

Which home office deduction should you choose?

Built for business owners who want to maximize their tax deductions

---

1 Does Your Home Office Qualify?

Your office must meet all three IRS requirements:

- Exclusive use – Used only for business (not shared personal space)
  - Regular use – Used consistently for business activity
  - Principal place of business – Where you manage, admin, or run the business

2 Choose Your Deduction Method

You may choose one method per year. Use whichever gives you the larger benefit.

Option A: Standard Deduction Method

Fast, clean, minimal paperwork

- IRS allows $5 per square foot of office space
- Maximum 300 sq ft
- Maximum deduction: $1,500

Your calculation: Home office square footage: _____ sq ft × $5 = $_____ deduction

Best for:

- Smaller office spaces, business owners who want simplicity and minimal record-keeping

Option B: Itemized Deduction Method

More detail, often a larger deduction, 2 step formula

Step 1: Business-Use Percentage

Home office square footage ÷ Total home square footage = _____ % business use

Step 2: Eligible Home Expenses

Add up your home's total costs for:

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Utilities (electric, water, gas, internet) | <input type="checkbox"/> Homeowners or renters insurance |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Property taxes                             | <input type="checkbox"/> Mortgage interest or rent       |
| <input type="checkbox"/> General repairs & maintenance (whole-home) |  |

Note: Repairs that benefit only the office may be fully deductible.

Total annual home expenses x % Business use = $_____ deduction

Best for:

- Larger offices, higher home expenses, business owners aiming to maximize deductions

---

Next Steps:

- If the standard deduction is higher, tell your CPA or tax preparer when filing your taxes.
  - If itemized is higher, use the worksheet below for a compliant workflow. Provide that worksheet to your CPA or tax preparer to help maximize your allowable home office deduction. As always, all information should be accurate, truthful, and compliant with IRS guidelines. If you have questions or need clarification, reach out to Betterment Bookkeeping Services LLC—we're happy to help.
