The Wandering Christmas Camel

by Janet Eyestone Buck

Our family has always enjoyed a Christmas tradition of setting out a ceramic nativity scene--complete with wise men, camels, shepherds, sheep, and of course, Mary, Joseph, and Baby Jesus. Each season the nativity scene was the same.

One year when my children were young, I carefully unwrapped each piece and set up an artistic display representing the first Christmas.

The children gathered around to watch. We talked about the birth of Jesus and the visit of the shepherds and Magi. I then cautioned the children, as always, not to touch the pieces, explaining that they were fragile and easily broken.

This year, however, the temptation was too great for my two-year old daughter, Elizabeth. The day we set up the nativity scene, I noticed several times, with some irritation, that a camel had wandered from its appointed place or sometimes a sheep had strayed from the watchful care of the shepherd.

Each time, I returned the piece to its rightful place, and then tracked down the culprit and admonished her to leave things alone.

The next morning, Elizabeth awoke and went downstairs before I did. When I walked into the living room I noticed right

Christmas

*Every time a hand reaches out
To help another....that is Christmas
Every time someone puts anger aside
And strives for understanding
That is Christmas*

*Every time people forget their differences
And realize their love for each other
That is Christmas*

*May this Christmas bring us Closer to the spirit of human understanding
Closer to the blessing of peace!*

There's More to Christmas

*There's More to Christmas...
There's more, much more to
Christmas
Than candle-light and cheer;
It's the spirit of sweet friendship
That brightens all the year;
It's thoughtfulness and kindness,
It's hope reborn again,
For peace, for understanding
And for goodwill to men!*

Late Christmas Gift

Fred and John were fortunate enough to have season tickets to watch the Chicago Bears.

But they could not help noticing that there was always a spare seat next to them. They had a friend who would love to buy a season ticket.

One half-time Fred went to the ticket office and asked if they could buy the season ticket next to them. Unfortunately the ticket had been sold. But every week the seat was still empty.

Then on the Sunday after Christmas, at the last home game of the season, much to Freddie and Eddie's amazement the seat was taken for the first time that season.

John could not resist asking the newcomer, "Where have you been all season? You missed the first seven games!"

"Don't ask," he said. "My wife bought the season ticket back last summer, but she kept it for a surprise Christmas present."

away that the manger scene had been disturbed again. All the pieces were clumped together in a mass, as tightly as they could be fitted together.

Impatiently, I stepped forward to put things right; but I stopped short as I realized that some thought had gone into this new arrangement. All twenty-three figures were grouped in a circle, facing inward, pushed together as if to get the best view possible of the figure resting in the center of them all—the Baby Jesus.

The spirit touched my soul as I pondered the insight of a two-year old. Certainly, Christ should be the center of our holiday celebrations. If we all could draw in around our Savior—not only during the Christmas season but during each day—what a better perspective we would have. The love He offers to each of us would be easily shared with others who have not ventured so close.

I left the nativity arranged according to Elizabeth's design that year. It served as a poignant reminder during the rest of the season of what Christmas is all about.

Sharing Your Seed

There was a farmer who grew excellent quality corn. Every year he won the award for the best grown corn in the county.

One year a big-city newspaper reporter interviewed him. In the course of the interview he learned something very interesting about how he grew it. The reporter discovered that the farmer shared his award-winning seed corn with his neighbors.

“How can you afford to share your best seed corn with your neighbors when they are entering their corn in competition with yours each year?” the reporter asked.

“Well, young man,” said the farmer, “don’t you know? The wind picks up pollen from the ripening corn and swirls it from field to field. If my neighbors grow inferior corn, cross-pollination will steadily degrade the quality of my corn. If I am to grow good corn, I must help my neighbors grow good corn.”

So is with our lives... those who want to live meaningfully and well must help enrich the lives of others, for the value of a life is measured by the lives it touches. And those who choose to be happy must help others find happiness, for the welfare of each is bound up with the welfare of all...

- Author Unknown (Proverbs 11:24-25)

Foiled by the Word

An elderly woman had just returned home from an evening church service when she was startled by an intruder. She had caught him in the act of robbing her home and stealing her valuables.

She yelled at him, “Stop! Acts 2:38!” (Her favorite scripture, which reads “Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ so that your sins may be forgiven.”)

Inexplicably, the burglar stopped in his tracks.

The woman calmly called the police, who quickly came, found the man and arrested him.

As the officer handcuffed the man, he asked the burglar, “Why did you just stand there? All the lady did was quote a scripture at you.”

“Scripture?” replied the burglar. “I thought she said she had an axe and two ‘38s!”

Not for the Faint of Heart

A mechanic was removing a cylinder head from the engine of a BMW when the owner walked in, a well-known heart surgeon.

The mechanic turned to the surgeon, and said, "Hey, Doc, can I ask you a question?"

"Of course," he said.

The mechanic wiped his hands on a rag and asked, "So, Doc, look at this engine. I open it up, take out the valves, fix 'em, put 'em back in, and when I finish, it works just like new. So how come I get such a small salary and you get the really big bucks, when you and I are doing basically the same work?"

The surgeon paused, smiled and leaned over, and whispered to the mechanic, "Have you every tried doing it with the engine running?"

Early Christmas Shopping

It was just before Christmas and the judge was in a happy mood. He asked the prisoner before his bench, "What are you charged with?"

The prisoner replied, "Doing my Christmas shopping too early."
"That's no crime," said the judge. "Just how early were you doing this shopping?"

"Before the shop opened," answered the prisoner.
