Wound Healing Dressing with Phosphorylase Kinase Inhibitors

Wound healing in adult skin, a complex process involving many cell types and processes such as epidermal, fibroblastic and endothelial cell proliferation, cell migration, matrix synthesis and wound contraction, almost invariably results in scar tissue formation and wound induration in adult skin.

Woundcur® Gel contains a proprietary preparation derived from Curcumin extract and other plant-based ingredients that provide a potent inhibitor of NF- $\kappa$ B activation, as a well as protection from re-injury of the wound. The gel dressing may be used as a topical agent combined with approved dressings for wound healing for ulcers, burns and surgical wounds.

The WoundCur® Gel Dressing may be used in the assessment stage to reduce severity of injury prior to other medical treatments. When used apply on wounds prior to using other medical treatments as adjunctive therapy, as well as post-treatment may shorten treatment time and improve outcome.
