WHY THIS PLAYER SHOULD BE ON YOUR RADAR

Berchimas is a high-upside, game-changing winger who can help an MLS-level club now while still carrying significant development and resale value. His speed, 1v1 ability and composure give a team an immediate solution against compact defenses by creating separation, progressing the ball and forcing defenders into difficult decisions. He is not yet a finished product — strength, passing consistency and final-ball execution still need development — but the overall risk is manageable given his age and current level. The reason to move now rather than in 6–12 months is that continued production and physical development could quickly increase both his competition for minutes and acquisition cost. In the right environment, he can already provide a dangerous change-of-pace option capable of influencing games from the bench or competing for starts, while projecting toward a much higher ceiling. Low-to-moderate sporting risk, strong upside and legitimate future resale potential make him a player worth getting into the building early.

MATCH NOTES AND PLAYER INSIGHTS

Strengths cluster around carrying and beating opponents; the development list is about strength, service quality, and off-ball timing.

- Explosive pace; high-level 1v1 dribbling and ball control
- Direct, progressive carrying that breaks lines and forces defensive decisions
- Composure in tight and stressful moments; sound decision-making and game intelligence
- Generally sound defensive shape and a high work rate
- Add core and overall strength
- Improve passing accuracy and range
- Sharpen shot accuracy and finishing
- More effective off-ball movement and final-third runs
- Improve final-ball and crossing consistency

NEXT STEPS

Recommend trial / closer live evaluation now. Test him against stronger, more physical fullbacks and track whether his passing range, final-ball execution, finishing and off-ball movement improve. Continue monitoring strength development and whether he can translate his 1v1 threat into consistent chance creation at a higher level.
