WHY THIS PLAYER SHOULD BE ON YOUR RADAR

Nys should be on the radar because he provides a combination of ball progression, chance creation and secondary scoring from attacking midfield. He can receive between the lines, carry possession through pressure and move between central and wide areas to create overloads. His acceleration, agility and close control allow him to create separation, while his 13 goal contributions, 3.24 shots, 2.35 progressive runs and 1.27 shot assists per 90 demonstrate his ability to influence attacks. He would help solve a lack of creativity between midfield and attack, limited transition threat and an overreliance on the primary striker for goals; his 2.01 opposition-half recoveries per 90 also suit a team that wants to counterpress. His movement disrupts defensive structures and gives his team another runner into the penalty area, and he was trusted as a North Texas SC captain in his first professional season. The primary risks are the step up in physical intensity, limited aerial value and inconsistent composure when heavily pressured — nine goals from 12.60 xG shows finishing must become more efficient. At 21 he retains meaningful development and resale potential: production, versatility, professional experience and an FC Dallas pathway could lift his value quickly, and the move should happen soon while his acquisition cost stays accessible.

MATCH NOTES AND PLAYER INSIGHTS

Creative and athletic profile with the separation coming in the mental and quickness bands — intelligence, transition reading, off-the-ball movement and leadership all grade at 4, alongside a full set of 4s for speed, acceleration, agility, ball control and dribbling. The limiting bands are physical duelling and aerial presence.

- 13 goal contributions at 0.50 per 90 from attacking midfield — 3.24 shots and 0.49 xG per 90 as a genuine secondary scorer
- Carries through pressure: 1.85 successful dribbles at 64% and 2.35 progressive runs per 90
- Creates in the danger zones — 3.94 final-third passes at 73.9% and 2.01 penalty-area passes at 59.8%
- Counter-pressing value with 2.01 recoveries in the opposition half per 90; captained North Texas SC in his first professional season
- Strength (2) and aerial ability (2) — will be moved off the ball by stronger MLS opponents until he adds physical robustness
- Finishing efficiency and composure under heavy pressure — nine goals from 12.60 xG, and decision-making dips when the press arrives

First professional season with North Texas SC in MLS NEXT Pro, used as an attacking midfielder across central and half-space roles. Output: 13 goal contributions at 0.50 per 90, from 3.24 shots and 0.49 xG per 90. Creation is genuinely front-foot — 3.94 accurate final-third passes and 2.01 accurate penalty-area passes per 90 — and the carrying is repeatable at 2.35 progressive runs and 1.85 successful dribbles per 90. Nine goals from 12.60 xG marks finishing efficiency as the clearest statistical gap.
