Story & Background

The women in our area suffer from various physical ailments due to the harsh life of living in the outback of rural India. They are the forgotten people of India, living far from modern infrastructure and conveniences. In the 10 km surrounding Ganeshpuri of Thane District, Maharashtra, India, there are approximately 20,000 families or 120,000 people. Although it is only 100 km from Mumbai, the financial capital of India, this area is undeveloped and the people suffer from a lack of work, education, transportation, and government facilities and resources. About 48% of these families are illiterate, unskilled, landless, and live below the poverty level. They are suffering from easily treatable diseases and a lack of food. The majority of the hamlets are situated in inaccessible areas and are devoid of electricity and fresh water. They mainly depend upon daily wages to make both ends meet, often the most difficult work to be found, brick making. They are unaware of government programs and other opportunities.

The Current Challenges:

Schools in the Ganeshpuri area have now reopened after two years of being closed due to the Covid pandemic. During these past two years, we have continued to provide financial help for 22 Girls each month as they completed their courses via their cellphones. OMGMT identifies and verifies the needs of local girls from impoverished homes who have a dream to acquire an education and create a rewarding life.

OMGMT gathers applications at the beginning of the new school year from mostly Adivasi tribal girls, who need help with school. Girls are often held back from school to help the mother with household chores, such as fetching water at the well 3-8 times daily, collecting firewood, washing clothes at the well or in the river, cooking, and minding their younger siblings. Some girls become substitute mothers when a widowed mother has to take on outside work to pay for household expenses. Occasionally we interview girls whose fathers prohibit them from attending school or don't agree to pay the expenses of school because the father sees it as a waste of money. They think, "why spend valuable resources on a daughter who will marry and move away? This investment of family resources will not bring us any return" they do not think or maybe don't have the financial freedom, to help their daughters become the best they can be.

Strategy to Help:

Ms. Mohini Rao, OMGMT staff member, and coordinator of our Scholarship programs take applications from each girl along with copies of her latest grades. She interviews each girl and her family in her home to determine the real need of each applicant. Our budget for this past year, which sent 22 girls to primary school, secondary school, and college, has been 2,22,000 rupees. We have attached our yearly estimate for our 22 young ladies. The amount per student varies upon need. Some girls need help with the tuition fees, others need money for transportation. One family has no mother or father and we help the guardians buy groceries in addition to school costs. Mohini not only takes the applications and makes the initial home visits but maintains contact with each girl all through the year. We are committing to at least helping the same number of girls this year. During the months of May through July, we begin our interviewing process. We do not know now how many young ladies will approach us, but we wish to be ready for at least 22 girls this year.
