Matthew Groppi

Matthew Groppi is a Milwaukee native and graduated from Waukesha North High School in 2001. Groppi attended UW-Waukesha beginning in the fall of 2001 and enlisted in the US Army Reserves in 2002. Groppi was assigned to the 330th Military Police Detachment in Sheboygan, Wisconsin and deployed with the 330th to Mosul Iraq in 2004. During the deployment, Groppi was injured in a suicide vehicle bomb attack that also killed two soldiers in his unit. Groppi received a Purple Heart for his injuries and also received an Army Commendation Medal with Valor. Groppi was then able to continue his education after the deployment at UW-Waukesha where he graduated with an Associates of Arts and Sciences in 2005. Groppi then transferred to UW-Stevens Point in 2005 to pursue a bachelor degree in Natural Resource Management with the ultimate goal of getting hired as a Conservation Warden for the Wisconsin DNR.

Groppi attended UWSP from 2005-2007, and was hired as a Conservation Warden in 2008. Groppi was still in active service for the US Army Reserves and the unit was again called to active duty in 2008. The unit deployed to Bagram, Afghanistan this time and was responsible for law enforcement operations and customs enforcement at Bagram. These duties included education, enforcement, and training related to endangered species protection by enforcement of the Convention on International Trade of Endangered Species (CITES). While in Afghanistan, Groppi was also able to partner with the New Zealand Army and was able to attend the dedication ceremony for Afghanistan's First National Park.

Groppi returned home from Afghanistan in 2009 and completed his training as a Conservation Warden in 2010. Groppi was also honorably discharged from military service in 2010. Groppi went back to school in 2015 to pursue a graduate degree at Concordia University and graduated in 2017 with a Master of Science in Organizational Leadership and Administration. In 2020, Groppi revised his capstone paper related to law enforcement field training (Titled: Recruit conservation warden field training: A qualitative analysis of the San Jose Police Department Field Training Model applied to natural resource law enforcement) and this year it was published in the International Journal of Police Science and Management.

Groppi still works as a Conservation Warden and is assigned to the La Crosse office. As a conservation warden, Groppi is responsible for enforcing all the laws related to the environment, natural resources, fish and wildlife, and outdoor recreation including fishing, hunting, trapping, recreational vehicles (boats, snowmobiles, ATVs/UTVs). While there is no "typical day" as a conservation warden, Groppi regularly spends time patrolling the Mississippi River and the bluffs of La Crosse County.

Debra Zindler graduated in 1986 from the University of Wisconsin-Waukesha with an Associate of Science Degree. She went on to complete her BA and MA degrees at UW-Milwaukee.

As Creative Director/Co-Owner of z2, an award-winning marketing and branding agency in Waukesha, she leads a team of 18, working with clients including Notre Dame, Marriott, and Generac.

Debra founded z2 in 2003 with her business partner, Cory Zimmermann. Starting their business in a small basement in Delafield, z2 was literally just "2." Six months later they landed a multi-state project for Roundy's and hired their first employee. z2 has grown steadily ever since and today the creative agency includes designers, copywriters, videographers, photographers, public relations, social media and marketing strategists. The unique z2 office features an in-house photo studio, sound stage, recording studio, three video editing suites, and a design suite.

In 2001, z2 was named one of MMAC's Future 50 companies. In 2015, it was named one of Wisconsin's "Top Ten Places to Work for Young Professionals." And recently, the z2 office was named one of the "coolest" in Milwaukee.

As one of z2's principals and an Emmy-nominated producer, Deb works with the creative team to define and translate brand messaging and develop strategic marketing plans.

Before z2, Debra started her career as Public Relations Coordinator for the Milwaukee Public Museum where she went on to become Vice President of Marketing and Public Relations at the age of 25. She also worked as Director of Marketing for 620 WTMJ Radio and Public Relations Specialist for the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Debra is married to Robert Molsbee who she met at UW-Waukesha. They have a beautiful daughter, Mei Lin, and an adorable Westie, Max.

He is Professor of Applied Seismology in the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering and Department of Earth and Planetary Science, University of California at Berkeley (2001-Present.) His bio describes his interests and activities: "My principal areas of research are in oil and gas reservoir geophysics and multichannel signal processing. Most of my early work was in borehole geophysics. Over the course of my career at Berkeley, I have broadened my research interests substantially. I have supervised students and published in a wide variety of subjects including near-surface geophysics, anisotropic imaging of borehole and surface seismic data, and wave propagation simulation. One of my current research activities is "amplitude-friendly" processing and imaging. I am particularly interested in how to unravel the amplitude-unfriendly effects of the utilization of wave propagation simulation in heterogeneous, anisotropic, viscoelastic media, and seismic processing from "cradle" to "grave." I am also very active in Machine Learning as applied to oil and gas problems. All my students need a fundamental understanding of signal processing, wave propagation, crustal geology, and all the basic math and science that goes with this. At Berkeley, I have taught graduate courses in Digital Signal Processing and Applied Seismology to geophysicists, geologists, civil engineers and mechanical engineers.
