The word pitch refers to the mental representation an organism has of the fundamental frequency of a sound. That is, pitch is a purely psychological phenomenon related to the frequency of vibrating air molecules. By "psychological," I mean that it is entirely in our heads, not in the world-out-there; it is the end product of a chain of mental events that gives rise to an entirely subjective, internal mental representation or quality. Sound waves—molecules of air vibrating at various frequencies—do not themselves have pitch. Their motion and oscillations can be measured, but it takes a human (or animal) brain to map them to that internal quality we call pitch.

We perceive color in a similar way, and it was Isaac Newton who first realized this. (Newton, of course, is known as the discoverer of the theory of gravity, and the inventor, along with Leibniz, of calculus. Like Einstein, Newton was a very poor student, and his teachers often complained of his inattentiveness. Ultimately, Newton was kicked out of school.)

Newton was the first to point out that light is colorless, and that consequently color has to occur inside our brains. He wrote, "The waves themselves are not colored." Since his time, we have learned that light waves are characterized by different frequencies of oscillation, and when they impinge on the retina of an observer, they set off a chain of neurochemical events, the end product of which is an internal mental image that we call color. The essential point here is: What we perceive as color is not made up of color. Although an apple may appear red, its atoms are not themselves red. And similarly, as the philosopher Daniel Dennett points out, heat is not made up of tiny hot things.

A bowl of pudding only has taste when I put it in my mouth—when it is in contact with my tongue. It doesn't have taste or flavor sitting in my fridge, only the potential. Similarly, the walls in my kitchen are not "white" when I leave the room. They still have paint on them, of course, but color only occurs when they interact with my eyes.

The Head and the Heart

Then the mother of the murdered boy rose, turned to you, and said, "You exist. You matter. You have value. You have every right to wear your hoodie, to play your music as loud as you want. You have every right to be you. And no one should deter you from being you. You have to be you. And you can never be afraid to BE YOU.

ALBUM NOTES

On Children

Kahlil Gibran

Your children are not your children.
They are the sons and daughters of Life's longing for itself.
They come through you but not from you,
And though they are with you yet they belong not to you.

You may give them your love but not your thoughts,
For they have their own thoughts.
You may house their bodies but not their souls,
For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow,
which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams.
You may strive to be like them,
but seek not to make them like you.
For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday.

You are the bows from which your children
as living arrows are sent forth.
The archer sees the mark upon the path of the infinite,
and He bends you with His might
that His arrows may go swift and far.
Let your bending in the archer's hand be for gladness;
For even as He loves the arrow that flies,
so He loves also the bow that is stable.

I'm an angel, I'm a devil.
I am sometimes in between.
I'm as bad as it can get.
And good as it can be.
Sometimes I'm a million colours.
Sometimes I'm black and white.
I am all extremes.
Try to figure me out you never can.
There's so many things I am..

The constellations' circles back around
The cell embraced me once again
With shimmering lights that glimmered on the wall
And danced out to the very end

My eyes were gleaming in my eyes
By all smiles that blossomed the lines
That drew that shimmered in the night
And of a world of light and I

And with the shimmer the flames
The shimmering lights in my eyes
And the shimmering lights in my eyes
And the shimmering lights in my eyes

I found out by all that I had Thoughtful as I became
I will always be there
And with shimmering lights back to my

True self-care is not soft baths and chocolate cake. It is making the choice to build a life you don't need to regularly escape from.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON

He said, "Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. He is rich who owns the day, and no one owns the day who allows it to be invaded with fret and anxiety. Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities, no doubt crept in. Forget them as soon as you can, tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely, with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. This new day is too dear, with its hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on the yesterdays."

"The mystical path is the most difficult, demanding, dangerous, and intoxicating journey one can ever make. It takes one into the depths of the heart, into the abyss and endless love one finds there. It leads you from the known into the unknown, and then further, into the unknowable, into a darkness brighter than any light. Nothing can prepare you for the heart's journey, for the places it can take you, the depths and heights that are within you. So many times you think you are crazy, bewildered and lost."

"When you stop living by other people's judgments or expectations, you start doing what you need to do. In trying to decide what you want to do with your life, listen to your heart. The program is much farther out than you ever thought it was. I never thought I'd be a Yogi. Each of us has our own unique Karmic predicament; our own unique work to do. It's the expectations of your own mind that creates your own hell. When you get frustrated because something isn't the way you thought it would be, examine the way you thought, not just the thing that frustrates you. You'll see that a lot of your emotional suffering is created by your models of how you think the universe should be and your inability to allow it to be as it is.

How strange that the nature of life is change, yet the nature of human beings is to resist change. And how ironic that the difficult times we fear might ruin us are the very ones that can break us open and help us blossom into who we were meant to be.

RIGHT BRAIN / LEFT

In each of us two powers preside, one male, one female; and in the man's brain, the man predominates over the woman, and in the woman's brain, the woman predominates over the man. . . . If one is a man, still the woman part of the brain must have effect; and a woman also must have intercourse with the man in her. Coleridge perhaps means this when he said that a great mind is androgynous. It is when this fusion takes place that the mind is fully fertilised and uses all its faculties.
—Virginia Woolf

- Ram Dass

What the world needs now is love, sweet love. No not just for some but for everyone.

we walk towards union. We seek what cannot be found, for how can duality discover oneness? In the experience of union all duality disappears. There is neither wayfarer nor goal. This is the state of fanā, nihilation. The lover is lost in the Beloved. Only the sth consumed in the flames of love knows the true nature of fire, but who is left to know? At the very center of her own existence the lover discovers the truth of nonexistence. The manifest returns to the unmanifest and the cycle is completed.

Organizing my shit.
Found this lovely piece in my notes

"All any information or knowledge can ever do, is to justify your own views or beliefs on life. If you have not done the rigorous work of self discovery and self scrutiny, any and all ideas will only be seen through a shroud of personal experience and personal agenda, tainting the original source. Clarity is unattainable because others will only serve you as a mirror to your own projections. Before you dive into the realm of mastery of knowledge, one must be able to distance oneself from their idea of oneself and establish a blank slate onto which new ideas can be seen without attachment or prejudices. Only after you establish a foundation of peace and non-attachment can you inspect new ways to experience life that isn't only beneficial for you, but people from all walks of life"

Sonnet

First time he kissed me, he but only kissed
The fingers of this hand wherewith I write;
And ever since, it grew more clean and white,
Slow to world-greetings, quick with its "Oh, list!"
When the angels speak. A ring of amethyst
I could not wear here, plainer to my sight,
Than that first kiss. The second passed in height
The first, and sought the forehead, and half missed,
Half falling on the hair: O beyond need!
That was the christ of love, which love's own crown,
With sanctifying sweetness, did precede.
The third upon my lips was folded down
In perfect, purple state; since when, indeed,
I have been proud and said, "My love, my own."

WYOMING

DEVILS TOWER

Although Devils Tower has long been a prominent landmark in northeastern Wyoming, the origin of the name is still somewhat mysterious. One theory is that the tower's shape resembles a devil's head, and another is that it looks like a giant's foot sticking out of the ground. The name "Devils Tower" was first used in 1891 by a geologist named Hayden. The tower is a volcanic neck, a remnant of a volcano that once stood in the area. It is a National Natural Landmark and a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The tower is a popular destination for hikers and climbers. The tower is a symbol of Wyoming and is featured on the state flag.
