

and many more ask that you stand up, be heard, and share what we have shared with you: There is no need for fear; fear is now to be vanquished by love. By working together, many more people will shift — through their loving actions and thought processes — into a higher-vibrating reality, as was always intended to be their destiny.

This is what you have always chosen for yourselves, as you have always led by example and encouraged others to release fear sufficiently to try out a new way based on love, compassion, and the willingness to walk with Spirit at every turn to bring about the highest-vibrating outcomes for all. And so it is.

Bridging the Gap Is a Collective Effort

The Lion People through Ellyn Dye

The breakdown phase of the great shift of the ages continues. Humanity cried out for assistance, and the breakdown sharply escalated throughout 2020 with the help of the humble coronavirus. This tiny, majestic being came through like a giant wrecking ball and did its job well: It brought the billions of busy humans on the planet to a standstill. It declared a cosmic time-out and assisted Saturn and Pluto (following their momentous conjunction in January) to bring in more light to brightly illuminate all the systems, institutions, organizations, and governments that are not working to support their constituents in a sustainable way. It didn't stop there: It brought focus to unsustainable aspects in people's personal lives as well. This illumination has been shocking and extremely painful for many, but it was a necessary part of the ongoing process of the shift. The old must be broken down, so the new can be built.

The past few years have been pivotal for this great shift, and the breakdown phase is finally winding down. The great Jupiter-Saturn conjunction on the winter solstice, December 21, 2020, at 00° Aquarius, ushers in a huge new beginning and a momentous, new cycle.

After the breakdown comes rebuilding, but first the rubble must be cleared out. This will not necessarily be an easy process, as there are many views on what needs to be done and what the directions and outcomes should be on many, many issues. There could be fits and starts, and trial and error, but great progress will be made. The tenor, tone, and progress of the entire year 2021 will depend much on how much people continue to resist or embrace change.

We're Not in Kansas Anymore!

The choice is yours: Change the easy way or change the hard way. While that may seem to be no choice at all, it is the only choice you have: At this point, there is no going back. And that's a good thing.

Resistance will lead to further destruction. Going with the flow will allow you to bridge the gap and rebuild in a more humanitarian way, and this will be supported by those Aquarian energies expanded by Jupiter. Whether you go with the flow or go kicking and screaming, you will still go the way of progress and evolution. It is only the process and timing that will be different, based on the amount of resistance. The combination of Jupiter and Saturn will help create new, strong foundations (Saturn) that are more benevolent and expansive (Jupiter) and humanitarian (Aquarius).

Bridging the gap is the theme for 2021, and any efforts toward bridging gaps personally, nationally, and globally will be greatly assisted by planetary energies. During the past year, all the gaps became apparent. In the outer world, there are gaps between the will of the people and the intentions of politicians. There are income gaps — huge gaps between the haves and have-nots — from those supported by the economic engines and to those who are not. There are gaps in housing and food availability, the application of justice and policing, health care and coverage, and basic Wi-Fi and other services for students. There are also gaps between the different realities that people believe in and subscribe to, between those of differing political parties, and between people's hopes and dreams and their reality. As painful as it has been for many, this is crucial information for moving forward.

Many of those gaps will be bridged and addressed by those who make policy decisions. They, too, have a choice in 2021 to change the easy way or the hard way. They can create further destruction or begin bridging the gap(s) and rebuilding. There is still a push-pull between the old Piscean modes of expression and the new Aquarian imperatives. Many cling desperately to the old ways and power structures that no longer work.

The potential is ripe for great strides to be taken and sweeping changes toward the greater good on all levels and in all aspects of life, including massive shifts in technology, the economy, education, medicine, agriculture and food, energy, manufacturing, and the role of government and its associated institutions. There is a huge opportunity to begin anew, rewrite the script, and become more humanitarian.

While this applies to governments and institutions around the world, it particularly applies to the United States, because it is still undergoing the effects and demands of its first Pluto return (Pluto returning to its position at the founding of the country). In November, the people of the U.S. made choices in electing leaders at the national and local level, and those elected officials will shape the policies and responses at those levels based on where they fall on the push-pull spectrum of resisting or embracing change. There is a grand opportunity in 2021 to move closer to fulfilling the promise and intentions of the great founding documents and vision for the country.

The Great Shift Is an Inside Job

Do not despair if your "side" didn't win! The real story is not about who was or was not elected but who the leaders are. The top-down hierarchy is the way of the outgoing Piscean Age. The essential part of the great shift of the ages is happening much closer to home: It happens one heart and mind at a time. This is a colossal revolution, but this time it is a revolution of consciousness.

You can see it in the massive worldwide protests, as situations that had been tolerated in the past have become intolerable, and there are relentless demands for change. Do not confuse the few bad actors and opportunists who create violence and destruction with the millions who are peacefully protesting against brutality and injustice. The protests will continue until meaningful changes come about because they are strongly supported by the incoming Aquarian energies.

The essential gaps to be addressed are up close and personal. During the trials and tribulations of 2020 — the cosmic time-out — people were forced out of their routines and autopilot and given the opportunity to pause, breathe, and reassess everything in their lives. Through much trauma, drama, pain, and loss, everyone has had the opportunity to review relationships, jobs, and work, housing and living conditions, financial resources and management, and self-care. Stark contrasts have been revealed between the ideal and reality, and now in 2021 with that 20/20 vision, there is a huge opportunity to boldly step forward and revise, rebuild, and create a life that is more supportive, sustainable, and, yes, more peaceful, joyful, and fulfilling.

What gaps did you discover during your cosmic time-out? Throughout 2021, all your efforts to bridge those gaps will be greatly assisted and rewarded. If immediate physically challenging gaps present themselves, such as severe income or food scarcity gaps, those must be addressed first with creativity and ingenuity. Many are offered the opportunity to release the illusion of control, to surrender and allow vulnerability, and to ask for and receive assistance. When others are allowed to help and to be of service, it nourishes the soul of the giver and receiver.

Surrender is often heartbreakingly hard, but it opens the door to miracles! It strips resistance away. Surrender is not "giving up," as so many people fear. It is finally releasing the illusion of control — that one can do it all alone and without help — with the individual's limited perspective, understanding, and resources. It can be as simple as saying, "Maybe there is a solution here that I simply can't see." Surrender turns over control to a higher power, and that's when innumerable unforeseen answers, options, and possibilities arrive. Once the ego sting is removed, the heart is grateful for this new understanding, and one's life can improve rapidly.

Other Gaps That Need to Be Bridged

Is there a gap between the work you desire and what you have, the relationships you desire and those you have, or the home you desire and what you manifested? If you identify your desires and take concrete steps to bridge the gaps between your ideal and what you have manifested, you will be greatly assisted in 2021. There will be wind beneath your wings if you will only dare to dream big and fly.

Other gaps are less immediate and concrete and more ephemeral, but they are equally important in their own way. Can you bridge the gap between self-loathing — which has been taught to too many for too long — and self-love? Can you respect yourself, create good boundaries, take good care of your body, and walk away from toxic relationships and situations?

What about bridging the gap between the mask you present to the world — the persona and façade, not the cloth mask — and your authentic self? Can you embrace and love all the parts of yourself, including those you may not particularly like, while knowing that you are a walking, breathing part of God and greatly beloved? Can you put down the burden of the false-self and show your true self to the world?

Can you bridge the gap between fear and hate and love? Fear is the base for everything that is unsustainable in the world — all the discord and disharmony. All the gaps. Hate is based on fear of the other, fear of the unknown, and fear of lack. Fear also cuts you off from higher guidance and steals your peace.

How about bridging the gap between “us” and “them”— regardless of whether the other is defined by race, culture, religion, gender, socioeconomic status, or political party? Can you see that they want the very same things in life that you do, that they also are walking expressions of God and just as beloved as you are, but they are merely having different experiences here on planet Earth?

Can you bridge the gap between toxic competition and collaboration, learning to work with others toward a common goal of supporting everyone? Can you recognize that helping others helps, rather than hinders, you and that collaborating fosters new approaches and solutions?

Do you need to bridge the gap between isolation and community? There will still be challenges for many who feel isolated during 2021, but there are always opportunities to reach out to others. Helping others is one of the best ways to pull out of depression and despair — through empowerment, action, and selflessness.

Can you bridge the gap between your dreams and your current life? Let go of any past failures and limitations, and start to think outside the box.

The energies of 2021 are ripe with potential, and it will take vision, creativity, action, and determination to bridge all these gaps. In 2021 life will be what you make it as long as you can release the past and embrace the future. Focusing on your own life instead of what others are doing, places you firmly on the path to creating the life you want and bridging the most important gap of all: the gap between heaven and Earth!
