CLEO PARKER ROBINSON DANCE – INSPIRING MOVEMENT!

Currently celebrating its 55th Anniversary Season, Cleo Parker Robinson Dance is an international performing arts and educational institution rooted in African American traditions and the Diaspora, dedicated to excellence in providing cross-cultural performances, and enrichment programs - empowering all our communities by cultivating healthy mind, body, and spirit development for intergenerational students, artists, and audiences. Viewing dance as a universal language of movement that transcends boundaries of culture, class, and age, Cleo Parker Robinson Dance is committed to honoring diversity and inclusiveness throughout the global community.

RAINDANCE Cleo Parker Robinson Dance World Premiere 1984

Milton Myers, former artistic director of the Joyce Trisler Dance Company, and member of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Company, came to Denver in 1984 at the invitation of Cleo Parker Robinson to create this unique work solely for performance by the Cleo Parker Robinson Dance Ensemble. Inspired by the afternoon thunderstorms that would build each day over the Rockies, Myers created "Raindance" which has since become the Ensemble's signature work, symbolically uniting people of all ages and cultures through the dance. This work has been performed all over the world - from Masai villages to the world's greatest performance venues.

FOUR WOMEN Cleo Parker Robinson Dance World Premiere 1972

Written by jazz singer, composer, pianist and arranger Nina Simone, "Four Women" was released on the 1966 album "Wild Is the Wind". It tells the story of four African American women, each representing an African American stereotype in society.

Thulani Davis of The Village Voice called the song "an instantly accessible analysis of the damning legacy of slavery, that made iconic the real women we knew and would become."

The MOVE/ment World Premiere 2019

This incredible opportunity brings together a diversity of dancers, in both culture and genre, creating a work reflective of these powerful times in our community and the world. The arts have always been a powerful catalyst for positive social transformation. My challenge, as the choreographer, has been to awaken my personal memories of the Civil Rights Movement, while finding new ways for the dancers to develop their own voices, in recognition of social change that is yet to come. When my Ensemble performed in Montgomery, AL in commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of Dr. King's assassination, I was inspired by his words "We have no other choice but to keep moving with determination. We've gone too far now to turn back. We can change the world with non-violence."

CLEO PARKER ROBINSON leads the renowned 55-year-old Denver-based dance arts institution encompassing five operational pillars at a 50,000 square-foot creative campus of historic and modern landmarks. Inside there are two professional and two student ensembles, the CPRD Academy, Arts-In-Education and Arts-In-Wellness outreach programs, and CPRD facilities rentals supporting arts development for 30 groups.

Ms. Parker Robinson's recognitions span local to international work in dance and educational outreach from corporate, civic, community, and artistic entities. As a master teacher/choreographer and cultural ambassador, she and the CPRD Ensemble toured 40 countries throughout Europe, Asia, and the Caribbean, Mexico, and Colombia. In 2025 she was a guest artist at Brazil's renowned Sacatar Institute.

Awards and honors began since founding CPRD: the 1971 Peabody Award, Colorado Governor's Award for Excellence (1974), Denver Mayor's Award (1979), induction into the Colorado Women's Hall of Fame (1989) and the Blacks in Colorado Hall of Fame

(1994). Recognized in Who's Who in America Colleges and Universities, she holds four Honorary Doctorates: University of Denver (1991); Colorado College (2003), Regis University (2008), and the University of Colorado at Boulder (2021). The International Association of Dance Medicine and Science inducted her in 2021.

At the federal level from 1999 to 2005, Ms. Parker Robinson served on NEA panels on Dance, Expansion Arts, Arts America, and Inter-Arts panels for the USIS, and for the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts. She served on the National Council on the Arts advisory panel to the NEA Chair for policy, programs, and grants.

In 1987, she and four founders established the International Association of Blacks in Dance; in 2023 IABD received the National Medal of the Arts from President Biden. In 1992, she co-founded National Bahamian Dance Company. In 2005, she received the Kennedy Center Medal of Honor in the "Masters of African American Choreographers" series. In 2011, she was named an Honorary Lifetime Trustee of the Denver Performing Arts Complex. In 2017, she received the highly prestigious Dance USA Honor Award. In 2018, the CPRD Academy created the BA in Dance program with Metropolitan State University; there in 2023 she was the Rachel B Noel Distinguished Visiting Lecturer. In January 2026, she accepted the Award of Merit in New York by the Association of Performing Arts Professionals.

Her philosophy of "One Spirit, Many Voices" carries her creative voice to the world community as an example of Peace, Love, and Respect.... for Everybody!!

WINIFRED R. HARRIS Associate Artistic Director. Ms. Harris currently serves as Associate Artist Director for Cleo Parker Robinson Dance, honoring both the company's new and historical repertoire. She is co-creator of Dance for Schools, a codified curriculum for public education that is currently being taught in different high school programs throughout the United States. Ms. Harris has been described as "a visionary who creates art as conversation, viewing it as connective tissue to the world. A means to see beyond what we think of as limits". Her choreography is story-telling with a balance of technical prowess and expression.

She founded Winifred R. Harris Between Lines, a contemporary modern dance company that performed both nationally and internationally and was also a part of the Music Center on Tour. Inclusive of educational and performance components, the significance of the company's name is grounded both in movement and life perspectives. She also founded Your Souls Movement Performing Arts, in Denver. A life-long student of mind-body spirit, Harris is a certified Yoga instructor as well as a Life Mastery Consultant. As a dance artist, she had the opportunity to perform long before she began her formal training, as part of To My Father's House, choreographed by her first dance teacher Cleo Parker Robinson. Through that work she learned to love dance and advanced her training at such a rapid rate that she became a company member at a young age. She is grateful for the long list of dance luminaries with whom she has trained or performed their works, including the incredible faculty at California Institute of the Arts. Harris was also a member of Dallas Black Dance Theater, where she headed the professional dance division. Subsequently, she traveled to New York, working with an array of companies. She later returned to California where she performed with different companies and music artists, and for industry events and film projects. Her passion for choreography and her connection to the wonders and concerns of our society helped birth the artist she is continually becoming.

Her teaching career spans residencies with the California University system: Long Beach, Northridge, and Los Angeles, the Orange County Performing Arts High School, the Los Angeles Music Center teaching division, Reykjavík Iceland, and London England. She continued choreographing for her company, as well as musicals, stage plays, fashion shows and other dance companies. Motivated by engagement and purpose in the choreographic space that engages the heart and mind, Harris spent time teaching within shelters for women and children, engaging them in the art of dance, helping strengthen their voice in the world. She was also part of The Heart Project, a special engagement for youth in a critical place within their lives, either being released or on their way to lock-up facilities. This purpose-driven work was awarded with the Mayor's Award for Community Engagement.

Along with a nomination for the Lester Horton Award, Harris is grateful to be a Legends of Dance award winner. Through her love of teaching and dance making, Ms. Harris is elated that she is able to train, and endeavors to inspire generations of dance artists to come.
