

A war of hearts

An ancient heart I was given
To have the ability to find the beauty within
To know at a young age, social rules didn't apply to me
So I resisted where I could, when I should
How can you tell me anything about me?
I am me
Who are you?

I stayed quiet because I preferred to look
I saw everything others couldn't see
I touched nature and felt at home
I heard everything and nothing at the same time
I felt something deep inside before I knew what it meant to have a soul

It is something within no one can touch
Not even I
Not physically
It's like a brewing of fog
A collection of the masses
In connection to the past and the future
Collaboration with the one thing realest on this earth
Nature
Love

My love, where are you?
It seems like I have been calling you
Long distance
I don't care how much it costs
I need you now more than ever
Where is my fellow ancient heart?

I'm getting tired of entertaining
These connections that are only temporary
This fing society makes sex popular
You've infected my people
They have no choice to protect their hearts
And now that I am free to mend
I can't get in

In those hearts made of cactus
They want me to enter through the back, to the side, anywhere but the front

I'm trying to make my body go that way but my soul won't let me stay in that lane
I don't want to desert you and leave you in the desert
Where the shape of your heart doesn't grow but your prickles do

I'm trying to show you the way without touching skins
Because you don't know the right way to do skin to skin
Without feeling like you want to show me yours
And you unzip

Damn it
This always happens
Not that I couldn't of attacked it
In the best way possible
Not that I couldn't have made you feel so attractive
I really liked you but you're going about this the wrong way
I want you
But not like this
Not yet

Not everyone deserves what I can give
I could give a piece of life that you were missing
On a home-cooked plate
I have the strength to carry my children with no help
I am balanced between brains and bronze
I'm a native woman
All natural
I know how to take care of man
Willingly surrender to him
Our protector
The father
The other half of me
Where are you?

I'm crying from this ancient heart of mine
The one that longs for her partner
I am alone
A widow
I take care of my family no problem
But I'm close to running to the mountains
Like they did before when they hunted us
Our salvation our beliefs our culture
It all stems from nature

I pray to keep having the strength to hold on

I'm doing my best to keep working hard
But the city tears me down
The men who claim to be native
Live their lives the same as anyone else
There seems to be no plans to change

I stand next to you now
But when the times comes
I will leave you as I left many others
In the past
Because they chose not to move forward
You claim loyalty but you won't follow me to the top
Into the land where we came from
From the ancient time
Where everyone had the same ancient heart

It is everyone for themselves now
Money has its bloody hands in everything
Including my people
Now they are dying
Barely surviving
Claiming happiness as they poison themselves
Fing each other and claiming love
We're just fing each other up

I'm here observing this and I feel helpless
I try to extend a hand but they want my whole body
The pressure
It gets to me
That's why I say f it
If I could I would leave all this behind
But I have to remain strong and confident
That I will provide for my children
And one day someone will show up for me
Once I am steady and stable
My fellow ancient heart will find me
