Counseling

We use Motivational Interviewing to encourage the client to resolve their ambivalence (i.e., conflict) about changing their behavior, while not evoking resistance (e.g., get confrontational, blame, label).

Motivational Techniques can help people change by recognizing their high risk behavior (e.g., personalized feedback; pie chart--- where do I fit in?). This aids us in evaluating how their current behavior relates to other issues in their life (e.g., Decisional Balance exercise, personalized goal evaluation).

This progressive method looks at ways to begin the process of changing (e.g., identify client's strengths; develop action plans). Therapist will be utilizing open ended questions and reflecting listen skill to help the client explore their situation.
