Aaliyah hit movie and soundtrack "Romeo Must Die" Producer, Eric Seats & The 333's (Jazz, R&B, Pop) will perform @ MMF.

Eric Seats is an accomplished drummer to the stars, single father of two daughters, mentor and now an Executive Producer of the Next Great Drummer.

The Next Great Drummer show will follow aspiring drummers in a U.S. tour, covering contestants as they compete for the title of "top drummer" in their city. Followed by a national then international competition for the world's "Next Great Drummer". The show was sponsored by Sam Ash Music and Spaun Drums. The producers are currently working with international producers to bring the event to venues across the country with plans already in the works for Brazil, Japan and Europe.

Eric is also part of Key Beats, Inc., an amazing team of of music/song writers and producers. This team was established in 1997 by both Rapture Stewart and Eric Seats. Together, they toured with artists as Montel Jordan. Rapture went on to be the music director for Timbaland, Missy Elliot, Aaliyah, Ginuwine and Playa. Timbaland noticed their production skills and signed them both to a publishing deal with Warner/Chappell. Eric's music experience both singularly and collectively have paid off in chart topping successes like, "Where My Girls At" for 702 in collaboration with Missy Elliot. This song paved the way for a management deal with Blackground Entertainment.
