

Sister Kill Cycle is a long-standing force in the industrial and gothic metal/rock underground, known for blending shock rock intensity with heavy electronic and metal influences. Originally started as a solo project by frontperson Raven Chain around 2000, the band quickly expanded into a full group focused on immersive audio-visual performances and genre-defying sound. Over the decades they've developed a reputation for intense live shows, a distinctive dark aesthetic, and a sound that bridges the eerie atmospheres of goth with crushing industrial metal. They have shared stages with major acts in the alternative and industrial scene and built a dedicated underground following.

In 2025, Sister Kill Cycle released their sixth studio album We Were Ghosts, a concept-driven record exploring themes of loss, rage, and existential upheaval. The album was issued worldwide via Von Artists Ltd., the band's current distribution partner, and further establishes their global reach through major digital platforms. Sister Kill Cycle's recent output, including singles like their dark reinterpretation of "Bad Moon Rising" (2025), showcases their ongoing evolution and ability to reinterpret classic influences through their own intense industrial lens.
