TIDBITS® RIDICULES

GENDER REVEALS

by Janet Spencer

Come along with Tidbits as we attend the world's worst gender reveal parties!

WILD PARTIES

* Blogger and journalist Jenna Karvunidis accidentally started a new tradition in 2008. After several heartbreaking disappointments, she finally held onto a pregnancy long enough to find out whether she was having a girl or a boy. She baked a cake, secretly spreading the middle layer with pink icing. She invited friends to a celebration, cutting into the cake to reveal that she was expecting a baby girl. Pictures posted to her blog went viral. This was the first gender reveal party.

* This kicked off a fad that spread widely around the nation. By 2010, gender reveal parties had evolved in scope and method, ranging from simple to elaborated, including boxes filled with colored helium balloons, balloons filled with colored powder, fireworks, pinatas, smoke bombs, confetti bombs, and more.

* Karvundis now regrets the fad that her original gender reveal party sparked, not only for the destruction caused, but because she doesn't feel that such a big deal should be made over the gender of a baby. "Celebrate the baby, not the gender" is her approach.

♂ GENDER REVEALS ♀

AN ALLIGATOR

* When a couple in Florida found out they were expecting in 2019, they agreed the gender reveal should involve their pet alligator, Amos. The dad, a 'nuisance wildlife trapper' for the Florida fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission, acquired the gator as a pet in 2000. To accomplish the gender reveal, he dangled a black balloon attached to a long pole in front of the alligator, a typical feeding technique. When the alligator chomped on the balloon, it exploded into a cloud of pink powder. Let's hope Amos got a nice fish dinner afterward for his trouble.

LASAGNA

* In 2018, Villa Italian Kitchen, a pizza and pasta chain based out of New Jersey, announced a "Gender Reveal Lasagna." They made it using white Alfredo sauce instead of tomato sauce, and mozzarella and ricotta instead of cheddar, so that the pink and blue dye that colored the sauce and the cheese would really stand out.

For only $140, customers received a lasagna big enough to feed 12, plus garlic rolls and a salad. People who posted their lasagna gender reveal to social media were entered into a contest to win a free catered meal. There was mixed reaction to this idea, with people complaining that instead of blue for boys, it definitely looked more like green.

PLANE CRASH

* The town of Turkey, Texas, was the site of a near-fatal gender reveal. On September 7, 2019, friends and family gathered to watch a hired crop-dusting plane fly over the party, dropping 350 gallons of either pink or blue water into the nearby fields. However, after disgorging the load of pink water, the low-flying plane was thrown off balance and stalled. It crash-landed on a neighboring farm. Both the pilot and co-pilot were injured but survived. The plane, however, was a total loss.

THE HIPPO

* A Texas couple incorporated a local zoo's hippopotamus for their gender reveal. The hippo, named Tank, resides at the Capital of Texas Zoo. Officials at the zoo assisted in planning the event. With a crowd gathered and cameras rolling, Tank waited with his mouth wide open at this regular feeding time.

The father-to-be tossed in a watermelon and when Tank bit down on it, the melon exploded into blue squirts. Watermelon is a favorite treat for hippos, and the blue filling was gelatin, a common dietary supplement. The video went viral, a publicity coup for both the zoo and the expectant mother.

PHILLY FIREWORKS

*In July of 2018, a family gathered on the sidewalk of a Philadelphia neighborhood to set off a gender-revealing fireworks cannon. The fireworks tube, set up on a rickety stand, was unstable. As the fireworks burst into the sky, the launch tube tipped over, spewing pyrotechnics throughout the crowd. Screaming and scrambling they ran for cover. "My wife was filming with my phone and I immediately grabbed my son and covered his face and ran," a partygoer reported. A few people were hit and suffered minor burns.

BURNOUT

An Australian gender reveal disaster involved using a car to spin donuts in a gravel parking area which caused blue smoke to spew forth. As the car continued to perform "burnouts," the smoke increased - and flames appeared. The Queensland Police Service released footage of the incident, showing the abandoned car sitting in the middle of a cloud of thick smoke that turned from blue to black as flames surrounded the ruined vehicle. The driver was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle in a dangerous manner. There was no word on whether he was the dad.

APPLEBEE'S FIST FIGHT

* Trouble brewed at an Applebee's in Cleveland in 2018 when 20 people gathered for a gender reveal. The method they chose was a mass launch of confetti-packed poppers. When staff objected to the prospect of cleaning up all that confetti, trouble broke out. The manager insisted that the party take their big reveal outside, prompting the group to yell, curse, and threaten. The hostess was pelted with menus, and police were called. The result was a parking lot, sidewalk, and cars covered with confetti, and an unpaid tab left behind. Police were able to track down the perpetrators with the help of license plate numbers recorded by staff members, as well as a purse left behind in a booth. No word on whether it was a girl or a boy.

FIRE!

* Two of the worst gender reveals involved wild-fire. In 2017, the expectant father added colored powder to a box of highly explosive Tannerite. He affixed the mixture to a target and carried it to an Arizona state park where the gender reveal was held. He shot the target with a rifle, spreading blue powder and flaming Tannerite in dry grass. The resulting conflagration, dubbed the Sawmill Fire, burned for two weeks, scorching 73 square miles (190 km). Over $8 million was spent fighting the flames. The dad was sentenced to five years probation and ordered to pay restitution of $500/month for the next 20 years, meaning that his newborn son will reach college age before the restitution is paid.

* in 2020, a gender-revealing smoke bomb was detonated at El Dorado Park in California. The El Dorado fire scorched 35, 538 square miles (92.04 km) and cost $23 million. It burned 20 buildings, including four homes, and forced thousands to evacuate. It wasn't extinguished until November. Firefighter Charles Morton, age 39, was killed while fighting the flames.

Fun Fact

Memories that are linked with a specific smell carry more emotion than visual memories. The nerve signals that share sights, sounds and touch typically go through the thalamus. Smell signals bypass this area and go to the olfactory bulb and then to the amygdala and hippocampus, which deal with higher-level thinking.

SPORTS STORIES

NEW RULES

- * As various sports have evolved, new situations have led to the creation of new rules. Here are the stories behind a few.
- * Tom Dempsey was born missing the toes on his right foot. This did not stop him from a career as a kicker in football. He was outfitted with a blunt-nosed half boot that ended where his foot ended, which was an improvement over having a half-empty shoe with newspaperstuffed in the toe.
- * In 1970, in a game where the New Orleans Saints were up against the Detroit Lions, Dempsey was wearing this half-shoe when he kicked a game-winning, record-setting 63-yard field goal for the Saints.
- * Some people complained that his disability, corrected by the specially made shoe, gave him an advantage. The Dallas Cowboys president insisted that his remarkable kick be entered into the record books with an asterisk next to it, explaining the special circumstances of the feat.
- * In response to the controversy, seven years later, the NFL passed Rule 5, Section 4, Article 3, Item 7, which states that all shoes used to kick a field goal, regardless of the disability of the kicker, must conform to the specifications of a normal shoe. In other words, a prosthetic is allowed, but only if it matches the uniform requirements of players who are not wearing a prosthetic. It was called the Tom Dempsey rule.

- * Dempsey was upset by this new rule and went to the Commissioner to object. The Commissioner reassured Tom that his record was grand-fathered in and would be unaffected by the ruling. Dempsey held the record for 43 years until it was broken by Matt Prater, who kicked a 64-yard field goal while playing for the Denver Broncos in 2013.
- * Pat Venditti was born ambidextrous, able to use either hand equally well.

When he became a pitcher in the minor leagues, he was a switch pitcher. He was playing for the Stanton Island Yankees in 2008 against the Brooklyn Cyclones when Ralph Henriquez stepped up to bat. Ralph was a switch-hitter. So now a switch-pitcher was throwing against a switch-hitter.

- * Seeing Venditti preparing to pitch with his right hand, Henriquez stepped to the right side of the plate. Venditti then prepared to pitch with his left hand, and Henriquez stepped to the left side of the batter's box. Venditti switched hands again; Henriquez switched sides again. This continued until the Umpire called a time-out and tried to figure out how to handle the situation.
- * It was the bottom of the 9th. The Cyclones were behind by five runs with two outs. Finally, it was decided that Venditti would pitch right-handed, and Henriquez would bat right-handed. Venditti struck him out. Major League Baseball later added a rule, specifying that a pitcher is required to indicate which hand he intends to pitch with, and is obligated to use that hand for as long as the batter is at bat. The pitcher is allowed to switch hands in between batters.

NO GLUE ALLOWED

Rule 5, Section 4, Article 4, Item 8 of the NFL rule book states simply that no adhesive or slippery substances are allowed. This rule originated with Lester Hayes, who played for the Oakland Raiders. He started using a sticky-tacky substance to help him catch the football. In a single season, Hayes caught 13 interceptions, setting an NFL record. He then started slathering his entire uniform in glue. In 1981, the Lester Hayes Rule outlawed the use of any such substance.

* Ahmed Best was a jazz musician from the Bronx when he joined the energetic percussion group called Stomp, touring with them for several years. Along the way, Ahmed became skilled at the acrobatic body percussion that characterized Stomp's performances. At one show in 1996, a casting director in the audience noticed how limber Ahmed was. At the time, the casting director was looking for someone to play the part of an alien in the first Star Wars prequel, "The Phantom Menace." The character's name, suggested by George Lucas' young son, was Jar Jar Binks.

* Ahmed Best was thrilled and did his best to work with the producers and directors to come up with what turned out to be history's first CGI hybrid character. Lucas patterned the part after Disney's Goofy, and Ahmed came up with the voice, the moves, and the pratfalls accordingly. Jar Jar Binks was supposed to provide comic relief, appealing to children.

* However, Ahmed Best was unprepared for the backlash of ridicule that resulted when the movie was released in 1999.

Jar Jar Binks was compared to a Jamaican mammy, a Vaudeville black-faced minstrel, or a stereotypical plantation slave. Ahmed was accused of racism, although he is black. Ahmed was so distraught over the derision that one day, he nearly threw himself off the Brooklyn Bridge, feeling that he had unintentionally destroyed the movie franchise he had adored.

* Nearly 20 years later, Ahmed Best brought his young son to the place where he nearly jumped. He took a picture of himself and his son at that spot, and posted it to Twitter, explaining the whole story of how he nearly ended it all. This post went viral.

* Now people come out of the woodwork to apologize to Ahmed Best. Suddenly, his story was all over the media, and he started receiving calls. One of them was from the producers of the "The Mandalorian" who offered him a new role: that of Jedi master Kellran Beq, handsome and brave. He nailed the role.

* Meanwhile, the character of Jar Jar Binks was also re-deemed, with experts pointing out how the entire story are hinged on his actions. Here are some facts you might not have known about Jar Jar Binks, the hero.

* Jar Jar Binks was a member of the species called Gungans, native to Naboo. Gungans are amphibious and can hold their breath underwater for extended periods, making them comfortable both in water and on land.

* The costume, which cost about $100,000, gave actors something to interact with, and a focus for animators. It was a cross between a duck-billed dinosaur, an emu, and a heron.

* Michael Jackson wanted the role, but Lucas worried his fame would overshadow the part.

* When the movie was lampooned on "The Simpsons," the character was named "JimJam Bonks." When it was spoofed on "South Park," he was named "Joon-Joon."

* In a 2018 Saturday Night Live skit, guest star Natalie Portman reprised her role of Queen Padme Amidala. In the sketch she holds a gun to the head of an actor and shouts, "Say something [expletive] nice about Jar Jar Binks!"

* Jar Jar Binks went on to become a Junior Representative for his people in the Galactic Senate, serving alongside Amidala once she became the planet's senator.

* Despite the largely negative fan reaction to Jar Jar Binks, the film was the biggest box office hit in 1999, bringing in over $400 million.

Automata Displays

It's difficult to escape holiday shopping, whether you're buying gifts, stocking up for dinner parties or just taking advantage of a sale. And stores make sure to entice you with flashy, tempting displays. Even if you're not a fan of the commercialization of the holidays, store displays can be works of art. But collectors of antique advertising have known this for a long time. Window displays often have the most interesting images, the cleverest ideas and the latest technical effects.

Look at this automaton, which sold for $1,560 at Potter & Potter Auctions. It originally stood in the window of O.E. Day Jeweler and Optometrist, as written on its mirrored base. Dressed as a harlequin and holding a trumpet, the automaton resembles a medieval herald. When plugged in, it would have bowed to potential customers, offering a royal welcome to the store.

Q. I want to check the value of my vase. It is shaped like an urn with two handles on the sides and raised pictures of people and trees. There is a cupid flying above them. It is marked "F. & A. G." on the base.

A. It sounds like your vase is based on the Portland vase a famous ancient Roman vase. Many potteries made copies of it in the 18th and 19th centuries. The most famous and most valuable copies are made by Wedgwood. The mark on your vase was used by the Austrian pottery company of Gerbing & Stephan (located in the present-day Czech Republic) from about 1900 to 1903.

STAN SMITH'S TENNIS CLASS

MAKE IT LOOK EASY

It's hard to play well if you are tense. Take a look at some great players in other sports — they often make the game look easy. The best athletes look relaxed and fluid while playing.

The initials stand for brothers Friedrich and Alexander Gerbing, who were running their family's company at the time. The company made majolica, a tin-glazed earthenware pottery, in styles inspired by ancient history, often with historical or mythological scenes. Today, their vases sell for about $150 to $200.

TIP: The general rule about dovetailing: The fewer the number of joints, the older the piece. A drawer made in the early 17th century was either joined with one huge dovetail or was pegged together.

Try to find a way to play relaxed, without tension and fear of failure. If you're relaxed when playing, you will have better timing, which can improve your accuracy. Most importantly, it will reduce fatigue and make the game much more enjoyable.

- * The blocks of the Washington Monument are held together by gravity and friction, rather than mortar.
- * Ancient Romans gave a hard “no” to the practice of eating butter, with Pliny the Elder referring to butter as “the choicest food among barbarian tribes.” Why? Mainly because they used it for treating burns and thus thought of it as a medicinal salve rather than food.
- * Pencils have never been made from lead.
- * The leather diamond patch on the outside of backpacks, called a “lash tab,” was initially used by mountaineers to secure their gear.
- * Harvard University is older than calculus.
- * Some research has shown that up to 40% of a worker ant colony may remain idle while their comrades soldier on with the labor.
- * Heinz Ketchup has a “speed limit” of .028 miles per hour, set by the company as an indicator of the product’s consistency.

- * “Watching paint dry” is an actual occupation for some folks, requiring an observation of the changing colors and particles of the substance as it dries, both on walls and under a microscope.
- * Manhattan, New York’s most popular transportation hub, Grand Central Terminal, is radioactive.
- * The tradition of serving ham at Christmas comes from the Norse festival of Yule, where a boar was sacrificed to honor the deity Freyr.

* For moister and softer cookies, use honey as a substitute for a third of the sugar in your cookie recipe.

* "At a party, a cup of red wine spilled on one of my throw pillows. I love the pillow, since it is just the right size and really soft, but I could not get the stain out. So I covered it with a new fabric. I ended up doing all the assorted pillows in the same fabric, and it made a big change in the room. I wish I had done it sooner." ~ I.F. in Pennsylvania

Make Rosemary Cashews for Holiday Giving

This time of year, my holiday traditions begin with a gathering of five neighborhood friends for an early-morning coffee klatch at one of our houses. We originally met when our sons were just 5 years old, and our friendship continued through Cub Scout activities, softball games, bike rides, and picnics at the neighborhood park. Off they went to college, and now we attend their weddings together.

Since we still live within blocks of one another, we take turns hosting the annual get-together. For the one in charge, it's an opportunity to use our fanciest or quirkiest tableware for serving fruit, pastries and coffee. We exchange little memorable, sometimes homemade gifts, too.

I like to bring something from my kitchen, like this rosemary cashew appetizer/snack I prepared last year. The tasty cashews were such a hit that I decided to make the recipe in multiples this year and fill up wide pint-sized canning jars that I picked up at the store. Tied with a holiday ribbon, gift tags, and a shiny mini-sized gold ornament for extra bling, it is a unique, personalized gift to have on hand to give to the hosts of family holiday parties and other events we attend.

Make these in an afternoon with your school-aged kids who can assist in doing a step or two. For starters, let them take charge of pulling the fresh rosemary leaves off the stems before you chop the fragrant herb with a sharp knife. Then put the kids in charge of decorating and writing the tie-around gift tags.

ROSEMARY CASHES

- 3 cups roasted, unsalted cashews
- 1 heaping tablespoon minced fresh rosemary leaves
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 1/2 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 F. Spread the cashews in one layer on a cookie sheet and bake for about 6 minutes, or until warm and lightly toasted. Combine the rosemary, brown sugar, salt, melted butter and pepper (if you want an extra kick) in a large bowl. When the cashews are heated, immediately pour them in the bowl with the spice butter mixture. Toss thoroughly. Cool and serve. Store in an airtight container up to two weeks.

Cook's Note: If you prefer, substitute 1 tablespoon pure maple syrup for 1 tablespoon brown sugar.

Errors In Benefits Decisions

I'm all in favor of processing veterans benefits claims as fast as possible, but not like this. It appears that a senior VSR (veterans service representative) was authorizing claims decisions at such a fantastic rate that it came to the attention of the VA Office of Inspector General. In a legitimate decisions process, there are several steps involved in handling a claim, including doing interviews, looking at the issues, checking the evidence and so forth. After all the steps are correctly completed and a decision is made about an award (which includes granting or denying claims), the whole file is sent to a senior VSR to review for accuracy and to authorize. That senior review, one assumes, involves actually looking at a file, at the data and evidence involved, and at the claims processor's conclusion. This is where the senior VSR skipped steps - and managed to process 19 times the number of claims as anyone else in the country. He did this by spending less than five minutes on each file, where others across the country averaged 21 minutes per file. When queried about that, directors said it was "not physically possible" to do that many claims and have them be correct. During one period of time, it was learned that the VSR was processing a claim every one to three minutes, meaning that files weren't being opened at all. OIG reviewed a sample of claims done by that VSR over a six-month period and estimated that 84% of the claims had errors. And errors, when it comes to disability claims, mean granting claims, denying claims and awarding money. In this case, the errors came to an estimated $2.2 million in wrong payments. There are too many questions at this point to know how the situation will conclude. But we want to know: Is that VSR still employed? Will denied claims automatically be reviewed? And will overpaid benefits need to be repaid? Veterans deserve better than this.

Stay Calm to Foil Scammers

This is a new scam, but then it's what we expect from thieves - yet another way to steal from us. This one involves our innocent-seeming bank debit card, a scammer and a pair of scissors.

Here's how it works:

You'll get a call from someone claiming to be from your bank who says there is fraudulent activity happening on your account, and they need your help. You'll be told that you need to act fast before you lose all your money. The scammers will tell you to cut up your debit card, but not to cut up the little microchip on the card. Put all the pieces, they'll say, in an envelope and leave it at your door, because a bank "official" is going to rush over to take possession of the evidence. Oh, and there will be one last little detail they'll need - your bank PIN. By that time, if you're sufficiently rattled, you'll willingly tell them the number. A scammer will quickly show up at your door to grab the envelope. Armed with that little card chip and your PIN, they can quickly empty your account.

The key is for you to not get rattled, to not let scammers direct your actions.

If you're suspicious about any call, hang up! It's OK (even preferable in this case) to be rude! Call the bank or company on their official number and ask if they were trying to contact you about fraudulent activity on your account.

If your debit card (or any card) expires and the bank or company sends you a replacement, cut up the old one. Be sure to cut through the chip, the magnetic strip on the back and the numbers as well as your name. Divide them up in multiple trash bags to keep the pieces apart. Remember: Stay calm to defeat the scammers.
