should be used in reporting on the ordination and setting apart of the bishops.

Please inform them that they have our confidence and our prayers in all the responsibilities involved in this most important assignment. We promise them a great rewarding satisfaction for faithful devotion to their callings.

Sincerely your brethren,

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Gordon B. Hinckley
