The Old Man and the Marine

This story is reprinted in honor of our Veterans

A nurse took the tired, anxious serviceman to the bedside. “Your son is here,” she said to the old man. She had to repeat the words several times before the patient’s eyes opened.

Heavily sedated because of the pain of his heart attack, he dimly saw the young uniformed Marine standing beside his bed. He reached out his hand.

The Marine wrapped his toughened fingers around the old man’s limp ones, squeezing a message of love and encouragement.

The nurse brought a chair so that the Marine could sit beside the bed. All through the night the young Marine sat there in the dimly-lit room, holding the old man’s hand and offering him words of love and strength. Occasionally, the nurse suggested that the Marine move away and rest awhile. He refused.

Whenever the nurse came into the room, the Marine was oblivious of her and of the night noises of the hospital - the clanking of the oxygen tank, the laughter of the night staff

Thank You
VETERANS

Veterans Day
by Cheryl Dyson

On Veterans Day, we honor all
Who answered to a service call.
Soldiers young and soldiers old,
Fought for freedom, brave and bold.

Some have lived, while others died,
And all of them deserve our pride.
We’re proud of all the soldiers who Kept thinking of red, white and blue.

They fought for us and all our rights,
They fought through many days and nights.
And though we may not know
each name,
We thank ALL veterans
just the same.

members exchanging greetings, the cries and moans of the other patients. Now and then she heard him say a few gentle words.

The dying man said nothing, only held tightly to his son all through the night.

Along towards dawn, the old man died. The Marine released the now lifeless hand he had been holding and went to tell the nurse.

While she did what she had to do, he waited.

Finally, she returned. She started to offer words of sympathy, but the Marine interrupted her, "Who was that man?" he asked.

The nurse was startled, "He was your father," she answered.

"No, he wasn't," the Marine replied. "I never saw him before in my life."

"Then why didn't you say something when I took you to him?"

"I knew right away there had been a mistake, but I also knew he needed his son, and his son just wasn't here. When I realized that he was too sick to tell whether or not I was his son, knowing how much he needed me, I stayed. I came here tonight to find a Mr. William Grey. His son was killed in Iraq today, and I was sent to inform him. What was this gentleman's name?"

The nurse with tears in her eyes answered, "William Grey....."

Distracted in Small Groups

My daughter handed me her school progress report. Although it displayed a steady stream of positive check marks, there was one check mark standing dejectedly alone from the rest.

“How am I doing, Mom?” my child asked with a level of maturity that did not match the small disheveled person gazing up at me with smudged eyeglasses that teetered on the tip of her nose. With her small finger, she pointed to her teacher’s neatly printed words next to the lone check mark.

It read: “Distracted in large groups.” But I already knew this. I knew this long before it was written on an official report card. Since she was a toddler, this child has offered astute observations of the world around her.

After pointing out all the positives on the progress report, I told her what was written. Upon hearing the news, she gave a tiny, uncertain smile and shyly admitted, “I do look around a lot.”

But before my child could feel one ounce of shame, one iota of failure, I came down on bended knee and looked her straight in the eye. I didn’t want her to just hear these words; I wanted her to feel them. This is what I said:

“Yes. You do look around a lot. You noticed Sam sitting off by himself with a skinned knee on the field trip, and you comforted him.”

“You noticed Banjo had a running nose, and the vet said it was a good thing we brought him in when we did.”

“You noticed our waitress was working really hard and suggested we leave an extra good tip. You noticed Grandpa was walking slower than the rest of us, so you waited for him.”

“You notice the beautiful view every time we cross the bridge to go to swim practice.”

“And you know what? I don’t ever want you to stop noticing because that is your gift. It is your gift that you give to the world.”

As I watched my daughter beam with the glow of acceptance, I realized her approach to life had the power to change the world.

You see, we are all just waiting for someone to notice—notice our pain, notice our scars, notice our fear, notice our joy, notice our triumphs, notice our courage. And the one who notices is a rare and beautiful gift.

Get Lost!

Two new deer hunters decided to separate to increase their chances.

“What if we get lost?” says one of them.

“Fire three shots up in the air, every hour on the hour,” says the other.

Sure enough, one of the hunters gets lost, so he fires three shots up into the air every hour on the hour.

The next day the other hunter finds his friend with the help of the Forest Ranger.

“Did you do what I said?” asked the hunter.

“Yes, I fired three shots up into the air every hour on the hour, until I ran out of arrows.”

Final Resting Place

An elderly woman decided to prepare her will and told her preacher she had two final requests. First, she wanted to be cremated, and second, she wanted her ashes scattered over at Walmart.

"Walmart?" the preacher exclaimed. "Why Walmart?"

"Then I'll be sure my daughters visit me twice a week."

You're Fired!

The new company manager decided it was time to get rid of the company slackers.

On a tour of the plant, he noticed a guy leaning against a wall. Seeing a chance to show he meant business, he said to the man, "How much money do you make a week?"

A little surprised, the young man replied. "I make $400 a week. Why?"

The boss said, "Wait right here." He walked into the office and came back a few minutes later.

He handed the guy $1,600 in cash and said, "Here's four weeks pay. Now get out and don't come back!"

Feeling like a real boss now, the manager looked around and said, "Does anyone want to tell me what that goof-off's job was around here?"

From across the room, a voice spoke up, "Pizza delivery guy from Domino's."

Buying Her Some Bling

An older, white-haired gentleman walked into a jewelry store late one Friday with his beautiful, young 20-something girlfriend at his side. He told the jeweler he was looking for a special ring for his girlfriend.

The jeweler looked through his stock and brought out a $5000 ring and showed it to him. The old man said, "No, I want something very special."

The jeweler went back and brought out a $15,000 ring.

Looking it over, the old man shook his head and said, "I don't think you understand. I want something VERY special for my girl."

At that statement, the jeweler went to his safe and brought another ring over. "Here's a stunning ring, one of the finest I have. It is $40,000" the jeweler said.

The young lady's eyes sparkled, and she trembled with excitement. Seeing her reaction, the old man said, "We'll take it!"

Then the jeweler asked how payment would be made. The old man calmly stated, "I'll be paying by check. I know you need to make sure my check is good, so I'll write it now and you can call the bank on Monday to verify the funds. Then I'll pick up the ring Monday afternoon."

The couple left with the young lady hanging on his arm and grinning from ear to ear.

Monday morning a very upset jeweler phoned the old man. "There's no money in that account!" he exclaimed.

"I know," said the old man, "Now ask me how my weekend was!"
