

PRIVACY POLICY FOR WEBSITE OF ASHETON B. CALL, ATTORNEY AT LAW

This Privacy policy applies to the information that is collected from people who use this website. Information is collected in the following ways:

- 1) Directly from the user. For example, you may voluntarily submit a completed contact form, or you may choose to contact us directly via email. Personally identifiable information, including, but not limited to your name, address, phone number and email address is collected only when you chose to share it with us.
- 2) Through usage data. We use information that is not personally identifiable in order to manage this website. When you visit this website, information about your visit may be tracked, and stored on our web server. For example your internet service provider, internet protocol address, access location, date and time of visit, website pages viewed, searched on website, and browser/computer type may be collected. The purpose of collecting this information is primarily to analyze usage of the website, and to provide a good experience for the user. This website uses cookies to store and track information about your activity at this website, which is a common practice. Use of this website is your acceptance of cookies. If you do not wish to receive cookies, you may adjust your browser settings accordingly, keeping in mind that certain website features may not function properly when cookies are not accepted.

We do not sell, rent or lease your user data, or personally identifiable information to third parties. We may share information only with our agents, website vendors, and contractors in connection with those relationships. This firm may disclose personal information upon the good faith belief that it required by law, or necessary to protect its legal interests. We care about your privacy, and take reasonable security measures to help protect your personally identifiable information from unauthorized access. However, it does not guarantee that these measures will, in fact, protect against all efforts to gain unauthorized access.